Dear Recorder:—One year ago we were leaving the green hills of our native Carolina and beginning our long journey towards the setting sun. This morning I stood on an old mud wall in the south side of this city, talking with a Chinaman, an old man who eagerly listened to the gospel, and asked questions like a child. It was near the ruins of an old temple. The roof had partly fallen in and the side wall was down in one place, and within were the dismantled broken idols standing silent and weird in the midst of ruins they were powerless to prevent. I pointed to the broken images, and said to the old man, you see they cannot save you, nor any one. As I talked trying to explain about the true God and forgiveness of sins through Christ, how He hears us and loves us and wants us to have everlasting peace and happiness, the man seemed much interested. By that time a crowd had gathered, and I had a chance to speak to quite a number. Before I left the old man seemed very earnest in wanting to know how to pray. I left, after talking about an hour, with a thankful feeling in my heart that God had permitted me to be able to tell the gospel, at least some of it, to those who have never heard it. And what a gospel it is! How full and powerful. I feel that the gospel will be better received among the Chinaman who are hopeful subjects of being saved if we register the same vow that Paul did when he said, "I have determined to know nothing among you save Christ and him crucified." A Chinaman when you once can really approach him will respond to personal appeals of friendship and kindness as quickly as any one. I have met several who have made me love them and I have longed for their salvation. The gospel and the pure principles of the Bible are the very things they least understand, because they never have thought or felt or lived along that line, so our point of contact with them is precisely where they least understand us.

We missionaries of Western Shantung are at this writing in no way disturbed by the war, and there are no indications that we shall be. I have a passport, and I think most every one has. The last news we had here was to the effect that the Japanese had driven the Chinese out of Corea, and have invaded Manchuria, the home of the present Imperial family of china. It is said that the families of the missionaries and merchants in Pekin and Tieu Tsiu have gone on board the ships. It is thought the Japanese meditate an attack on Peking, the capital. Any one who knows the Chinese character may justly fear that the Japanese will succeed in their undertaking. The Japanese stand for modern advancement, and the Chinese stand for the most corrupt government and the deadest civilization the world has ever seen, I reckon. One can but shudder at contemplating the effect, especially on Corea, if China should be victorious.

Meantime we pray that an increased number of missionaries may come to take advantage of the open doors which are sure to be the outcome of these disturbances.

Truly, W. E. CROCKER.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

TO MANY inquiries, coming especially from people who are unacquainted with Baptist history, as to what action the Legislature is going to take with reference to State-aid to higher education, and as to what the Baptists are proposing to do, there can be but answer: The Baptists are maintaining and will continue to maintain their advocacy of the principle for which they have been standing so ardently, and for which the most of the people of North Carolina stand with them. Baptists, having an enduring principle, can afford to stand for it, holding themselves above wire-pulling and lobbying.

We cannot say what the Legislature will do, but frankness compels us to say that we believe a majority in either House are opposed to State aid. We trust the members of the Assembly know what the people expect of them, about as well as any man or set of men.

THERE are rich comparisons of the Baptist and Pedobaptist churches in the continued discussion of the "Divine Origin of Baptist Churches." One by one the arguments for our churches are mustered and the other denominations are uncovered.

The references to history, the founders of other sects, and the exposure of the silly accusation that Roger Williams is the head of American Baptists, are especially noteworthy.

Our people are remarkably ignorant of the early history of their predecessors in the faith both in America and Europe. They are not unacquainted, however, with the first Baptists. These papers serve to fill up the gap; and when they shall have been supplemented with a series of historical papers, as they probably will be, the work from a historical standpoint will be complete.

In the next paper it will be shown that Baptists are the true successors of the Apostles in faith, practice and life.

IN his article, "Christian vs. State Education," President Kilgo of Trinity College ably presents the Christian's view of this important antithesis.

Defenders of State colleges have frequent recourse to the charge that Christian institutions are narrow, sectarian, bigoted, and entirely incapable of that breadth of view that should be offered young men or women. President Kilgo properly says "this accusation is not only false, but entirely gratuitous." It is indeed a bold accusation, not in any sense an argument. The reader is probably acquainted with this mode of debate.

Moreover, the question offers itself, if State colleges are broad enough not to inculcate any religion, how can they fail to be narrow enough to spread prejudice against religion, and inculcate the narrowness of agnosticism, atheism or infidelity? A writer has noted that a sectarianism of infidelity is somewhat more to be feared than any Christian sectarianism.

If the State schools attempt to be so broad as to stand for Christianity, without defining that term, they produce a shallow, watery conception of Christianity that cannot last. It has also been pointed out that it is unconstitutional and unwise for a State to attempt to inculcate any religion, whether weak and watery or pronounced and aggressive. Such attempts help either one particular sect or add to the followers of agnosticism.

President Kilgo is right in the statement that the simple and clear original difference between State and Christian colleges is that the former represents a constitution, the latter represents Christ. Parents may take their choice. "But the State can teach morality," some one says. "Yes," says President Kilgo, "but only as a cheap police regulation." Is there any choice between Christianity and morality? "Christ proposes repentance, faith, regeneration, perfection and glorification. The State proposes a peaceable money-maker."

The article closes with the following:

"It is to the Christian college the world must look for the broadest ideas of humanity and life, and Christian education is the only hope of universal civilization, as Christ alone has projected a world wide gospel. State education is national bigotry and exclusive sympathies; Christian education is along the lines of common brotherhood, and develops a spirit antagonistic to all bigotry and narrowness."

Can we not get every pastor to canvass, or get him to secure some one to canvass his church for the RECORDER? Many have helped us. We have made arrangements that warrant us in promising that the RECORDER will be unusually helpful the coming year.

THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF BAPTIST CHURCHES.—NO. 2.

The origin of Baptist churches, was it from heaven, or of men? If from heaven, why are not all pious people Baptists? If of men, why does not some one tell us what men? What man or what set of men founded this powerful and peculiar denomination? We ask in the language of Agur, "What is his name, and what is his son's name, if thou canst tell?" It is no difficult task to associate names, dates, and historical circumstances, with the origin of all other denominations; for we have the histories and biographies of their popes, their Luthers, Calvins, Henrys, Wesleys, and Campbells. How different when one reviews Baptist history! No such name is the cynosure of our people. We have no such biographies circulated in our churches, no such heroes of our faith, no such founders of our system, to whom in filial devotion we cry, "Abba, father!" We call no man master; and if our faith is connected with men, it is with inspired men. If we look to any human standards, it is only those who were commissioned to teach with divine authority; while we trace our origin only to that divine plan—the man Christ Jesus.

The spirit that would accord to Roger Williams the honor of founding the Baptists, is so unhistorical as to need no refutation here; for, to ascribe the rise of the denomination to Roger Williams because he began the first Baptist interest in America, would be as illogical as to trace the descent of the Italians in the United States to Christopher Columbus because he was the first practical discoverer of America. Italy was back of Columbus; the Baptists of Germany, England, and the Alps, were back of Williams.

Many persons, nevertheless, seem to think that Baptists have no history, and just sprang up so. Others would believe that they, like Pedobaptists, sprang up from the Romish hierarchy, thus again evincing the unhistorical spirit in making the Catholics the oldest church. But historians are coming more and more to discover that the history of New Testament Christianity does not flow in the fetid channel of Romish priestcraft. We quote a few authorities—none of them Baptists; and if some of them have been often quoted, it is due to their excellence as historians.

Sir Isaac Newton: "The Baptists are the only people that never symbolized with Popery."

Wm. H. Hall, London: "They appear supported by history in considering themselves the descendants of the Waldenses, who were so grievously oppressed and persecuted by the despotic heads of the Romish hierarchy."

President Edwards: "There was a people called the Waldenses, who lived separate from all the rest of the world, and constantly bore a testimony against the church of Rome through all this dark time. . . . There (Vaudois) this people lived for many ages, in a state of separation from all the world, having very little to do with any other people. And there they served God in the ancient purity of his worship, and never submitted to the church of Rome. . . . Their persecutors could not by all their cruelties extirpate the church of God; so fulfilling his word, that the gates of hell should not prevail against it."

John Cumming, London: "The Paulicians protested faithfully in the east; and the Waldenses, amid the fastnesses and caves of the Cottian Alps, withstood the influx of superstition and error for centuries, and preserved their faith, like their own Alpine Snows, in its purity and beauty."

Mosheim: "The true origin of that sect which acquired the name of Anabaptists, by their administering anew the rite of baptism to those who came over to their communion, and derived that of Mennonites from that famous man to whom they owe the greatest part of their present felicity, is hid in the remote depths of antiquity, and is, consequently, extremely difficult to be ascertained."

Cardinal Hosius, President of the Council of Trent, A. D. 1550: "If the truth of religion were to be judged of by the readiness and cheerfulness which a man of any sect shows in suffering, then the opinion and persuasion of no sect can be truer and surer than that of Anabaptists (Baptists) since there have been none, for these twelve hundred years past, that have been more generally punished, or that have more cheerfully and steadfastly undergone, and even offered themselves to, the most cruel sorts of punishments, than these people."

Zwingle, co-laborer of Calvin: "The institution of Anabaptism is no novelty, but for thirteen hundred years has caused great disturbance in the church, and has acquired such a strength, that the attempt in this age to contend with it appeared futile for a time."

Thus the testimony of their persecutors gives to Baptists a place in the third and fourth centuries. Now hear the conclusion of the whole matter in the unimpeachable witness of Dr. Ypeig, Professor of Theology at the University of Groningen, and Dr. J. J. Dermont, chaplain to the King of Holland, members of the Dutch Reformed Church. These scholars having been requested by their sovereign to investigate the claims of the Dutch Baptists, give this testimony:

"We have now seen that the Baptists, who were formerly called Anabaptists, and in later times Mennonites, were the original Waldenses, and who have long in the history of the Church received the honor of that origin. On this account, the Baptists may be considered as the only Christian community which has stood since the days of the Apostles; and as a Christian society which has preserved pure the doctrines of the gospel in all the ages."

Back to those early Baptists—James, John, Peter, Paul! Back to the Founder of Baptists—Jesus Christ! "Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!"

FOR GOD AND MAN.

The reader will note in another column a call for a temperance mass meeting. There may be some who desire to know why this meeting is called. Every citizen in the State ought to be interested in the object of the meeting.

An effort is on foot to extirpate the saloon. A bill has been framed and printed, and is now being circulated, with this object in view. We know the author of this document; he is a distinguished jurist, not in any sense a crank. He is not a prohibitionist for office, nor does he deal in wild and fiery hyperbole. He is practical and conservative.

The bill is modeled after the Mississippi temperance law. North Carolina has the advantage of the experience of Maine, Kansas, Mississippi and South Carolina in this matter; and this bill may be said to have the better features of the laws of those States and to be free from objectionable provisions of their laws.

By this bill, "if a majority of the qualified voters in any township, or city, town or village petition the board of county commissioners or the authorities of the municipality against the granting of license to retail liquors, such license shall not be granted; nor shall a license be granted to any person to retail liquors in less quantities than one gallon, unless the applicant shall first produce a petition for the issuance of such license, recommending the applicant to be of good reputation, and a sober and suitable person, * * * which petition shall be signed by a majority, exclusive of those who may sign a counter petition, of the qualified voters resident in the district where the liquors are intended to be sold." This is the heart of the document. It also requires that the names of the petitioners for license be published, and, license having been gained by petition, that the dealer give bond to keep an orderly place, before the license is issued. Licenses last only a year and are not transferable. Violation of the law forfeits license. A license may be revoked, if the authorities deem a dealer unfit. Debt for liquor not collectable. Liquor cannot be sold to minors, Indians or habitual drunkards. Any candidate who uses liquor for political purposes, is liable to indictment. Card playing and dice throwing, billiards, pool, etc., prohibited in saloons. There will be no screens in dram shops, and if carried on at all, the business must be conducted in the front part of buildings. There is provision against itinerant venders and importation of liquors by water-crafts or railway trains.

There is no greater evil than the whiskey evil; there is none so hard to contend with. Everybody recognizes the dreadfulness of it; but sentiment has yet to become strong enough to extirpate it.

This law is a beginning. It enables every community to protect itself; its presumptions are against the traffic. If there are people who object to it, let them reflect that it is at worst far better than the present law. This is no time to split hairs. Let us make the beginning. The evil cannot be eradicated in a day; but it will never be eradicated at all, unless we begin; and now is the time.

Every Christian ought—ought in the name of the religion that he professes—there is no higher obligation,—ought, in the name of the men and women and the youths of the State, for God's sake and for the State's, to petition for the enactment of this bill. A blank petition is printed on page 3.

If the Christians of the State do their duty now, this bill may become law. Some one in every community ought to see to it that as many people as possible petition for the measure as soon as possible.

IT IS unnecessary to state that these columns never contain any but worthy appeals for munificence; but we have been thinking lately that the frequency of special appeals is calculated to counteract their influence. It is but natural that people become so used to matters of this kind that they do not regard them at all; and while it is not probable that any one will think that any appeal is undeserving, there is danger that some may not look upon them as seriously as they should.

We have been thinking for several months of writing an editorial on the multiplicity of appeals. There is a problem here; and it demands long and prayerful study.

This week, for instance, we have it in our heart to urge with all possible power that our churches come to the relief of the Education Board; but we could not fail also to say what we can for the special Home Mission appeal. We are only too well aware of the Foreign Board's great need; we think the time is ripe to awaken an interest in the noble ministerial relief work; State Missions and Sunday schools are a constant source of our solicitude, being a most effective work, and one promising quick returns; and so on and on, the needs and appeals increase. We know that there are several other objects that have not been mentioned; but this is not because they are a jot less needy or worthy.

We determined not to mention this problem until we could offer a solution. And we believe it will be found in SYSTEMATIC GIVING. We have written on the subject frequently.

SYSTEMATIC GIVING means preaching the gospel of giving; means training and organization of givers; means earnest prayer for giving; means diffusion of information relative to the objects of giving. Anything spasmodic is weakening. The gospel of Christ is the gospel of giving, and it can be preached all the time.

....Wm. H. Atkinson, a faithful deacon, and the efficient and punctual clerk of the Fayetteville Baptist church, died at 11:20 A. M. January 11, and was buried last Sunday.

Bro. W. W. Trogdon informs us that despite vigorous efforts to pay for our church at Hope Mills, there is yet a debt of $200. Any help that may be rendered will be as bread cast upon the waters.

....The brethren will please bear with us in regard to marriages and obituaries. We will insert all we have on hand and all that may be sent us. Only a certain amount of space can be devoted to them each week.

....We noted last year the remarkable record of Bro. B. F. Faison of the Raleigh Tabernacle for punctual and regular church attendance. He has added another year to his world's record. He has not missed a Sunday from Sunday-school, in which he is an efficient and exemplary teacher, in fourteen and a half years. He has heard 724 sermons in the Tabernacle since 1886.

....Rev. J. H. Lamberth has taken up residence at Mt. Airy. Under his pastorate, we have no doubt but that the promise in the enterprising little mountain city will be fully developed.

....Dr. A. J. Rowland has resigned care of the Baltimore Franklin Square Church, having accepted the position of Secretary of the American Baptist Publication Society, resigned by Chas. H. Banes.

....We will be excused for suggesting that our subscribers preserve the articles now being published in the second column, second page of the RECORDER. We are sure they will be a constant source of strength.

....The Convention in Charlotte promised $500 towards the "New Orleans House" by March 1, 1895. Only forty-three days now remain. Cannot every pastor take a collection for this object at once? Who will help?

....Editor Eaton of the Western Recorder always writes strongly, soundly and to the point. He has just printed a ninety page tract entitled "The Faith of Baptists" dealing with "The Church," "Baptism" and the Lord's Supper. Price, 15 and 25 cents.

....Rev. Dr. J. B. Gambrell of Mercer University, Georgia, writes, speaking of the new Mercer University Preacher's school, "the great need in the South is a scripturally cultured membership." That's what we think and that's our especially aim this year.

....Pastor Porter sends good news from Morehead: "The work here is moving along nicely. Congregations increasing. Sunday-school prospering. Church united and encouraged. The new parsonage will soon be ready for occupancy. The Lord is blessing us, and we rejoice.

....Rev. C. A. G. Thomas is full of the fire of the Baptist fathers. He is fighting against every step towards Rome. His latest tract is "The Five Gems in America's Crown of Glory," published by request of the Jr. O. U. A. M. of Greensboro.

....The Lodge Weekly, Vol. 1, No. 1, is a neat and efficient paper devoted to Masonry, Odd Fellowship and Pythianism in North Carolina, published at Raleigh. The initial number is typographically beautiful, and its contents are interesting. Z. P. Smith is editor, and W. E. Faison business manager.

....The RECORDER enjoyed visits from many brethren who came to Raleigh last week to attend the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Masons. Revs. L. P. Gwaltney, A. N. Campbell, T. A. Pounds, T. T. Speight, and brethren Geo. W. Bland, Eldridge Lee, D. I. Watson and others were of the number.

....A hundred brethren said, "Reduce the price of The Arkansas Baptist to $1.50 and we can double the subscription list in our territory." Two months ago we yielded to the pressure, made a great sacrifice in doing so, and have heard from just one of the hundred. "Where are the ninety and nine?"—Arkansas Baptist.

....Rev. W. A. Smith, one of our most promising young pastors and efficient school men, and Miss Mary D. Cheek, daughter of Mr. W. J. A. Cheek of Chapel Hill, were married at Chapel Hill January 1st, 1895, Rev. Dr. J. L. Carroll officiating. Brother Smith graduated from Wake Forest in 1893. We wish the couple all happiness.

....Our Georgia brethren, rather the sisters, are dividing somewhat between the Board and the Gospel Mission. In the Index much space has been devoted to the subject. A Mrs. Wilson seems to have set up a separate organization, and one of the Woman's Mission monthlies was being used for the new movement. We trust it will all come right.

....With the RECORDER at fifty cents for nineteen weeks, running a series of articles especially designed to indoctrinate, there can be no excuse for weak memberships any longer. Remember we have an extra supply of last issue and this issue, in order that new subscribers may get the benefit of the entire series. If the money is not convenient, we will send the paper on any pastor's security.

....As for what Calvin said about baptism: don't mind about that. Paganism is too dark, the world too evil and the work of the church too pressing and wide for us to be spending our energies in keeping men out of the water or getting them into it.—John H. Boyd, in Charlotte Observer. This from the leading Presbyterian preacher of Charlotte, if not of the State, is good; arguments all gone, the question is boldly begged.

....Rev. James Lapsley, Presbyterian preacher at Waynesville, got out of arguments while discussing the mode of baptism in a recent sermon, and attacked the personal character of Bro. L. M. Welch, who has been superintendent of our Waynesville Sunday-school for twenty years. Mr. Lapsley will have to sustain his unworthy attack in court, which we hope will hold him closer to the whole truth than the average Pedobaptist pulpit does.

....A Frenchman is quoted as saying, "Italy is shaking off the yoke of Rome; you Americans are putting it on." It is a grave truth that the Roman Catholic church is exerting a dangerous influence in our affairs. It has its hands on the Indian schools; it grasps for the public schools; it is always hunting offices and favors. In this connection we beg to call attention to some relevant information in the Woman's Missionary columns.

....Pastor Weaver issued a tasteful new year address to his congregation. His church has large and promising work before it; mission points at Welch's, Jamestown and Bunker Hill; sunday schools are to be established. Rev. F. L. Fiddler is engaged in this work by the church. The High Point members raised $985 last year for church improvements and about $600 for other objects. Present membership 180, a gain of eighteen for the year. Eight candidates await baptism.

....The Mt. Zion church, Flat River Association, and Dr. R D Fleming of Warranton, have each sent five dollars for the publication of Rev. C. A. Jeykens' sermon on "The Lords Supper." This makes $42 50 towards the $100 needed for 25,000 copies of this sermon. Who next? Send the money to Dr. Durham, or name the number of copies you will take, and the price you will pay.

From Shanghai, China, the beloved Dr. Bryan writes, December 8, 1894: "We arrived in Shanghai Saturday, December 1, and are now happily and comfortably situated in our home. I send you two clippings on the war. Japan, so far, seem to be having her own way, but it is difficult to predict the future. We are so far removed from the seat of war that it affects us but little. Only a few missionaries have had to leave their fields.

....We must run up to seven thousand subscribers. We know we can, if you, pastors especially, but any reader who will, cooperate with us. It will build up any community for Baptists, if the series of articles that we have arranged can be disseminated among its residents, no one is too poor to pay fifty cents for the RECORDER from January 9th to May 15th. Begin subscriptions with January 9th, as not one of the articles should be missed.

....Rev. Mr. Pruett, of Olivet Baptist church, has been in Charlotte but a few months, but in that time he has won the affections of his people, doing a good work among them. They expressed their thought of him Thursday night in a pounding, which, to express it as he did, "was tremendously heavy." A lady in his congregation expressed her individual thought in a handsome watch.—Charlotte Observer.

....At the last Convention my name was placed on the Board of Missions and Sunday schools from the Green River Association. I wish to say to the Board through the RECORDER, that for good reasons, which I need not state, I respectfully decline to serve. I am always willing to serve my brethern, where I think it is for the greatest good, but I am so situatad as relates to the Board, that I would feel somewhat cramped to serve, so I hope they will place some other brother of the Association in my place.—M. M. Landrum.

....Rev. A. N. Campbell brought us a good number of subscribers last week, got ten up by his enterprising son, J. A., the principal of Buie's Creek Academy. Bro. Campbell was in good spirits, had none but good reports, and was expecting the Academy to enroll two hundred students this year. One hundred and seventy have already been enrolled. The academies like Bro. Campbell's are doing a mighty work in North Carolina. We would like to have a list of these institutions; and to that end their principals are requested to send us their names, number of students, and other information of interest.

....The RECORDER has pleasure in announcing that it has received the manuscript of the introductory sermon preached by Rev. T. J. Taylor before the late Convention, and that it will appear in these columns in the near future. We will also publish the sermon on Infant Baptism by Robertson of Scotland, which is said by many to be the ablest discussion of this subject extant. Other sermons that we may promise our readers are, one by Rev. C. S. Blackwell of Elizabeth city, and one by Rev. A. Cree. It is always a pleasure to the RECORDER to publish sermons from our North Carolina pastors; and we take this opportunity to suggest that more of them can be published if their authors will condense them; and, moreover, the probability is that they will do more good, if condensed.

....A letter from Brewerville, Liberia, West Africa, came to the RECORDER last week. It is dated November 29, and is from Bro. J. O. Hayes: "Dear Bro. Bailey—Our school vacated last week, until February 1895. The session was the most prosperous one in the history of the work. We have just organized a church in connection with the school. On the fourth Sabbath in September we baptized five candidates for the new church. Since that time a revival has been on, the result of which fifteen candidates are now waiting baptism, all of which are from among the heathen. Two of them are great warriors, leaders in the late war here. On the first Sabbath in September I had the pleasure to baptise eleven candidates for Zion Grove Baptist church at pastor the first Sabbath in August last. The Brewerville, of which I was installed as Providence Baptist Association convenes on the first Tuesday in December next with the St. Paul's church at Arthington.

Petition to General Assembly.

The General Assembly of the State of North Carolina is hereby respectfully petitioned by the undersigned to enact the bill, modeled after the temperance laws of Mississippi, "to be entitled an act to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors."

In the opinion of the undersigned it is of the highest importance that such a bill be passed by the present General Assembly.

This petition is sent in care of the representatives of this county, and they are earnestly requested to do whatever they can to accomplish the object of this petition.

(Signed) .....

(Date) .....County.

N. B. If there are two or more signers, the names can be put on a separate sheet, on which the petition may be pasted.

Petitions should be addressed to the Senator from your district, thus: "To the Senator from the ..... District, General Assembly, Raleigh, N. C." If sent to a member of the House, the member's name should be used on the envelope.

If the petitioners prefer, petitions may be sent to Hon. Geo. Burnham, Representative from Buncombe, who is a prohibitionist.

The Home Mission Board.

The Home Mission Board is passing through the most trying peroid of all its history.

In its efforts to sustain its work the Board finds its indebtedness increasing, until it is approaching a point where its exhausted credit can furnish no further help in supplementing the insufficient contributions of our churches.

"Retrench," says some one. That was suggested by our desire to disburden ourselves of labor and responsibility. We have tried it, and it wont work. The most urgent remonstrances have come back to us declaring that proposed reduction will paralize, if not destroy, promising work on which much time and money have been expended, and that they must not be made; that such a blunder would be a crime against the Master's cause and the multitudes perishing without Christ.

We have nearly four hundred missionaries in our employ. For the most part they are consecrated, self sacrificing men, enduring, with their families, unusual hardships and privations. Their small salaries scarcely procure the common necessities of life. To withdraw support from them would entail on many of them and their wives and children absolute suffering. Humanity forbids the reduction of these meagre sums. But to sustain them the Board must have speedy and liberal help.

While in these trying times unusual efforts have been made to help many of our State Boards, and about $25,000 have been contributed to pay the debt of our Foreign Mission Board, our Home Board has not shared in these extra contributions. We have never asked for special contributions in aid of our general work. We have sometimes solicited them for special objects, as for the houses of worship in New Orleans and Havana, but for general purposes we have always been content to rely upon the usual contributions of the churches. But we now urge that these contributions be as speedy and as liberal as possible.

We ask that every pastor will strive to increase the usual contribution of his people, not so much by enlarging amounts from those who are accustomed to give, as by increasing the number of givers

We must have Thirty Thousand Dollars by the last of April to meet the requirements of the present Conventional year. This sum will be divided as equitably as possible among the States, and the best endeavors will be made to secure it.

We shall have the co operation of our Vice-Presidents, of our denominational papers, of the corresponding secretaries of many of our State Boards, of many of our wisest and ablest brethren, and of the womens' societies of our churches. With such helpers, and the Divine blessing, we confidently expect this task will be completed by the meeting of the Convention in May.

I. T. TICHENOR

Oxford Notes.

Work upon our new church will be resumed at an early date; we expect soon to be within the Sunday-school room. When the church is completed we will have a main auditorium that will seat five hundred; and a Sunday school room that will seat two hundred and fifty, and which can be opened so as to make one room with the main auditorium; besides we will have an infant class room, and four other class rooms, and a pastor's study. I doubt whether there will be found in the State a better arranged church building.

We have only a small membership in Oxford, and many of them are young, and others are not financially strong. I doubt whether we have seventy-five contributing members, and yet we have paid nearly ten thousand dollars already to this work, and have a long, hard pull before us. I say this as a just commendation of the liberality of our struggling band. I take great pleasure in warmly thanking many friends through the RECORDER for their kind responses to such appeals as have been personally made to them.

OXFORD FEMALE SEMINARY.

It is very gratifying to note the prosperity of this Seminary. The patronage is nearly double that of last year. The course of study has been advanced, and the work has been excellent. The Society Hall has been refitted. The "Maggie Nutt" Missionary Society maintains interest in missions, and is a power for good among the students. All the departments of school work are in the hands of fine teachers.

One of the graduates of the music department not long since entered the senior class of the New England Conservatory of Music; and one of the graduates of the art department finished the twenty week's course in Cooper's Institute, New York, in ten weeks. Prof. Hobgood has the prospects of receiving quite a number of new students on January 15th, at which time they can enter with advantage. J. S. H.

Books, Books, Books.

"$50,000 worth of standard, miscellaneous and theological books. Many publications at half-price or less. We are overstocked and determined to reduce at whatever sacrifice. See some of our prices in our advertisement of this issue. Orders solicited. Catalogues furnished on application. Address, Baptist Book Concern, Louisville, Ky.

One of the best, i. e., most interesting, convenient and attractive of 1895 calendars, is one gotten out by the Overman Wheel Company, the famous bicycle makers of Chicopee Falls, Mass. It is a desk calendar, containing much wit and good advice. Price, ten cents.

We haven't got enough RECORDER readers in our church. Send me samples to distribute.—M. A. Tesh.

Love Letters.

Scores of them: more than I can even begin to quote from: they would fill the whole RECORDER if printed in full. Not sentimental effusion to be tied up with blue ribbons and laid away among rose leaves, but manly utterances of veneration and love for Wake Forest College. They come, for the most part in response to the circular letter which I am sending with blank notes to old students, so far as their addresses are known. From many states they come; from representatives of many annual classes, both graduates and undergraduates.

Not two of them are alike in the form of expression. All are alike in the breathing of tender regard for the Alma Mater.

Many send the notes filled out with the promise of liberal contributions. Some return the notes unfilled with expressions of regret which I am sure are genuinely sincere. Others ask to be allowed to retain the notes awhile, with the hope of doing better than is possible for them now.

One brother (who encloses his notes for a hundred dollars) says, "My poverty was never more oppressive than when you made your appeal for Wake Forest, I would that it were in my power to increase my subscription one hundred fold." Another writes, "You will find the notes enclosed and signed. I am sorry that the amount ($25) is so small. I am pressed financially now. It is painful to want to do liberal things when you cannot. May you be prospered in this arduous undertaking." And another, "I enclose the notes. Greatly do I rejoice in the prosperity of the College and hope that all the endowment needed may be secured. I may be able to pay all the notes at one time, but cannot say now." A Methodist brother writes, "I shall ever rejoice in a tender feeling for my old College and it will be a pleasure to me to do what I can to advance her interests and usefulness. I rejoice in the prosperity of Wake Forest." (I did not know he was a Methodist when I sent the notes). A manufacturer writes, "It is a matter of real regret with me that I am not in condition at this time to comply with your request. But I will say this to you: If business changes in my favor during 1895, I will cheerfully contribute to this worthy cause." A commercial traveller writes from Atlanta, "I have much love for the College and am greatly indebted to her for favors shown me. I hope in the future to be able to do more." A most useful pastor says, "I hope to do much more than is promised in my notes, but would not like to pledge it now. Success to you in this noble work" A more recent student writes, "It would be a joy to me to aid in this work but I think that it is my duty before doing so to pay some notes which I still owe to the College." One who was never at Wake Forest says, "I enclose my three notes (100 dollars). It is a real pleasure for me to aid in this work and I trust that it will be successful." Another writes, "I cannot let the opportunity pass without taking advantage of it. I return the notes filled and signed and dated the — day of this month—my birthday. On this, my birthday, I make an offering to the College for each year of my life. I wish that I could make it a hundred for each." A man who knows so well how to celebrate birthdays ought surely to live to a ripe old age. Bro. Blank says, "I had been trying to settle in my mind what amount I might be able to give to the Royall Chair and I am grateful to you for the blank notes which put the matter in better shape for me. * * * You will find the notes enclosed, filled out and signed."

To add more would weary the patience of your readers. These are only a sample. Perhaps I may be allowed to print more hereafter.

It may be doubted whether any work for a beneficient object was ever undertaken in North Carolina under more difficult conditions. But it is possible for us to succeed. We MUST succeed. Too much is at stake to allow us to entertain any thought of failure. But remember, brethren and sisters, that success can only come through practical co-operation and real sacrifices on the part of very many. CHARLES E. TAYLOR.

Wake Forest, N. C, Jan. 11, 1895.

P. S.—In the current number of the RECORDER the word "peace" is printed near the close of my article where I wrote "grace."

Kinston Notes.

It has been the custom of the Kinston Baptist church for many years, to call the pastor every year. The call is made at the monthly conference for October, so that the outgoing pastor may have time to look out for another pastorate and that the church may have time to look out for another pastor—in case a change is desired.

According to this custom, Bro. B. W. Spillman was chosen pastor, last autumn. And he entered upon his work here, at the regular time for our pastors to begin, the first Sunday in January.

Bro. Spillman's two sermons, morning and night, on last Sunday, were models. He pleased his congregation both as to matter and manner of presenting it. He is a terse, logical speaker—with a charming delivery. He speaks fluently and without notes, at least no evidence of the presence of notes is visible.

Our brother starts off under very favorable auspices; and we look forward to an active and prosperous campaign in the Lord's work.

The new church in this county, New Hope, thinks of calling Rev. J. D. Carroll to its pastorate. This church is located in a community where the pastors of the Kinston Baptist church have been preaching for nearly twenty years. Rev. J. K. Howell, we think, was the first who commenced there. In Parrott's school house near the church, have been heard the words of eternal life, also, from Revs. J. K. Faulkner, A. J. Hires and A. L. Stough.

Nearly two years ago, Rev T. J. Taylor held a meeting in our church here for about ten days. Several conversions resulted from his faithful preaching, and he is held in the very highest esteem by our people.

We hope that the State Mission Board will not forget the destitute places in the bounds of the Atlantic Baptist Association; especially since the Association has given up to the Board its control of this matter.

Jan. 10, 1895. ARACHEL

Dear Recorder:—Please allow me to say something about a work that I have very greatly enjoyed.

Last spring brother Durham wrote asking me to go to Aberdeen, a little town between Hamlet and Raleigh, and hold a meeting. I went Monday after the third Sunday in May. The fourth Sunday Bro. Durham came and the Aberdeen Baptist church was organized with twenty-three members. I consented to give them a week night appointment once a month for the remainder of the year.

Very pleasant have been my monthly visits to the faithful little band. The church has been in a state of revival ever since its organization. At every meeting persons have asked for the prayers of Christian people, and the baptismal waters have been disturbed frequently during the year. The membership has about doubled since the organization. They have a live Sunday-school and a very active Woman's Mission Society. The brethren are all poor but they have "a mind to work." They have bought a lot and paid for it, and have a beautiful little church building well under way. They hope to finish the church, pay for it and have it dedicated on the fourth Sunday in May, 1895, just one year after the organization of the church. They have the house hulled in and every cent is paid so far.

This is the only church that I have ever known which is absolutely free from "dead heads." Every member, large and small, contributes monthly to church expenses and the objects of the Convention. May they ever so continue.

I made my last visit to them last week. Rev. C. J. F. Anderson of Carthage will preach for them the fourth Sunday in each month. I think I never enjoyed a work so much as that at Aberdeen, and it is with peculiar sadness that I lay it down. God bless the little church and make it a power for good.

I have not time to day to write of the work in the Pee Dee Association.

Laurinburg was without preaching last year. They did the remarkable thing of paying a $300 church debt and of raising more than their apportionment without a pastor They are so situated that they could not connect with any other field, and so Lillesville did the magnanimous thing of giving up their pastor for one Sunday in the month that Laurinburg might be supplied, until some better arrangement can be made. Notwithstanding the "hard times" our association made a better fiscal showing last year than ever before. We look hopefully to the future. Yours,

LIVINGSTON JOHNSON.

S. B. T. Seminary.

Dear Recorder:—We are in the midst of snow and examinations. The weather is cold and the examinations are hard but we are all well and enjoying our work. We were sorry Bro. Porter had to leave. The circumstances were such that he could not remain with us.

The North Carolina boys had a meeting at the beginning of the new year to express our common interest in the work at home and the plans for increasing the work of Wake Forest. It was a real pleasure to see the deep interest manifested in the college by the Wake Forest men.

There is an effort being made to get every Wake Forest man in this State to give something for the endowment. We feel like joining in the sentiment expressed by the President of the Board of Trustees of the college a few years ago when he said "if the Baptist of North Carolina would only follow Dr. Taylor he would lead them to success."

Dr. Broadus will leave in a few days to attend the Florida State Convention. He will spend a few weeks in Florida to rest and gain strength for the spring work. He has not been very well this winter but is much improved. We are all anxious to see him strong again. At the missionary meeting on last Tuesday the question of Indian missions was discussed. Bro. J. W. Willard read a paper which called forth the compliments of both professors and students. And I would say in this connection that now is a good time for some of our North Carolina churches to secure the North Carolina men who expect to complete their work here in June, before some other State gets them.

Brethren Millard, Cullum, Blalock and Croom, expect to finish their work here in June and why not get them back to North Carolina before some other State secures them?

As these four go out there ought to be as many more to come here to take their places.

The work here grows each year and greater opportunities are given to the young men as the demands upon them increase.

There are more men here this year than ever before and a larger per cent. of college men.

Most of the students are engaged in some active work in connection with their studies. Those who do not have churches of their own to preach to can find work here in the city.

There are quite a number of mission Sunday-schools here conducted principally by the students. Bro. R. G. Kendrick is in the city. I suppose the boys at Wake Forest are in sympathy with us, as misery loves company and they too are in the midst of examinations. Very truly,

South Yadkin Union.

The Union Meeting of the South Yadkin Association was a failure, owing to the extremely inclement weather. The few delegates present agreed that the next meeting of the Union shall be held at Mocksville. It occurs in June, the fifth Sunday in March being set apart for the Sunday school Convention of the Association, which convenes with the church at Farmington, Friday before the fifth Sunday in March.

Elder W. J. Hopkins of Rock Cut came Friday, but left for home Saturday, correctly anticipating severe weather. Elder W. G. Rollins of South Caroline, attended and preach very good sermons Saturday, Sunday, morning and evening. He remained over until Friday morning when he went to Winston. He desires a field of labor and will be glad to communicate with any church or group of churches desiring a pastor.

The churches of "the Davie Field" are coming up with their work for the Orphanage and for missions.

Instead of societies in the churches, a meeting is held each Sunday after preaching and some object of work is taken up, discussed, and contributions raised. We hope to add other features for the development of the members. Fraternally,

J. N. STALLINGS.

Cane River.

Dear Recorder—Perhaps some of your readers would like to hear a word of the workings of the Missionary Baptists at Cane River, Yancey county. To this end we wish to ask you to be kind enough to give us a bit of space in your columns for a short report.

The Baptist church at Cane River met with its pastor, Elder J. F. Sams, on December 9th, it being the Lords day. Brother Sams, after he had preached one of his best sermons, announced that Bro. M. Honeycutt would be with him according to promise, though he felt somewhat disappointed that he had not as yet arrived; but the church insisted that services continue, which they did, and Bro. Mundy Honeycutt came in that evening.

These zealous, earnest, and devotional brethren, viz: Sams and Honeycutt, soon moved the church, cold as it had apparently been, to a prompt and lively action. About this time Brother Lide of the M. E. Church came to our help and did us very valuable service, which was highly appreciated by all. Mourners were called for and scores of them responded. The meeting continued for about seven days and nights, which resulted in about twenty nine members being added to the church, that is to say, twenty by baptism and nine by letter. During the meeting, after the first few days, the large and commodious church was quite filled with an anxious and well ordered congregation. Many sinners were convicted, mourners found Jesus precious to their never dying souls, converts would shout, being filled with joy, their friends would greet them with thanks, while others apparently would weep for joy.

On Wednesday, the 19th, the meeting closed, leaving several mourners. The church met with the candidates for baptism at the river on Wednesday the 19th.

I think this was as good, if not the best, meeting, held at Cane River for many years past. We hope the good it has accomplished will long be remembered, and be of lasting good, and that all the praise and honor be given to God, to whom it belongs.

Letter From Virginia

Dear Recorder:—A happy new year to you and to your readers! It has been so long since I have written anything for your columns, that I suppose you imagine that I have nearly forgotten your claims upon me. I say this in all seriousness, for years ago, when I came to North Carolina a comparative stranger, I received courtesis from the paper and its editor, that I highly appreciated; and which enabled me to realize promptly that I had gone among brethren, whose kindness helped me to shake off the home sick feeling, which one naturally feels, when he has left, for the time, or perhaps permanently, his native State. Perhaps you remember me as pleasantly domiciled now at an ambitious little town on the L. & D R. R. My charge is now a country pastorate, and I am serving four as good churches as any pastor has. Times are so tough that they are not able to pay a large salary; but they have other ways by which they help a pastor to live, besides the actual salary paid him.

My family and I have been the recipients of some substantial Christmas presents lately, which increased materially the contents of our larder, and for which we have made our grateful bow of thanks.

Though I have returned to Old Virginia, be assured I scan your columns closely, and I am still deeply interested in what is going on in the Old North State. I was especially pleased to see in the published report of the proceedings of the last Convention, that the work of

is growing in popularity with your people. I shall always be grateful to God, that he enabled me to bear some humble part in the struggle for the establishment of that Board. There is no nobler charity, or more binding Christian duty resting upon any denomination than that of providing for her old and needy ministers. I am sure that the opposition to that work is growing less, when I notice that some who first opposed it, are now going to support it. May God bless them for it. By the way amazingly to be reminded at times that he is fallible, and that he is liable to make mistakes. It is also a sign of true nobility of character for a man to acknowledge his mistakes when he sees them. Deliver me from the man who thinks he is infallible, or, which amounts to about the same thing, who will not confess his mistakes when he sees them. I am glad to see thriving under her present regime The man at the helm is the right man in the right place. What a gallant fight he has made against State aid for Higher Education! By the way, that is one of the questions of the day that will down at no man's bidding. One thing is certain, if a State sustains a few central schools in such a way as to bring them into constant and ruinous competition with academies and colleges sustained by denominational contributions, it is only a question of time when she will completely control the educational system of her people. Is the State prepared to assume this responsibility? Are the American people prepared to admit her right to do so?

I am glad to hear favorable reports as to Dr. Bailey's health. May God bless him, and add yet many days and years to his useful life. C. A. WOODSON.

A Word From the East.

It was a great disappointment to me that circumstances prevented my getting to the Convention. Not only because it was such a great meeting, and I sadly needed the stimulous and knowledge to be obtained at such gatherings, but because my people here at Sawyer's Creek wanted me to go, and generously offered to pay the expenses of the trip.

My first years work in this field draws to a close. In many respects it has been a good year. The churches have not made the progress I hoped they would, but they have done fairly well, and we are all hoping for better things next year.

Our closing service at Corinth was a Jubilee service. With determination on the part of all, and great sacrifice on the part of some, they canceled the debt on their house of worship, and Sunday it was my privilege to destroy in the presence of a large congregation, the note that had enslaved them. We praised God and congratulated each other.

The start upon a new career, owing no man anything save love and good works, and with such a vantage they ought to accomplish great things for God.

Let me record another pleasant incident of my work here. To keep in heart through the chilling weather of the winter before us, the ladies leading in the matter, my congregation at Sawyer's Creek presented me with a splendid overcoat. It is thick and warm as well as good, and I expect to get a deal of solid comfort out of it.

Such tokens of their appreciation are highly prised, and make me earnestly desire to give them more and better service.

The Peace of God.

Who can estimate the value of such a boon to mortals given!

When the blessed Son of God left the courts of glory, took upon himself our nature, came to earth as a little babe in a lowly manger, what could have been more fitting than the shining hosts of the heavenly land proclaiming the glad tidings, "Peace on earth and good will to men." He grew up as all little children, and teaching by precept and example of a holy life, though one of suffering, trial and temptation; dying on the cross that we might live. And after having finished the work his Father gave to do, returned to earth for a little season, and looked with tender compassion on his beloved disciples as they stood sorrowing that they would soon see him no more. And he sayed unto them, "My peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." Precious benediction! who can tell what joy and love they felt when those comforting words were uttered! What does it not now do for his believing children! It calms our sorrow, heals our wounds and perfects us in love. Fellow traveller to eternity, are you bowed down or afflicted in any way? His grace and peace abideth for thee; He hath said,

I will be with thee thy troubles to bless,
And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress.

We cannot do enough for Him who hath done so much for us. Eternity will be alone sufficient to utter all the praise due unto his holy name! The path-way of the Christian may be rough and thorny but when His peace is with them the turbulent waters may flow on and on, but it makes no difference. They hear him say as he did to his disciples in the tempest tossed vessel, "Peace, be still; it is I, be not afraid."

It is wonderful, how those who have not the sweet hope of heaven can bear up under their trials as well as they do. Let us bear them up in our petitions to a throne of grace, that they may stop and think before they farther go, and fall into the pit of everlasting woe. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God unprepared," despite His tender love and watchcare over them. M. G. C.

Clinton Items.

Dear Recorder:—I subjoin a few items for your columns.

The Clinton and Warsaw meeting recently conducted by Rev. E. W. Oakes were a rich gospel feast to many of us who were led to sit at the feet of the Great Teacher himself and learn "things new and old" out of his Word. It is now generally known that Brother Oakes does not claim to be an evangelist in the common acceptation. He aims rather to bring God's people nearer to Jesus in a life of surrender to him and separation from the old sinful life.

"Death with Christ to sin," life unto God through the risen and ascended Lord; this is the central theme about which, in a clear and reverent style, with prayerful dependence upon the Holy Spirit, he unfolds the glorious truths of justification, redemption and sanctification as embodied in the Word of God. In a marked degree he sticks to the Word, and insists upon a faith not in circumstances nor feelings nor opinions, but solely in God's Word. He is himself suffused with a lovely spirit of consecration to Jesus. The spiritual life of our Warsaw brethren especially seems much stimulated.

To most pastors who have so little time to present a connected system of gospel themes for the instruction of their people, Bro. Oakes would prove an invaluable aid; and we trust that an arrangement will be providentially made whereby he can visit not only the larger but also many of our smaller communities where people have so little opportunity for thorough religious instruction. And this leads us to mention a much felt want in our section, if not throughout, the State, and that is an occasional ministers' institute, where such men as Oakes and others could instruct our preachers as well as the people. Something has been done in this direction for the blacks, but many of us white pastors need it almost as much.

In regard to our general cause in the Eastern Association, we have become much depressed by the financial panic, and badly disorganized by various things, political and otherwise. Our leading brethren, however, are nobly striving to preserve the bond of Christian fellowship, and our executive committee, led on by the noble hearted Carroll, are seeking to unify our work by calling for the three unions to be merged into one, where we may gather the reports and contributions for Association missions from all our churches.

The first meeting of this union, called at Riley's Creek last fifth Sunday, was a partial failure on account of the severity of the weather, but we trust all will soon fall into line for more aggressive work.

Permit me here to express the gratitude of myself and family for the bounteous regard of the dear Warsaw people who on Christmas day filled our pantry with good things and made us richer in pocket and Christian cheer. O. P. MEEKS.

The Work at Madison.

Dear Bro. Batley:—The report of my work for this year, as you will see, is rather late, but if you think it is not too late, please publish the same.

The last of July I held a meeting with my church at Oak Ridge, Stokes county. Bro. W. H. Wilson aided me, and nine were added to the church as a result of the meeting. This church has given more to missions during the past year than for any one year in its past history, notwithstanding the hard times.

The second Sunday in September I began a meeting at Dan Valley, a new church two and a half miles from Madison, where I have been preaching since the first of this year. Brother C. C. Haymore of Mt. Airy aided me and preached with power and effect. I baptized twelve at the close of the meeting, who were to form a part of the new organization at this church. The third Sunday in October, Bro. E. P. Ellington assisted me in the organization, and twenty-six by letter, in addition to the twelve already baptized, formed the organization. Two others then joined by experience, and I baptized them that day, making forty in all in the organization. We have a good house, and the church is now ready for work.

I have been in Rockingham county five years—three at Leaksville, and two here. I established the Madison High School here two years ago, which has steadily increased in favor and patronage till we now number one hundred. The Lord has greatly blessed us in this part of the State this year, and to him we give all the glory.

Resolutions Passed by Lumberton Baptist Church, Nov. 23, 1894.

Three and a half years ago Rev. F. H. Martin became pastor of Lumberton Baptist church. He has been faithful in all of his duties as pastor, and has preached boldly the pure gospel in love and tenderness. He has, by his earnestness and godly walk, inspired the confidence and love not only of the church but the entire community. The church and the town regret his departure, but feel that the love of God's cause directs him to another field. He and his excellent wife may rest assured that they carry with them the prayers and affections of our people. May God bless them and the Scottsville church, of which he takes charge.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished Bro. Martin, recorded in our church book, and published in The Robesonian, BIBLICAL RECORDER and Religious Herald.

For comfort, for improvement of the complexion, use only Pozzoni's Powder; there is nothing equal to it.

A Wonderful Cure for Cancer.

There is no further need to cut cancers out with knives or burn them out with plasters. Dr. Scott Mason of Richmond, Va., has a cure for this dreadful affliction that supercedes all other methods in positive cure and rapid healing. Not only this, but it is painless when used and the only cure suitable for old people. It seeks out the diseased growths and destroys their vitality, causing the cancer to pass away leaving only an ordinary healthy sore which rapidly heals. The cure is specially favorable for cancer of mouth, nose, ear, and other delicate parts on account of high sensitiveness and great difficulty to use present remedies. Cases heretofore considered incurable are being turned over to Dr. Mason from all parts of the country and are rapidly cured.

Dr. Mason's cure is sent by express everywhere and applied at home without further cost. Those afflicted should write to Dr. Scott Mason, Richmond, Va., giving full description of case and get his price for a cure.

Literary.

Prof. Henry Drummond has a second paper on D. L. Moody in McClure's Magazine for January, a paper treating especially of Mr. Moody's genius as a founder and organizer of public institutions.

The "Problems Before the Western Farmer" are ably discussed in the January number of the North American Review by Governor Lewelling of Kansas, whose article is worthy of careful reading as indicating the views of the Populist party upon the agricultural outlook.

Dr. C. W. Macfarlane has recently added to the literature of theoretical political economy an essay on "Rent and Profit." It is published by the American Academy of Political and Social Science and is an explanation of the exact difference between these two terms as used in political economy. Rent, says Dr. Macfarlane, is a "price determined surplus," and "profit a 'price determining surplus.'"

Publication No. 126. Pp. 15. Paper. 8vo. Price, 15 cents. Philadelphia, 1894.

"The Economic Function of Woman" is the title of a paper by Dr. Edward T. Devine, Staff Lecturer of the American Society for the Extension of University Teaching. It has been published by the American Academy of Political and Social Science and treats in a fresh manner and from a new point of view one of the most important aspects of the many-sided woman question in modern society. Philadelphia: American Academy of Political and Social Science. 1894. Publication No. 133. Pp. 16. Paper. 8vo. Price, 15 cents.

For ten years the desk calendar issued by the Pope Manufacturing Company has held a unique place among business helpers. Each daily leaf during that time has taught its quiet lesson of the value of better roads and outdoor exercise, and especially the benefits of bicycling. The calendar for 1895, which is just issued, is even brighter than its predecessors in appearance, as clever artists have added dainty silhouette and sketch to the usual wise and witty contributions that have heretofore given this popular calendar its charm. It can be had for five two cent stamps from the Pope Manufacturing Company, Hartford, Conn., or from any Columbia bicycle agency.

An old fashioned sea story full of interest and adventure, with a strong love motive, is begun by W. Clark Russell in the January Cosmopolitan. "Ouida" succeeds Froude, Gosse, Lang, and other distinguished writers with an instalment of the "Great Passions of History" series, which has been appearing in the The Cosmopolitan. A discussion is aroused by Mr. Edward Bok's article on "The Young Man and The Church," which will consume tons of ink before it is settled. Just preceding the famous Charcot's death he prepared an article for The Cosmopolitan on Pasteur, to be published after Pasteur's death. But Charcot has died first, and so with the consent of Charcot's executors, the article is given now. The present "Theatrical Season in New York" is critically considered by Mr. James S. Metcalfe, editor of Life, and there are stories by Tourgee, Howells, and the famous French writer Francis Coppee.

The Rev. Francis E. Clark's new book, "Our Journey Around the World," is having a great sale, and is unquestionably the most popular subscription book of the day. The volume has decided merit, is splendidly illustrated, just the book for the family, and no better gift can be made by father, mother, brother, sister or friend. As President of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, Dr. Clark is beloved by more than two million members of that order. The publishers, Messrs. A. D. Worthington & Co., Hartford, Conn., want more agents for this book—both men and women—and they offer great inducements to them. Their advertisement appears in another column. Our friends who are in need of profitable employment will find this good book just the thing to work for, a book they need not hesitate to offer to their friends, and they will be pretty sure to do well with it. We can commend the book as being especially attractive and exceedingly desirable for agents.

Royal Helps for Loyal Living. Daily Readings for a Year from the Seers and Poets of all Ages. Compiled by Martha Wallace Richardson 16mo, cloth, red edges. Price, $1. Postage free. [Thomas Whitaker, Publisher. 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.]

This is a delightful and helpful year book. God's Word, a text for every day and hearty words of cheer from God's honored servants, both in prose and praise, are to be found on every page. The selections are exceptionally good, and a number of tender and comforting poems are given in full. Let no one, however, think that it is of the ordinary quality of such works. The extracts are made with remarkable care and judgment, and so large a company of writers have been drawn on that it has unusual value. It is just the book for a holiday gift, for its blessing will bide for many a year.

In Editha's Days. By Mary E. Bamford. 12mo, 351 pp. Price, $1 25. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

In this story, "In Editha's Days," we are given such a treat, and go hand-in-hand, intensely interested, with the writer through 'long days of labor and nights devoid of ease,' bearing in her heart the faith of those who are so cruelly persecuted. The story is placed in England in the reign of Henry VIII., and in the low countries when they were under the rule of Charles V. and his son, Phillip II. Here it was that those who dared differ from the Catholic church felt the weight of her wrath, as we in these peaceful days little realize. Through the medium of the writer, "Editha" we see and feel as did she; we suffer and flee with her, and together we pray for a day of religious freedom for all. All things are brought to us in a very vivid, and yet attractive manner, making it hard to realize that more than three hundred years have passed since the time of these wonderful experiences.

This is the third volume of the Crown Series, which was inaugurated with "A Mexican Ranch." The volume is bound in corresponding style, and together with the preceding two makes a very enjoyable set to read. They will be sold separately, or in neatly packed sets of three each.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Queries.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Is it right for church members to have entertainments to raise money for the Lord, when such entertainments and programs are not fit to have in the church; and is it expedient for preachers to engage in them?

Answer—No.

Would it not be better to have religious entertainments, so that we could go to the house of the Lord and do his work in his own house?

Answer—Yes.

How to Make Bees-Wax.

The following receipt for bees-wax can be vouched for: After the combs have been put through an extractor or crushed and strained through a thin cloth, the wax is put in a copper or porcelain-lined kettle with cold water enough to cover it, and boiled for half an hour or longer, if it seems necessary. When the wax is taken from the stove it is strained and poured in a vessel previously dipped in cold water. To make a round cake of beeswax, pour the melted wax in a bowl that has been dipped in cold water. When cold it may be easily removed if the bowl was dipped in cold water. To make wax sheets, use a board three eighths of an inch thick, dampened with warm water, then dipped in the melted wax two or three times. The board is next put in water to cool for a little while, after which it is taken out, the edges trimmed with a sharp knife and two sheets of wax peeled off. To make these wax sheets the wax must not be too hot or it will crack.—January Ladies' Home Journal.

What Romanism Teaches.

Romanism teaches Baptismal Regeneration and Salvation by Works.

There is a place outside of paradise especially set apart for children who die without having been baptised. Without baptism they cannot enter heaven, and without money they cannot be baptized. A heartless mother she would be who would not deny herself to save the dollar and a half necessary to have her baby sprinkled, thus saving it from eternal punishment

Mexicans know absolutely nothing of a spiritual religion. They trust in outward show, forms, ceremonies, works, for their salvation. In many of the churches are printed lists of indulgences with their corresponding prices. Among them:

"He who visits prisons or the sick helping them or teaching them the Christian doctrine, shall gain for each time 300 days of indulgence."

"He who at the ringing of the bell at morning, noon or night, shall say the Angelus Domini, the Pater Noster, or the Ave Maria, shall gain 100 days of indulgence," etc. I "bear them witness that they have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. For being ignorant of God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own, they do not submit themselves to the righteousness of God."

ROMANISM ENCOURAGES VICE AND IMMORALITY.

This is a strong statement, but true. One of the greatest difficulties in our work with this people is their utter disregard for the truth. No dependence can be placed in them. They have three kinds of lies, but one of which is sin, and that is the malicious lie. A lie to make some one happy and a lie in favor of the church are meritorious. Honesty also is a rare trait. Highway robbers, public women, drunkards, gamblers, etc., are all members of the Church of Rome, and frequently are among her most fanatical members. The priests lead the van in immorality and vice, and their followers are legion. The people are by no means blind to the gross and open immoralities practised by the padres, but in the face of all of it they will kneel to the vile creatures and beg for absolution from their sins. "Christs of the earth" they style themselves, and verily they are not of heaven.—H. R. Mosley, Mexico.

Spanish Rule in Mexico.

The history of this Spanish rule is a history of the oppression of the weak by the strong. Private property was everywhere confiscated, and the wealth of the land flowed into the pockets of the civil and ecclesiastical rulers and into the coffers of Spain. The subjugation of heathen lands is a glorious opportunity for the missionaries of the cross; but the Christianity taken into Mexico was not the Christianity of Christ, only a travesty upon it—Roman Catholicism. Wherever Roman Catholicism has held undisputed sway, wherever its pernicious practices have not been challenged by true representatives of Christ, wherever expediency has not forced toleration, the system has been one of vice, cruelty, bigotry and intolerance. Sad it is that those who call themselves by the name of Christ should have so little of His spirit. In the evangelization of Mexico, the Catholics did not follow a pacific propagandism. They did not teach and plead; they commanded and threatened. At the point of the glittering sword Mexico yielded. It became a Christian nation without the knowledge of Christ, without the spirit of Christ. But what mattered that to the roving band of soldiers and priests, who, consumed with a greed for gold, were realizing their sordid ambitions, though they were defying the wrath of God! They gave the poor Mexicans little; they took from them their all. The priests gave the natives images for their idols. Is there any difference? If there is, the natives could not comprehend it. The priests were too idle and too vicious to care about it. The poor Mexican received no instruction as to true godliness, and, after the introduction of Romish institutions, the morals of the people became even more degraded. Shame to the people of God in our land who sympathise with this hierarchy, in whose bosom fester the running sores of unblushing and diabolical wickedness! The centuries have rolled on, and this land of flowers has been trodden by the most merciless tyrants known in modern times, who, in the name of Christ, have wrought the works of the devil, who have left as a heritage to the Godfearing people of our country more than 12,000,000 of people, with but little knowledge of Christ as the Lord of their lives!—Rev. Curtis Lee Laws.

None But Royal

Baking Powder is absolutely pure. No other equals it, or approaches it in leavening strength, purity, or wholesomeness. (See U. S. Gov't Reports.) No other is made from cream of tartar specially refined for it and chemically pure. No other makes such light, sweet, finely-flavored, and wholesome food. No other will maintain its strength without loss until used, or will make bread or cake that will keep fresh so long, or that can be eaten hot with impunity, even by dyspeptics. No other is so economical.

The Baking Powders now being offered in this vicinity, with the statement that they are "as good as Royal," have been shown by the official analyses to be composed of alum and detrimental to health.

The official chemists of the United States and Canada, State analysts, municipal boards of health, and physicians indorse the great qualities of the Royal Baking Powder.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

From Presses of Edwards & Broughton Raleigh, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

Prices: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 60c.

NEWS SUMMARY.

North Carolina.

Great and destructive freshets are reported of the Cape Fear, Neuse and other rivers. ——J. C. Wright, merchant, Rockingham, has assigned; liabilities $7,500.——The grand jury has brought in true bills against the Raleigh Christmas week gambling parties, exposed editorially last week. The RECORDER was the only paper to expose these offenses. ——Oakes' meetings at Charlotte have been drawing large crowds. ——A Presbyterian preacher at Charlotte has announced himself a "crank" on 'Christian unity,' and called for a general exchange of pulpits by pastors in that city, in order that the denominations may learn more of each other. He might have spared himself the trouble of classifying himself.——A pastors' association has been organized at Salisbury; Rev. Dr. Rumple, President, Rev. N. S. Jones, Secretary.——Charlotte and Salisbury are to be connected by telephone. ——The Polk monument to be erected at Raleigh will cost $2,500 instead of $25,000, which was accidentally stated last week. ——Editor Carter of the Rutherford Herald was arrested last week for throwing rocks through the glass in the window of the building of the Rutherford Democrat ——A colony of thirty Fins are reported to be coming from Michigan to settle in Forsyth and Bertie counties.——1,100 acres of trucking lands near Newbern have been purchased for 300 New Jersey families.

JANUARY 9.

ORGANIZATION.—Senate; Lieut. Governor Doughton presiding. The following officers were elected: Chief Clerk, Hill E King, Pop; Reading Clerk, Spencer Blackburn, Rep; Engrossing Clerk, A K D Wallace, Pop; Principal Doorkeeper, T. L. Halliburton, Rep.; Assistant Doorkeeper, Thos. W. Babb, Pop.

HOUSE.—Speaker, Z V. Walker, Rep; Chief Clerk, S. V. Satterfield, Rep.; Reading Clerk, Jno. W. Chapin, Rep.; Engrossing Clerk, E. P. Hauser, Pop; Doorkeeper, A. J. Moye, Pop.; Assistant Doorkeeper, A. R. Middleton, Pop. The House adopted the rules of the late House, excepting Rule 13, which required a two thirds instead of a majority vote.

JANUARY 10.

SENATE.—Resolution adopted ordering that copies of the Code be furnished members of the various committes. Motion to adopt rules of last Senate lost, and it is resolved that three Senators be appointed to prepare rules. Rice, Rep., New Hanover, Hamrick, Pop., Cleveland, and Adams, Dem., Moore, appointed.

Abell of Johnston introduced bill to make six per cent. the legal rate of interest, which is placed on calendar (that is, disposed of for the present, to be brought up in due time) Mewborne of Lenoir introduced bill to repeal present charter of the Farmer's Alliance and restore former charter, which is passed and sent to the House, where it also passed.

HOUSE.—The message of the Governor with reports from the several State Departments was placed in the hands of the Speaker, and the message was read. Ordered printed 600 copies of message and twenty additional copies for each member. The printing of 5,000 copies was ordered later.

The reports of the various State institutions—educational, charitable and industrial—were laid before the House, and referred to proper committees.

French, New Hanover, introduces bill to insure a free ballot and fair count, and requests that it be referred to a special committee of thirteen members. Winborne, Hertford, a bill to fix the rate of interest at six per cent.; and another to fix the fees of solicitors in estates of infants. Bean, Randolph, to repeal Sec. 14, Art. 7, of the Constitution, with the purpose of annulling the power of the Legislature over municipal corporations, i. e., power to reorganize the city governments. Ewart, Henderson, "to establish county government;" and a bill in regard to giving bonds in guarantee companies. (The reader may need to be reminded that several county officers elected lately have been restrained from their offices by county commissioners, who, acting under the law, declined guarantee and trust company bondsmen.)

JANUARY 11.

SENATE.—Mewborne, Lenoir, introduces a bill to make the legal rate of interest five per cent. He also introduced the bill, which has passed both branches and is now in effect, to repeal the public printing law made by the last Legislature. There are four candidates for the printing. White, Alexander, offers resolution ordering the State Treasurer to make special report of moneys paid to certain public institutions, particularly, the University, the State Normal and Industrial School and the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, which is referred.

The committee on rules reported, the distinguishing feature of the new rules being one creating a standing committee to appoint the various Senate committees. A similar rule has been adopted by the House. This removes the danger of one-man power, and is a wholesome solution of a question that has given trouble in Congress. To give one man power to appoint all committees is not in accord with the genius of our government. An effort to provide for the election of a Senator to occupy the Lieut. Governor's Chair, in the possible absence of the latter, failed. The Governor's message was read.

HOUSE.—Many bills, mostly of local or inconsiderable significance, were introduced and referred. Peebles, Northampton, offered resolution instructing our Senators to vote for free coinage of silver, which was referred. McKenzie, Rowan, introduced a bill to prohibit the manufacture and sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquors; Smith, Gates, to carry out the four months free schools, as per constitutional requirement; Duncan, Carteret, to protect fishermen from monopolies. These bills were properly referred.

The report of the committee on Privileges and Elections, together with a resolution by Peebles, provoked sharp discussion. The contested cases will not have been decided for several days yet.

JANUARY 12.

SENATE.—Starbuck introduced resolutions urging the State representatives at Washington to work for repeal of the State bank tax and the internal revenue laws.

The Committee on committees reported. The following compose the Education committee: H. L. Grant, chairman: J. B. Parsons, S. A. White, J. Y. Hamrick, B. R. Brown, W. H. Farthing, S. E. Marshall, John Ammons, S. W. Wall, H. A. Cook, A. H. Paddison, W. C. Dowd, W. J. Adams, E. S. Abell, I. Green.

The remainder of the session was occupied with empty filibustering on the question of electing a Speaker pro tem of the Senate, to serve in the absence of the regular presiding officer; the effort to elect one failed.

HOUSE.—McLean, Richmond, to form a new county out of a part of Richmond county; Payne, Robeson, to request our Washington representatives to work for Federal appropriation for Normal School for Croatan Indians of Robeson county; Cox, Pitt, against further issuance of bonds by the Federal government; Monroe, Wayne, to appoint commissioners to codify the laws of the State.

After discussing Peebles' resolution on contested elections, which ended in adherence to the usual mode of procedure, and further talk on the public printing question, which ended in repeal of the former law, with assurance of the enactment of another letting the printing to the lowest efficient bidder, the body adjourned.

The Grand Lodge of Masons convened in Raleigh last week. The proposition of Mr. Washington Duke of Durham to give $5,000 to the Oxford Orphan Asylum, provided the Masons give $5,000, was accepted, and more than $4,000 was immediately pledged. The following officers were installed: Dr. F. M. Moye of Wilson, Grand Master; Dr. R. J. Noble of Selma, Deputy Grand Master; Walter E. Moore of Jackson, Grand Senior Warden; James A. Leach of Lexington, Grand Junior Warden; John C. Drewry, Grand Secretary; William Simpson, Grand Treasurer; Francis D. Winston, Winton, Bertie county, Grand Marshal; V. S. Royster, Raleigh, Junior Deacon; Dr. H. I. Clark, Weldon, Senior Deacon; Rev. Moses Winston of Granville county, Grand Chaplain; Prof. E. B. Neave of Salisbury, Grand Sword Bearer; R. H. Bradley, Raleigh, Grand Tiler.

Please find money order for RECORDER. I can't do without it. I am just as glad to get it as I would be to get a letter from one of my best friends. I think every Baptist in the State ought to take it.—Vienna G. Sandford.

PRIMER OF MUSIC

By WM. MASON, MUS. DOC. and W. S. B. MATHEWS.

This work covers entirely new ground. It is not alone a Primer of the Pianoforte, with information about the Keyboard Notations and peculiarities of the instrument, but much more. It is a

Primer of Musicianship,

having in it the foundations of Harmony, Musical Form, Principle of Phrasing, the correct way of playing all the embellishments and ornaments, the

and other interesting and mind-awakening instruction. While intended for the use of young pupils, the ground it covers is so much more extensive than that usually covered by elementary piano lessons, that pupils as far along as the fourth and fifth grades will find here much matter which they have previously neglected.

Rev. F. M. Jordan to Become An Evangelist.

Dear Recorder:—For forty years you have been making your weekly visits to my house, and I have no language to express fully the real help, pleasure, and solid comfort you have been to me and my family all these years. And now I believe you are better and stronger than at any period of your life, and what you will yet be the Lord only knows.

Born and reared in Montgomery county, I have lived in Anson, Richmond, Orange, Henderson, Buncombe and Transylvania. Am now in my sixty sixth year; have been a member of the Baptist church more than fifty one years; have been preaching the gospel as faithfully as I knew how for forty-five years; have labored in seventy-six counties in North Carolina, and in four other States; have baptized in every important river in North Carolina, and creeks, branches, pools and baptisteries beyond remembrance. Recently I baptized seven in the beautiful French Broad River.

I have just returned from a five weeks tour, preaching in the counties of Haywood and Macon; had a meeting of great power in Waynesville; was there seventeen days; there were sixteen professions of religion when I left, and the last I heard from the meeting it was going on with unabated interest. Don't know that I have ever enjoyed more of the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

Hardly think I shall ever take the care of churches any more, but spend the remaining years of my life in evangelistic labors as my strength may allow.

And now, my dear Bro. Bailey, please accept my heartfelt thanks for all your kindness to me, and give my love to all the dear brethren and sisters in the State Convention, where I spent the best and most useful years of my life.

May the dear old RECORDER grow better as it grows older.

Your devoted brother,
F. M. JORDAN.

East Fork, Transylvania Co., Dec. 24, '94

Thanks to All.

Dear Recorder:—Please allow me through your columns to render thanks to the good people of Franklinville for the many valuable presents we have received at their hands since we have been among them, and for a recent present of money enough ($12 40) to buy me a nice overcoat for a Christmas gift. My Cedar Falls people had a contribution in the coat.

Since I have been writing this, a good sister presents my wife with a nice shawl, a present from herself and another sister.

My people have been truly good to us, and we want to say thanks to one and all.

Almost every one has use for a calendar, and by the same token, they ought to have one that is of some use. A calendar that you have to study or "set" has little excuse for existence. The one we like best of all is that published by N. W. Ayer & Son, the Newspaper Advertising Agents of Philadelphia. The handsome copy for 1895 carries on its seal their famous motto, "Keeping Everlastingly At It Brings Success," which will alone each day be worth to all who use it far more than the price of the calendar. The size is generous, and the work a beautiful specimen of the printers' art. Each day, as is becoming to such an important slice of time, is printed large enough to be read across a room. Then, too, the matter on the flaps deals with a subject in which there is a growing general interest.

That the demand for this calendar increases each year, we can easily understand, for we do not believe that any one who has spent one year in company with it, will be willing to spend another without it.

The price is 25 cents, delivered everywhere postpaid, and in perfect condition.

An Explanation of the Electropoise.

The Electropoise, by thermo electric action, causes all parts of the body which are exposed to the air to rapidly absorb larger quantities of pure atmospheric oxygen from the air. The oxygen, thus taken up by the superficial capillaries, is carried into all parts of the body, burning out all manner of poisonous impurities, destroying bacteria and preventing their further propagation. This purified blood passes into all the functional organs, stimulating them to healthy action and enabling them to do the very best work of which they are capable. In this way all diseased tissue is thrown off and healthy tissue built up in its stead. The Electropoise does this and does not injure the digestion and impair the system as strong medicine would have to do.

The Electropoise has now passed the experimental state and is endorsed by many prominent men, among whom are Judge Powell E. Jackson of the U. S. Supreme Court, Judge Walter Clarke of N. C., Supreme Court, Ex Gov. T. M. Holt of Haw River, N. C., Judge R. P. Dick of Greensboro, N. C., Rev. Lucius Cuthbert of Aiken, S. C., Judge J. B. Kershaw of Camden, S. C., Judge J. T. Henderson, ex Commissioner of Agriculture, Atlanta, Ga., Hon. N. C. Sibley of Augusta, Ga., Rev. W. B. Branhan of Oxford, Ga., and hundreds of others whom space will not let me name, but which are given in our circulars which we send free.

DIED.

PITT—H. B. S. Pitt died at his home near Whitaker's, in Nash county, N. C., Nov. 14th, 1894, aged seventy-three years. He has been a faithful member of the Baptist church forty-nine years. DR. F. PITT.

Henderson, N. C.

FULFORD—At North West Virginia, Nov. 21st, 1894, Sister Lydia Fulford, the loving wife of Mr. Arthur Fulford, fell asleep in Jesus after two years of great suffering. Her funeral was conducted by the writer in Shady Grove church, Currituck county, N. C. She was burried at Currituck C. H. beside the loved ones who had gone before.

May the Lord bless and comfort the husband and the two little children.

P. S. C. DAVIS.

ROBBINS—Near Lebanon church, Brunswick county, N. C., Nov. 27th, 1894, Sister Victoria Robbins, aged twenty-five years and thirteen days, after a severe illness of about nine days, passed from this to the better and brighter world on high. She was the daughter of I. W. and Emor Harrelson, and wife of W. H. Robbins. She had just returned home with her sick husband from Georgia about two weeks before her death. It seemed that God brought her back home to die. Sister Robbins, although young, will be greatly missed by her church and neighborhood. She has been a consistent member of the Baptist church at Lebanon from early girlhood.

J. H. HILDRETH.

WHITEHURST—Died Nov. 29th, 1894, in the ninth year of her age, of that ruthless, destroyer diphtheria, little Emily, youngest child of her widowed mother, Mrs. Ann Whitehurst of Sawyer's Creek, Camden county, N. C.

The old adage, "death loves a shining work," was indeed verified in Emily's case. She was a dear, lovable child, wise and thoughtful beyond her years, and never happier than when helping to do something to give pleasure to others. Just before her illness, hearing of a plan to present her pastor with an overcoat, she took an eager interest in it and declared her purpose to contribute, and when the collection was made her contribution was large as the average.

So gentle and loving; so unselfish, and so fond of church and Sunday-school, must she not have loved him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." We believe she did love him, and that, wanting her in his own presence, he called her to himself.

God comfort the stricken mother and sorrowing household with the reflection that nothing calls for greater thankfulness than the knowledge of a loved one "safe in the arms of Jesus."

Tributes of Respect.

Died on October 16th, 1894, Henry F. Hilburn, aged sixty-eight years and twenty-six days, after a severe illness of about two and one-half hours, leaving a widow and eight children to mourn their loss. He entered the late war of '61 as a private soldier in the Southern army, and served as a faithful soldier for 1,265 days.

The church at Zion's Hill in conference

Resolved 1. That in the death of Brother Henry F. Hilburn the church mourns the loss of one of our beloved deacons.

Resolved 2. While we bow in humble submission to Divine Providence, who doeth all things well, yet we grieve to see his seat vacant at the fireside as well as at the church. His influence as a true Christian and as a neighbor was such that the greatest confidence was reposed in him. As a father he was loving, and as a husband he was kind, and on all occasions he sought and controlled a pleasant home.

"Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

Ordered that these resolutions be spread upon the church book and a copy be furnished the bereaved widow, and published in the N. C. Baptist and BIBLICAL RECORDER. This Nov. 10th, 1894.

M. Hammerly, a well-known business man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to erysipelas. My sufferings were extreme, my leg, from the knee to the ankle, being a solid sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, before I had finished the first bottle, I experienced great relief; the second bottle effected a complete cure."

The Home Circle.

Toward Evening.

Is it sunset in the west?
Life is often at its best
When the roughest work is done,
And the time for rest is won,
When the sea of life is calm,
When the stilled soul sings her psalm,
When sweet peace has banished strife,
And the silences of life
Make a little sanctuary
For the home of piety.
When no anguish chokes the prayer,
And confidence succeeds to care,
And the soul forgets her fear,
Then the golden time is near.

If the evening should be bright,
And God long delay the night,
And keep you here for love's caressing,
Safe and happy, blest and blessing,
Hope will grow, and faith will strengthen,
And the shadows, though they lengthen,
Will be pleasant, cool, rest-giving;
And the joy of gentle living
Shall be greater as the days
Are hallowed into songs of praise.

But when night comes on apace,
And the light fades from the face;
When strange sounds are in the air,
And the soul, compelled to prayer,
To the body bids farewell,
Think not 'tis a funeral knell,
'Tis the song of birds at morn,
The stir of day that soon is born—
Then lift up your head on high,
Your redemption draweth nigh.

—Marianne Farningham, in Christian World.

Launching A Battle-Ship.

IT IS A COMPLEX PROBLEM AND A SLIGHT MISTAKE WOULD COST MILLIONS.

Albert Franklin Matthews tells an interesting story of "The Evolution of a Battle ship," in the July number of The Century. This is a history of the construction of the Indiana, so far the only vessel of this class we have in our navy. After describing the wonderful power of this monster, the most formidable engine of war in the world, and the manner of its construction, Mr. Matthews says:

So the building goes on until the launching day comes, and two broad ways are built up against the bottom of the vessel, and the keel-blocks on which it has been resting are knocked away. In the launch of the Indiana Mr. Nixon ran a row of electric lights beneath the bottom of the vessel, adding another innovation to the details of American ship building. Each launching way consists of upper and lower planking, between which is spread thousands of pounds of the best tallow. At the bow of the boat these upper and lower planks are clamped together, and when all is ready they are sawed apart, and the vessel starts. The upper part of the ways slides into the water with the vessel, and the lower part with the smoking hot tallow remains stationary.

A launch in these days is so smooth, and so soon ended, rarely occupying more than twelve seconds from start to finish, that one scarcely realizes its difficulties. Three things are absolutely necessary: it must be on time, when the tidal water is highest; it must be of smart speed, so as not to stick on its downward journey to the water; it must be accomplished without straining. So complex a thing is a launch that the careful engineer in charge is able to estimate the strain on every part of the vessel for every position it occupies, at intervals of one foot, on its way down the incline.

There is one supreme moment. It is when the vessel is nearly two thirds in the water. The buoyancy of the water raises the vessel, and throws its weight on its shoulders. Here is where the greatest danger of straining comes, and should the ways break down, the vessel would be ruined, a matter of nearly $2,000 000 in a ship like the Indiana when it was launched.

The launch over, the machinery is lifted in and fitted, and then comes the board of government experts, who look the vessel over inch by inch, the fires are started, and the trial trip follows. For four hours, amid suppressed excitement that answers nervously to every quiver of the vessel, the engines are run at full speed. A premium or a penalty is at stake now. The breakage of a bolt or the disarrangement of a valve may mean thousands of dollars of loss to the contractor. Trained workmen are locked in the fire rooms, not to be released until the test is over. Cooled drinking water with oat-meal sprinkled upon it is run down to them in a rubber tube from a barrel on the deck. A hose is played on the costly machinery in places where there is danger from overheating, as though it were on fire. Almost every pound of coal used on the trip is carefully selected. When the four hours are passed and the strain is over, a sigh of relief from every one on board, and even from the vessel herself, goes up, and the ship passes from the contractor to the Government, and day after day while she is in commission the flag will be saluted, and the score or more of other ceremonies and formalities observed on a man-of-war will follow.

The Uses of Hot Water.

The best method of using hot water are as follows: For sprains of the ankle and wrist or any joint, the part should be thoroughly soaked for half an hour at a time, night and morning, in very hot water, writes A. Marcy, M. D., in a very valuable list of "Domestic Household Remedies" in the January Ladies' Home Journal. Any one suffering from a severe sprain will not require more than the first soaking to convince them of the advantage of hot over cold water. A flannel bandage should be applied firmly after each treatment. For bruises very much the same method should be followed, although the application need not be continued for so long a time. For wounds and sores the best method is to drip or pour for a few minutes. For styes and inflamed eyelids, and even for sore eyes, use water as hot as can be borne, by sopping. To stop bleeding, very hot water applied to the raw surface will be found efficacious. For many forms of dyspepsia and biliousness, particularly a catarrhal condition of stomach, a goblet of hot water, drunk after the night's fasting, will give relief. For continued application, in the form of a poultice, as in catarrh of the breast, pleurisy, pneumonia, etc., a jacket of cotton batting wrung out in very hot water by means of a towel, and covered with oiled silk or waxed paper, should be used.

The Business Man's Lesson.

He was an upright business man. In his heart he believed the religion of Christ to be true. But he was very busy, and when Sunday came he was thoroughly tired. He had become interested, too, in his Sunday paper, so he gradually dropped off going to church. His wife went regularly, and sometimes the children. One morning, just after his wife had set out, he was comfortably seated, reading the money article, when he heard his boys talking in the next room. Said eight-years-old Willie:

"When you grow up, shall you go to church as mother does, or stay at home like father?"

"I shall do neither," said the one, decidedly. "When I'm a man I shall have my horses, and be on the road Sundays and enjoy myself."

The newspaper suddenly lost its attraction. Between the father and it there came a picture of his boys associating with loose men, and drifting into a godless, reckless life, and of himself looking on it in his old age as fruit of his self indulgence. Five minutes after he was rapidly walking toward the church. When the service was over, his wife, coming down the aisle, saw him waiting at the door. There was questioning, glad surprise in her eyes, but he only remarked that he had taken a walk and thought he would join her on her way home. Next Sunday, however, the whole family were in their pew, and all the rest of the day there was a kind of a peace about the home that reminded him of his boyhood happy days in his father's home. And who will say that he was the less fitted for another week of business life by his share in the service of God's house, instead of "staying at home all Sunday to rest?"

In Self-Defense

you ought to keep your flesh up. Disease will follow, if you let it get below a healthy standard. No matter how this comes, what you need is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That is the greatest flesh-builder known to medical science, far surpassing filthy Cod liver oil and all its nasty compounds. It's suited to the most delicate stomachs. It makes the morbidly thin, plump and rosy, with health and strength.

The "Discovery" is sold on trial. In every thing that's claimed for it, as a strength restorer, blood-cleanser, and flesh maker, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Rupture or breach, permanently cured without the knife. Address for pamphlet and references, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

A correspondent of the Orange County Farmer says: "Formerly I have lost a good many peach trees as the result, as I am now convinced, of moving them from the nursery and transplanting them in the fall—at least I cannot give any other reason for it. With most varieties of the apple the fall is as good a time as the spring, and on some accounts is to be preferred. Because we may have more time to spare for this work in the fall should not govern us in the matter, and when it is said we may plant fruit trees either in the fall or spring as it will be most convenient it won't do to apply the rule to all kinds. The peach is a native of a warm climate and that fact should be taken into account in planting the young trees where they are to stand and bear fruit. The removal of any tree from the place where it first took root will of necessity give it at least a temporary setback, and when trees of a naturally tender species, like the peach, are taken up and transplanted it should be done under the most favorable conditions possible for overcoming the check they will receive and for resuming their growth again. Where this is done at the dormant season in the fall, and is followed by a winter even moderately severe, the peach is liable to be greatly injured by the cold, even if not entirely killed."

Be gentle; unto griefs and needs,
Be pitiful as woman should,
And, spite of all the lies of creeds.
Hold fast the truth that God is good.
—Whittier.

My sister! let the night be ne'er so dark,
The moon is surely somewhere in the sky.
—Mrs. Browning.

Every wrong carries within itself the power to right it sooner or later.

A SURGEON'S KNIFE

gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessity for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as incurable without cutting.

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery

is well illustrated by the fact that RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death. TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations. PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife. STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting. STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and all particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

"CIVIL GOVERNMENT in North Carolina and the United States: a School Manual and History, by Sidney M. Finger," ought, in our opinion, to be used in educating every boy or girl in the State.

Civil Government has gradually come to be recognized, as it ought to have been long ago, as a branch of education that no one may omit. The need of such a work as Mr. Finger's is witnessed by the common ignorance on the part of men of affairs, whether college professors or merchants or farmers, of the details of the various branches of our general system of government. The fact is, we are getting into a habit of looking to lawyers for information concerning the everyday processes of public affairs.

It is not rash to question the reader's knowledge of the powers, limitations and functions of a justice of the peace, of the powers of incorporating a business and the advantage of such incorporation, of the functions and jurisdiction of a sheriff, of the system of education practiced by the State, or of the power of county commissioners. It is probable that the reader knows less of municipal government than of the county system, and less of our judicial or legislative departments than of either. There is no reason why every boy or girl in the State should not be thoroughly acquainted with these things. They must be known and examined, if they are to be improved; and their improvement will devolve on the succeeding generation.

A session of a legislative body is puzzling to the average on looker, whether he be present in person or a newspaper be the medium. The introduction of bills, the offering of resolutions, or amendments, the points of privilege, of order, the ever present motion, the readings, etc., etc., seem enough to puzzle one. But any one acquainted with Mr. Finger's elucidation of the legislative department of our government will have no difficulty comprehending these methods.

"Besides the Constitution, which is the fundamental law," says Mr. Finger, "there are other laws called statute laws, or statutes. The Constitution entrusts the power of making these laws to a body of men called the General Assembly. * * * The Senate is composed of fifty members. The House has one hundred and twenty. The lieutenant-governor is the presiding officer of the Senate, and is called president. The House of Representatives elects one of its own number to be its presiding officer. This officer is called speaker."

"The General Assembly has power to make any law, provided it is not prohibited by the Constitution of the State or by the Constitution of the United States." A measure must be passed by each house, and it must be signed by the presiding officer of each house, in the presence of the house, before it becomes law. The signing is called ratifying the act. "The presiding officers cannot refuse to sign any act that has been passed by both houses." Note that the governor has nothing to do with making the laws; he can suggest, but he has no veto power.

A proposed measure is called a bill. Any member may introduce a bill in the house of which he is a member. If it does not transgress the Constitution, it is referred to a committee, committees on almost every subject having been appointed by a committee elected by its respective branch of the Assembly. When a bill is ordered by the presiding officer to be placed on the calendar, it is given a set day and hour for discussion, so that the speakers for or against may be ready. If a bill is "laid on the table," that is probably the last of it.

Every bill has to pass each branch of the Assembly three times. This provides time for consideration and gives opportunity for amendments, which are clauses changing, sometimes strengthening, at others modifying the bill. A bill becomes an act when it is signed by the presiding officers, as described.

Committees do most of the work of an Assembly; and they do most of it while the body is not in session. Orators often get the glory that working committee men deserve. Committees carefully examine into measures, remove complications and inconsistencies, and report their opinions to their branch. If a committee is not of one mind, a majority and a minority report are submitted. The Assembly is likely to execute the recommendations of its committees. For this reason it is unwise to place the appointment of the latter in the power of one man, as is the present custom of the Federal House of Representatives, the speaker of which has more power than any ruler in Europe, excepting the Czar.

The Assembly has to do with two kinds of laws, public and private. The former concerns the whole people, the latter usually relates to business companies, societies and individual, or local interests.

IN HIS elaborate message to the General Assembly the Governor betrayed ambition to have a record of prosperity and progress handed to history, not for his own sake so much as for his party's. There were no criticisms to speak of; there were distinct expressions of faith in the present laws, and dread of those about to be. It is an interesting document; as full of praise as an epitaph, and fuller of facts, containing a valuable amount of information, although it does not offer as many suggestions to the Assembly as usual.

The Governor sets out with an apology, referring the Assembly to the clause in our Constitution requiring "that the Governor 'shall, from time to time, give the General Assembly information of the affairs of the State and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall deem expedient.'"

In the last two years the Governor has been careful to personally inspect every institution, "save the two orphan asylums at Oxford and some of the normal schools," that receives aid from the State; and he is gratified to bear testimony to the "honest and efficient management of these various State institutions." He asks the Assembly to be slow to change their management.

He hopes the county and municipal government systems will not be molested, affirming that they were never more wisely or economically administered.

The Treasurer's report is considered next. Notwithstanding a reduction from 25 cents to 23 cents in the tax levy, there was a cash balance on hand Nov. 30, 1894, of $114,581.15. The prospect is that expenditures will exceed receipts by $45,400 in 1895, the estimate of the former being $860,400. The "total possible debt of the State is $3,615,770, bearing four per cent. interest." In connection with the Auditor's report, especial attention is called to the need of equalization of taxation, the institution of a State Board of Equalization being suggested. "All property should be proportionately and all citizens should be equally taxed." In 1893 county taxes amounted to $1,058,941.69; State taxes to $1,358,944.75; the average total being 44 cents per capita, the population being estimated at 1,675,000. The State pays $105,132 in pensions.

Half the counties are out of debt; and although the taxable property of the State amounts to $212,937,119 87, the total indebtedness is only one twenty-fifth that amount. This is creditable indeed.

The Attorney General recommends that more effective anti-lynching laws be passed. A system of court-stenographers—something badly needed—is asked for. It is advised that two or more special judges be provided to act in case of sickness, and to hasten the ends of justice; that solicitors be paid a salary instead of certain fees for convictions. The Attorney General's recommendations are thoughtful, and ought to be executed.

The message treats at length of education, but nothing more than the usual insinuations, charges of narrowness and bigotry and pitiable pleas of State aid defenders is ventured. The Governor's style undergoes palpable changes while he discusses so unconsciously for State aid, and it is notable that, while there are elaborate remarks on the leading schools and institutions, the negro A. & M. College is omitted.

After the schools, the asylums, the Experiment Station, agriculture, fairs at three places, etc., are mentioned. The problem of the penitentiary is considered; it has cost the State only $12,500 a year since the last Legislature, and there are assets convertible into money to the amount of $44,000. He thinks farming solves the problem, and advises that the farms now used be purchased. He asks that a Reformatory be established, there being 55 convicts in the penitentiary under 16 years of age.

The State Guard, composed of 33 companies, numbering 1,660 men, is roundly praised, and he shows that North Carolina does comparatively little for her militia, giving it $16,000 a year in addition to $9,488.73 given by the United States government. This is quite sufficient, if not too much, since the Guard is chiefly ornamental. We take the liberty of suggesting that if the Governor will see to it that the appropriation is not expended for overcoats for office-holders and business men; he will have less reason to ask for increased appropriations.

The report of the Railroad Commission will be summarized later.

The Governor has granted 77 pardons and nine reprieves in the last two years; $5,983.03 has been expended in rewards, etc.

The Geological Survey is unsparingly praised. He says it "has already been largely instrumental in bringing capital into the State," and it has just begun solid work. It will publish a book of 1,000 pages this year; $19,999 08 has been expended in the last two years.

Restrictions, which, from all we hear, are sorely needed, on the oyster dredging law, are advised. There is virtually no oyster industry in the State to-day, the improvidence of the present law having prostrated it.

The Weapons of Our Warfare.

Introductory Sermon preached by Rev. T. J. Taylor, Warrenton, N. C., before the Baptist State Convention at Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 6, 1894.

"For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but are mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." 2 Cor. 10: 4.

In the most corrupt period of the Roman empire, Corinth was famous for its vices and licentiousness. It is, therefore, not surprising that the Corinthian church was early troubled with irregularities and vices that seriously imperiled its existence.

This church was the result of the arduous labors of the Apostle Paul. It was the fruit of the pure gospel which he faithfully preached. While he resided in Corinth, the church doubtless maintained that purity of doctrine and practice which he everywhere enjoins. It was not long after his departure, however, until from a variety of causes serious complications arose which threatened to destroy the church. Having heard of these troubles, the Apostle wrote, for the purpose of correcting them, a letter which we call the First Epistle to the Corinthians. The teachings and recommendations of this letter seem to have been adopted by a majority of the church, but a minority still existed which persisted in opposing both Paul and his teaching. They sneered at the bodily appearance of the Apostle, called his forbearance and kindness cowardice, repudiated his teachings, laughed at his speech as insignificant, and boldly asserted that both he and his preaching were contemptibly weak. In contrast with Paul they proudly pointed to their own arrogant leaders, and boasted of their superiority, the wisdom of their teachings, and the efficiency of their methods.

In this chapter the Apostle successfully meets his opponents. He assures them that in the prosecution of his work, he is not careful to employ such instrumentalities as commend themselves to man's wisdom. But he rejoices to use the weapons that God provides; which, though they may not be approved by men, are exceedingly mighty and shall overthrow the strongholds of the opposers of righteousness; for, says he, "the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but are mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds."

In speaking of the weapons of our warfare, let us consider—

1. What they are not.

They are not carnal. Carnal weapons have always been employed in establishing and propagating the systems of religion which men have devised. This of necessity must always be so; for the products of human wisdom must rely for success upon agencies that commend themselves to the wisdom of men. Therefore most religions have been established by the use of the strong arm of the State, both civil and military. Many peoples were converted to Mohammedanism during the lifetime of the prophet, but they were not converted by the preaching of his doctrines but by the power of the sword. Jesus did not use such weapons in the establishment of Christianity, and has positively forbidden their use by his followers. "My kingdom," says he, "is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight." The only weapon that he sanctions and authorizes his followers to use is "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." This has always been found fully adequate for the defense of his kingdom, and for the overthrowing of the strongholds of his enemies.

There has always been an inclination among some of the professed followers of Christ to employ carnal weapons for the purpose of advancing the Redeemer's kingdom. This results in part, perhaps, from a misconception of the nature of the divinely appointed weapons; and also from a want of faith in their efficiency. This disposition to rely on carnal weapons has, in some countries, culminated in the union of Church and State. The professed followers of Christ, not feeling satisfied with the divine provision made for the destruction of evil and the upbuilding of righteousness, turned their backs upon God and allied themselves with the State, thus foolishly thinking to improve on God's plan, and advance Christianity by what seemed to them an exceedingly wise and effective method. They sought to make converts, not by the preaching of the gospel, but by the authority of the civil magistrate and the power of the military officer. In this they have usually succeeded, and the converts thus made have been numerous; but a very great majority of them, like our English ancestors who professed Christianity at the point of the sword, are baptized pagans.

The disposition to rely on the strong arm of the State for support is not confined to the national churches in the Old World, for even in our own country and under our free institutions many are disposed to invoke the aid of the State in the support of their moral, benevolent and educational operations. These seem to forget that there can be no union between Church and State that does not impair the spirituality of the former, deny liberty of conscience to the individual, substitute human authority for the law of God, and deny to Jesus Christ his place as Head of the Church and only Lawgiver in his kingdom. Therefore, the least tendency to employ State aid in supporting Christianity, in any of its enterprises, should be persistently resisted by the followers of Christ.

Again, some seem to think that the divinely appointed means are not sufficient for the defence of the church and the conversion of the world: therefore they turn from the gospel of Christ, which is the sword of the Spirit and the power of God, and resort to systems and methods invented by the wisdom of men.

Some are unable to see how the gospel of Christ delivered many centuries ago can successfully resist the plausible reasonings of the wise skeptics of to day. Therefore, to meet the emergency they turn from the word of God, which is always sufficient for its own defence, and evolve out of their own intellectuality arguments which they sagely imagine will utterly overthrow the systems they oppose. Poor fools! to delude themselves with the thought that their human reasoning is stronger than the word of God. Why the simplest sentence in the holy word of God is far more powerful in overcoming the enemies of Christ than the strongest argument that ever sprang from the mind of earth's wisest philosopher, and he that would overcome the enemies of Christ will find his most effective weapons in the Word of God.

Others regard the gospel of Christ as too tame and insipid to meet the demands of the present age. They fill their sermons with startling statements, blood-curdling narratives, and oftentimes with a species of slang and profanity, and laughable anecdotes better adapted to a street gamin than to a minister of the pure gospel of Christ. But by this means they are successful in winning large congregations of those who have itching ears, and in making many converts; and not a few godly men witness their success, adopt their methods and imitate their follies. Now, I do not think that there is any merit in being prosy, nor any sin in striving to preach effectively; but surely it is not necessary for one to descend to the methods of the sensationalist in order to do this. The gospel is not insipid and prosy. It is quick and powerful, it is thrilling and inspiring, it is effective in winning sinners and in confirming saints; and that man who possesses himself of its glorious truths, and learns how to use them wisely, will find himself thoroughly equipped to do valiant and effective service for the Master.

The carnal weapon may make a great show, but it is powerless for good. In this life, however, we are often disposed to sacrifice the really valuable, because it does not meet the approval of our judgment for the worthless bauble, because it happens to strike our capricious fancy. We throw away the Damascus blade of divine truth and arm ourselves with the shining but worthless weapon of the actor, and thus become weaklings in the fight. It is sad to see how much many depend upon the mere externals of religion, and lose sight of its power. Thus much dependence is had upon elegant houses of worship, eloquent sermons, thrilling music, perfect organization, and the use of a variety of taking things. One depends upon eloquence, and another upon method; one relies on money and another on learning. All these things are good, and, if wisely used, may contribute to the accomplishment of the end in view; but they must not be put forward at the expense of the gospel of Christ. All these things may exist, and no good be accomplished, because of the selfishness and pride, and conceit and self sufficiency of those who use them. It is often true that the costly house of worship is only a tomb for the spiritually dead. The eloquent sermon and thrilling music frequently fall upon the ears of those who have no heart to receive them. Many a church has been organized to death. I am not opposed to elegant houses of worship, good music, eloquent sermons, thorough organization, the wisest possible methods, and the liberal use of money for the furtherance of the kingdom of Christ. If these things are Scripturally used as the means to a great end, they will surely be blessed; but if they are looked upon as the end to be attained, they will prove a curse instead of a blessing. Many congregations look upon the erection of a magnificent house of worship, the securing of a choir of professional singers, and the providing themselves with the mere accessories of religion as the great end of their existence, forgetful of the fact that as the servants of God their highest aspiration should be to lead sinners to Christ and build up their fellow-servants in the most holy faith.

I am reminded of a conversation which occurred between a tourist and his guide. A traveler who was being shown through a cathedral asked the guide, "Are there many conversions in this house?" To which the guide indignantly responded, "Do you take this for a Methodist chapel!" Many Christians are like this man—they are in the possession of the carnal, and have no desire for the spiritual blessings which God is so ready to give them. But we as good soldiers of Jesus Christ should have no confidence in the flesh. We should turn with loathing from the vain philosophies of the world, and resist every temptation to employ the carnal methods and taking manipulations of the time-server. We should cast from us, as unworthy of the great Master whose servants we are, the carnal weapons with which the world and the Devil seek to provide us for waging warfare against their own strongholds; for if we are in Christ's army, the weapons of our warfare are not carnal.

Let us, therefore, consider—

2. What our weapons are.

The weapons of our warfare are the truths set forth in the Word of God. The Word of God is called the sword of the Spirit; it is said to be sharper than any two edged sword; it is called the power of God and has always been an invincible weapon when faithfully used by the servants of God in resisting the assaults of their spiritual foes, or when pressing forward into the enemy's country. Our Saviour thoroughly tested for us the Word of God in his memorable conflict with Satan in the wilderness of Judea. In this terrible battle he met and defeated the enemy of mankind, not by human wisdom, nor skill in argument, nor even by the exertion of his divine power, but he overcame by the Word of God.

When assaulted by Satan with the first temptation, saying "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread," Jesus drove him from the field with the resistless truth, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

The Evil One gathered up his energies, and on the pinnacle of the temple made his second assault. Again, the sword of the Spirit flashed from its scabbard and fell with crushing force upon the enemy of souls, with "It is written, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," and the Devil retired from the presence of the Lord.

Gathering his scattered forces, the father of lies advanced for the third time to assault the Man of Nazareth. But with the cry, "It is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve," the Saviour repulsed the Devil, and he fled defeated from the field.

From the example of our Saviour in this memorable conflict, we learn that the Word of God is the divinely appointed weapon for the soldiers of Christ in their warfare with the armies of sin. No matter what our condition may be, nor the character of the enemy with whom we are contending, we will find in the Bible just that help that we need to enable us to meet each special emergency. It is adapted to the instruction, the guidance and encouragement of the young. It is an unfailing source of comfort and strength to the aged. It reveals to the hungry the bread of life, and to the thirsty those fountains that never fail. It restrains from sin the sorely tempted, and strengthens the weak to do valiantly for Christ. When defeated, it shows us how to turn defeat into victory. Its truths are the invincible weapons that God puts into the hands of his saints, by which they are to "subdue kingdoms, work righteousness, obtain promises, stop the mouths of lions, quench the violence of fire, turn to flight the armies of the aliens."

The weapons of our warfare are said to be mighty. They are mighty because they are divinely provided. The Bible is the Word of God, and every truth set forth in the Bible is a word of power. God's Word is always omnipotent. In the beginning he created by the word of his power. He said, "Let there be light, and there was light." "He spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast." At his word, the universe sprang into existence, and nature in its multitudinous forms began to be. Thus we see the unlimited power of the Word of God.

God's Word is God's thought. It is the revelation of God's will, God's self to us. When God lived in human flesh, he spake and multitudes were silent before him, and the angry forces of nature became calm. He spake and disease fled from his presence, remorseless Death yielded up his victims, and devouring demons released their miserable captives. God's Word is truth, and truth is always invincible. All truth is from God—no matter whether you find it in the book of nature, in systems of philosophy, or in the Bible, it is from God. Every thread of truth in this vast universe leads up to God, just as every ray of sunshine leads up to the sun. There is no war between truths, for all truth stands on the side of God and calls him Father, while all error stands on the side of the Devil, and is persistently opposed to the kingdom of truth.

In the Word of God we have precious doctrines, specific instructions, moral requirements, positive commandments, and exceeding great and precious promises, all the mighty weapons of our warfare, to be used by us in defending the truth, in opposing wrong, in encouraging the weak, in confirming the strong, in winning souls, and in carrying forward in every possible way the great work committed to us by the Captain of our Salvation. The Word of God is given to us for use, and we must honor the Giver by faithfully using the gift. When he gave us his Word, he put in our hands an invincible weapon which will never fail us, for it is the Word of his power, and is said to be "quick and powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Feeling its power, Felix trembled; the three thousand on the day of Pentecost cried, "What must we do?" and multitudes in every age have yielded to its authority and acknowledged the God or the Bible as their Lord and their King. The weapons of our warfare are mighty because they are the Word of God.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CAMDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE brethren who have the matter in hand will please send us their union meeting programs as soon as they are prepared. We purpose printing a supplement four weeks before the date of the meetings, containing all programs and fitting remarks that are sent us in time.

A YOUNG people's organ is already complaining of lack of life in local organizations. They are on a false basis. Let them be based wholly on Christ's churches, the source of spiritual life. The world will realize some fine day that noise is not progress, that enthusiasm is not life, that wind is not spirituality.

A YOUNG preacher sends us several questions, "hoping that we will write on the subject." Too much cannot be said; but brevity ought to be sufficient where there is ordinary intelligence.

"Is it right," he begins, "for church-members to drink intoxicating liquors?" No; it is a sinful, a fearful example.

"Is it right for church-members to deal in the making or selling of intoxicating liquors?" It is worse than drinking them.

"Will a church be held responsible for keeping such men as members?" It will. Turn them out. They cannot do good; they can do humiliating evil.

We are loath to believe that our churches knowingly contain such members; but if there is one that does, let it be purged.

HELP the Home Board. It is in distress. Baptist cannot afford to take a back track. Our Southern Board has established stations in many destitute communities, and it will have to give them up unless our churches rally to its support. Godlessness, Romanism, ignorance and vice are dangerous elements in parts of our country. Unless they are fought back we will inevitably feel their influence. Where they have gained a foothold, they must be rooted out; and Baptists are the people to do it. They must now be forestalled at many frontier stations, or we will have to root them out at greater cost a little later.

Every community on earth has power for good or evil; every community will exert that power: Christians must say whether it shall be for God or Satan.

IT MAY be timely to remark that so far no one has made a reply to "How Far Should a State Educate." Prof. Howell did indeed make four or five columns of assertions and charges, Dr. Manning did get set straight on the religious liberty question, Dr. Battle made a random remark now and then, Prof. McIver did circulate some figures that seem to have possessed boomerang qualities, Prest. Winston has had a word or two now and then, the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the University, headed by the Governor, did surely get out a statement of "facts" as a kind of campaign document, several little anonymous writers and one or two editors have passed a word occasionally; but no one has offered a reply to Prest. Taylor.

Now this is unaccountable, if Prest. Taylor's arguments are as weak as some would have us think. Some one might have shown up their weaknesses and saved us all this trouble, even if there is no one who would care to do it for the sake of drawing fine salaries from the State, or, as they say, in order to keep open the doors of the State-aided institutions. It really does seem that if there are defenders of State-aid who think that withdrawal of the appropriations will injure any institution, if there are any who think our claims are likely to do less good than harm, that they are unwise, inexpedient or wrong, it does seem that they would have shown the basis of their belief long ago. Are the patriots all dead, or have they been transformed into prophets?

The public may be sure, if any of Dr. Taylor's arguments could be refuted, it would have been done; if any charge of narrowness, bigotry, short sightedness or selfishness could be sustained, the RECORDER would have been overwhelmed with writers with that purpose long ago.

But as it is, we only hear charges, accusations, pleas, prophecies and insinuations, some anonymous, others open, all unsustained. There are able men who would defend State aid. An able man, however, knows the difference between possible and impossible tasks.

In the beginning we pronounced the argument "logically invincible;" we have no reason to alter that opinion, but feel rather stronger in it.

THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF BAPTIST CHURCHES.—NO. 3.

The historical argument has been briefly stated, showing that the Baptists are the only Apostolic people; who, under different names and in widely separated lands, protested through the ages against the abominations of papal idolatry, crowning, from time to time, their testimony with the undying splendors of martyrdom. Their history is like the path of the just, a light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day; yea, a stream of glory that widens and brightens as it approaches the day when men and churches will be required to give account of their deeds. And yet, we are not unduly concerned about the history of our people; for the conclusive argument for the divine origin of our churches is based on the identity of our doctrines with those of the New Testament. This is the crucial test to which all creeds must finally submit; and, in our candid judgment, when weighed in the gospel balances, Rome and her Pedo-baptist daughters will be found wanting.

It is our purpose now to show that the Baptists are the true successors of the Apostles in faith, practice, and life. The first church at Jerusalem was a regular Missionary Baptist church. Like it were the churches at Ephesus, Corinth, Philippi, and the seven churches in Asia; all Baptist bodies, organized after the same plan, and characterized by the same principles, as distinguish modern Baptists. We submit a comparison.

1. The Apostolic churches acknowledged Jesus as their founder, calling themselves the church of Christ. They suffered NO ecclesiastical tinkering of human hands, no errors of human minds, but gladly accepted the divinely-given model. This is equally true of Baptists; no man looms up as their head, no man has prescribed their creed, while Christ is their only law-giver.

2. The government of the church was exercised by the body itself. Each church was independent and sovereign; there was no higher ecclesiastical authority, and from its decisions there was no appeal. It was not the tool of a pope, a council, a convention, a conference or a synod; but was divinely complete within itself. It received members, and was sole arbiter in all matters of discipline. The persistent offender was to have his case laid before the entire membership for trial. "Tell it to the church," said Christ. He did not say, Tell it to the priest, nor the clergy, nor the presiding elder, nor the bishop, nor the pope, nor the Conference, nor the Synod, but the church; and that was the end of it. Paul so understood the matter, when, in regard to a certain scandal, he wrote directly to the church at Corinth, "Put away from among yourselves that wicked person." The Apostle seems to have been entirely ignorant of such an ecclesiastical court as the Session of elders, the Presbytery, the Preacher in Charge, or the Conference. But never mind; Paul knew enough without that.

The church elected its officers then as now. When the Apostleship of Judas was to be filled, the Eleven did not for a moment attempt to supply the vacancy, but assembled the one hundred and twenty disciples, "and they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Matthias." When the Apostles felt the need of official help in the temporal affairs of the church, they submitted the matter to the whole church, who elected seven men, commonly reckoned as deacons.

There were but two classes of officers, bishops, also called elders, and deacons. The bishop was simply a pastor, with no higher office, was of no more importance, and received no greater salary than the modern Baptist preacher. The church knew nothing of such inventions as subdeacon, archdeacon, curate, rector, prebendary, vicar, priest, canon, monk, friar, abbot, primate, Rt. Rev., pope, and a score of others, if not quite so pompous, at least quite as unscriptural. Imagine an individual introduced to the Apostle Paul as the Rt. Rev. Thomas Brown, or Cardinal Jones, or Pope Leo, and he would have more likely taken him for a chimney-sweep than a clergyman.

3. The church was composed of confessedly regenerated persons, addressed by the sacred writers as saints, sons of God, sanctified, as having passed from death unto life, children of light, heirs of Christ, temples of the Holy Ghost; while our Lord sets forth the unity of his people with himself under the symbol of a vine and its branches—a living and blessed union, impossible alike to unconverted adults and unconscious babes. On this doctrine the Scriptures lay unmeasured stress, which, because of that fact, is the most distinguishing feature of a Baptist church. The attempt to incorporate into the church of Christ either infants or adults on the ground that such a step may do them good, seems to be one of the most monstrous perversions of revealed truth in the history of ecclesiastical crime.

4. The church knew but one baptism, and that, as to the physical act, was a simple immersion of the candidate in water. The Apostles were wholly ignorant of any such church rites as sprinkling or pouring. Paul had quite a varied experience, yet in all of his travels and perils, in his labors and dangers, he never had the burdens of life augmented by beholding so sad a scene as sprinkling or pouring performed as a religious ordinance.

5. The Lord's Supper was celebrated in the church, through whose door of baptism its members had passed; thus, of necessity, following that ordinance. We search the records of the early churches in vain to discover a single instance in which the Supper was offered to unbaptized persons. So, like Baptists now, and in the same sense, the early Christians were close communionists. And, moreover, we challenge all Christendom to adduce a single instance in which an Episcopalian, a Presbyterian, or a Methodist was ever invited by an Apostolic church to the Lord's Table.

Between the New Testament church and no other, but the Baptist, can this parallelism of doctrine and practice be found; hence our proposition is sustained—Baptist churches are of divine origin.

IF THE Assembly will pass the anti-saloon bill and extend the advantages of common schools, it will not be necessary to have a Reformatory, as is proposed.

This is true economy.

It is short-sighted to foster criminal-makers and then build institutions to reform them.

The good record of Robeson county, in which there are no saloons, but a great many schools, goes to show that where conditions are right, reformatories are unnecessary.

Saloons and ignorance are the parents of crime.

THE strongest of the three editorials on the "Divine Origin of Baptist Churches" is printed this week. Our claims are strong by inference, stronger in History, but strongest in comparison with the doctrines of the Great Founder of Baptist churches—Jesus Christ. If a church does not come up to the New Testament standard, it is not scriptural, and, therefore, dangerous; if it goes beyond that standard, it is the more dangerous. It is well to look backward to the early days and take courage.

In this connection it is not impertinent to ask attention to the first half of the Convention sermon in this issue. It has to do with the New Testament "Weapons of Our Warfare" and the more modern human substitutes that are gaining deplorable popularity in many pulpits. If this discourse could be sent home to the hearts of the "new age," "modern method" brethren, in or out of the Baptist church, much would be accomplished towards a return to the simple but effective Christian preaching of the gospel. It is a sad fact that zeal for new methods has in many instances largely over-shadowed the cause of Christ.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

The first week in January I was in Durham. I was just thinking how much sameness is about my work—going to see the same brethren in the same places, where they are doing the same things they were doing in January, 1894.

This is just as it has always been—last year's work will not count for the things of to-day. Some things, however, are changed. Some are not here who were here last year: they are gone, and others fill up the broken ranks. This is right and natural. The best interest of heaven and earth is preserved in the death of people just as in their birth.

I found what I needed in Durham, viz., encouragement in my work. The brethren spoke with all kindness of the RECORDER and the good work it did the past year, making large wishes for its success in 1895.

You almost have to dodge the brethren to get to the hotel. They were greatly interested in securing a good house for Rev. Tom Dixon, who was to be there in a few nights to lecture in the interest of the First Baptist church. North Carolina wants Tom, whether Texas does or not. The contemplated improvement amounts practically to a new church, and will cost about $7,000. The wisdom in this move is, the money will be in hand when the work is begun. Whoever asks for credit must pay for it, and this is just as true of a church as of an individual. Bro. Tyree was on his horse facing the cold wind and rain, and looked as serene, as happy and as determined as if his horse's head had been turned in the direction of Oxford, and he had been on his way to read Greek and Hebrew with Bro. Hardaway. Strange how fascinating these things become as a man grows in age and experience.

Later I called on Mr. G. W. Watts who very kindly told me about the new hospital, which has just been completed. I had learned from others that this was an individual enterprise of Mr. Watts. The building is one of the handsomest in the State, and I learned from the architect, a gentleman from Boston, Mass., that it is the most perfectly constructed and best adapted hospital in the United States. The building has cost thirty thousand dollars, and will be endowed by Mr. Watts. No charges will be made against patients, but the best medical and other attention will be given without cost to them. Mr. Watts said to me that for the sake of doing the most good possible, directors had been chosen from all the religious denominations in the town, and that it would be furnished with the best and most experienced nurses. The medical attention will be furnished by the resident physicians of Durham. The action of Mr. Watts is that of a patriot, a philanthropist, a Christian, and ought to give him a place in the affections of every man who love humanity, and pities the suffering.

A short visit to the office of Mr. J. S. Carr, and then I am ready to take my place on the west-bound train. When you enter the front door of this establishment, which in my opinion needed just a little more advertising, you considerably lack of being where you have started into the office of the President of the U. S. You are behind the bars when you first enter, but if you will be patient and wait your turn, then you can have your say. "Everything comes to him who knows how to wait." I waited, and I can wish others who do likewise no pleasanter or more cordial reception than I received.

Next week we will talk about Greensboro, Winston and other points we may reach.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. H. W. Battle has been visiting his parents at Newbern.

....Rev. H. M. Wharton will preach to Wake Forest's next graduating class.

....Rev. A. C. Dixon has been holding meetings at Worchester, Mass., with Moody.

....Rev. A. McA. Pittman is now at Elloree, S. C., instead of Black Stock, S. C.

....Rev. R. B. John changes his address from Washington, N. C., to Elizabeth City, N. C.

....We sympathize with Rev. J. L. Stewart of Clinton, who lost his wife, the 8th inst.

....Rev. J. M. Carroll has handed in his resignation as Secretary of the Texas Mission Band.

....Prof. H. H. Harris, one of the ablest Baptists in the land, has resigned the Chair of Greek in Richmond College.

....Rev. Z. D. Harrill of Ellenboro sends a new subscriber and says he is getting on with his work as well as usual.

....Rev. W. F. Fry will be ordained at Bayboro the 27th. He is a Wake Forest man and an active young preacher.

....Please read and pray over Bro. Jno. Mitchell's letter about the young men whom God has called to further the gospel.

....Miss Angeline White, who died recently, left a $1,000 estate to be given to Wake Forest College after the death of certain heirs.

....Rev. Hight C. Moore of Monroe has engagements in several communities to lecture. He uses a magic lantern to illustrate the lectures.

....Since Dr. J. L. Carroll suggested his plan for endowing the University, it has been announced that a former student has given it $300.

....Revs. M. L. Kesler and J. W. Johnston have been holding an interesting meeting at Montpelier church, says the Laurinburg Exchange.

....Mrs. Rebecca Greene, an aunt of Rev G. W. Greene of China, died last week at her home at Leander. She was a good and faithful woman.

....We regret to hear that Rev. G. H. Church, the beloved Statesville pastor, slipped and broke a small bone in his leg, during the freeze.

....Rev. C. N. Donaldson of Norfolk, Va., has been unanimously called to the pastorate of the Fifth (Bell Avenue) B. Street church, Atlanta, Ga.

....We are glad to announce that our venerable brother, D. Farthing of Hattie mention of whose serious illness we recently made, is much better.

....Bro. C. G. Wells has a prosperous school at Warsaw, and in addition to his school work he frequently preaches at various points in that section.

....John D. Rockefeller gave Chicago University $175,000 recently. Rockefeller is probably the most useful and baptistic part of the great institution.

....Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston completed a twenty-five years pastorate recently; Dr. C. C. Brown has completed twenty years pastorate at Sumpter, S. C.

....We are much obliged to Messrs. Edwards & Broughton, printers and binders, for a handsome 1895 calendar. The work of this firm is too well-known to our readers to need commendation by us.

....Prof. W. G. Quakenbush, one of the ablest Baptist school teachers in our State, was a pleasant visitor to the RECORDER office last week. He has been teaching at Laurinburg for sixteen years. He and his people are making a fine effort to have the General Assembly incorporate the county of Scotland.

....A good sister, Miss Anna H. Darden of Seaboard, sent us five new subscribers last week. We thank her heartily both for the telling way of showing her good will and her admirable example.

....It is a pleasure to acknowledge receipt of a card from Mr. and Mrs. Jno. D. Davis, announcing the marriage of their daughter, Lena Clyde, to Mr. Robert Lee Humber, at Beaufort, N. C., Jan. 31st.

....Rev. W. P. Fife, evangelist, writes: "God blessed my work last year with nearly 2,500 professions of religion. We had a great meeting at Covington, Ky., in December." He is at Princeton, Ky., now.

....Rev. A. C. Barron, Baltimore, is aiding Pastor J. F. Love at Suffolk, Va., in meetings. Dr. Barron has resigned his Baltimore pastorate in order to labor for the Evangelization Society, the new Wharton invention.

....Rev. E. E. Blount, who temporarily gave up his church at Clyde to go to Baltimore for treatment, is able to preach again, and has been occupying the pulpit at Cambridge, Md. Rev. Geo. Wharton is preaching at Clyde.

....Rev. M. L. Kesler preached a sermon in his church at night on Foreign Missions, which was above his average, and that is saying a good deal, for he is everywhere acknowledged to be an uncommonly able man. —Red Springs Citizen.

....The Florida Baptist Witness, Rev. C. S. Farriss editor, recently occupied its new three-story building. The event was celebrated with appropriate ceremonies, several distinguished Baptists taking part. May the Witness be blessed abundantly in its new home.

....Speaking of the anti-saloon bill, the Davidson Dispatch says: "North Carolina could well afford to pass such a law with great benefit to the best element of the people of the State." We wish more of our State secular papers would speak out on this question.

....Col. J. S. Carr has made a handsome contribution to our Baptist Female University endowment. It can be truly said of this large-hearted gentleman that his benevolence knows no bounds. Several years ago he gave a large sum of money to Wake Forest College.

....Our Foreign Mission debt is $50,000. This is not much to 2,000,000 Baptists. Remember, brethren, that it is due to over estimation, based on the centennial year contribution and failure to anticipate the "stringency." Let's pay out by May and instruct against debt thereafter.

....Rev. K. C. Horner, the new pastor of the Baptist church, preached an able sermon in that house on Sunday night, and the Baptists are to be congratulated upon their choice. He will move his family here at an early date and they will add to our town.—Siler City cor. Chatham Record.

....Those who are in earnest against saloons never had a better opportunity of proving it than the present. Send as many names and as many petitions as possible to the General Assembly. Every Baptist in the State ought to be heard from in the next thirty days. What say you, pastors?

....New subscribers are coming in encouragingly. The brethren and sisters who favored us last week have won our lasting gratitude. A pull altogether will have us beyond the 7,000 mark before we know it. We ought to work together, pastors and people, for a scripturally cultured membership.

....Dr. J. A. Mundy, pastor of the Baptist church here, has received a call to the church in Henderson. Dr. Mundy has done a great work since he has been in Wilson, and it would be a great loss to the Baptists if he were to accept the call thus extended. We hope that he will decide to stay.—Wilson Advance.

....The N. C. Christian Advocate will pardon us for saying that notwithstanding its great desire to give "no uncertain sound" on the education question, there are several Methodist brethren in Raleigh who could not tell the puzzled RECORDER editor the meaning of its latest editorial. Speak out, brethren, loud and clear.

....There are many good people in North Carolina, people who revere the memory of the Confederate dead and honor the living, who will be indignant to hear that some women who have the monument fund in charge have gotten up a fancy ball for the alleged purpose of raising money. Vanity, vanity, vanity!

....It will be to our mutual advantage if the pastors will urge their people to take advantage of our offer of the RECORDER from Jan. 9th to May 10th for fifty cents; this is less than three cents a week. Who cannot afford that? One cent extra, and we send an Almanac, a copy of which every Baptist ought to hang by his fireside.

....With the RECORDER at fifty cents for nineteen weeks, running a series of articles especially designed to indoctrinate, there can be no excuse for weak memberships any longer. Remember we have an extra supply of last issue and this issue, in order that new subscribers may get the benefit of the entire series. If the money is not convenient, we will send the paper on any pastor's security.

....For the first time in nearly forty years Rev. Jno. T. Albritton, one of the ablest, most faithful and godly preachers in the State, is out of the pastorate. Brother Albritton ought not, it seems to us, be allowed to remain out of the regular work a day longer. Always a good pastor, his experience and ripe learning qualify him for better work than ever before. We hope some pastorless church on or near a railroad and in reach of him will see fit to call Bro. Albritton. He may be addressed at Mount Olive, N. C.

....Rev. J. W. Rose of Craven county has nine preaching stations. Three churches have been organized under his ministry in the last two years. Our Newbern Baptists have the credit of employing Bro. Rose, who is doing this good work.

....Can we not get every pastor to canvass, or get him to secure some one to canvass his church for the RECORDER? Many have helped us. We have made arrangements that warrant us in promising that the RECORDER will be unusually helpful the coming year.

....A brother suggests that the change of the Baptist's (Baltimore) name to Evangel is rather timely, since in the issue announcing the change, a Bible conference was announced to be held in a church of which one of the Evangel editors is pastor, and a woman was on the program to make a speech. Evangels may do as they please, but Baptists must stand by God's whole Word.

....Bro. L. M. Welch writes from Waynesville, N. C.: "As a result of a gracious meeting held in our church continuing some seven weeks, we had an ingathering of over fifty, forty five of whom have been baptized, which has so disturbed the surrounding waters that our Pedo friends have launched out in baptismal sermons from their pulpits, and have created 'quite a stir.'"—Western Recorder.

....Bro. A. J. Taylor has moved from the Mt. Zion Association to Mt. Olive, in the Eastern Association. He has already secured his field of labor and begun work. We take great pleasure in commending Bro. Taylor to those who may not know him. He will do good service for the churches in that section of the State. Bro. A. A. Butler is nicely situated at Mt. Olive. Bro. L. R. Carroll says he is doing a fine work, and is constantly growing in favor with his people.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton, Roanoke, Va., writes: "With the church at our back we are waging a great battle against unbelief in Roanoke City. G. W. Argobright, the best musical leader and personal worker I know, has charge of song services and Bible readings. I am doing the preaching every night. The Christian people are at work on the streets. We are holding noon meetings at railroad shops. It is even thus early a gracious work. As soon as I close at home, I am to help Dr. Hall of Norfolk."

....A recent number of the Baptist Banner of West Virginia contains a picture of Rev. J. W. Carter, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church of Raleigh, N. C. There is also a sketch of his life, in which it is said that "for a quarter of a century J. W. Carter was accorded the first place in West Virginia as a pulpit orator." He has no superior in North Carolina as a preacher. His sermons are uniformly good, and he never fails to impress his hearers as a man of admirable simplicity and deep spirituality; frank, kindly and sympathetic.

....The charge that Rev. G. W. Greene of China, advises a compromise of the meaning of the word baptize in Chinese translations is probably true. It is humiliating to believe it. This much can be said in tolerance: Bro. Greene's environment is different form ours, and we cannot appreciate his point of view. But this does not help the matter. Baptists are right, and it is wrong to compromise the right. We hope Bro. Greene will write on the matter to thousands of friends who read the RECORDER.

....Rev. O. C. Horton does our heart good. Here he is with good news and three new subscribers almost before he has begun work on his new field. He writes: "We are in our new home in East Durham, unpacked, and our goods nearly arranged as we want them. About ready now for work among this people. Hope the Lord sent us here and will make us a blessing to the church and people at large a blessing to us. May the Lord's blessings also attend the RECORDER and Wake Forest College during the year 1895."

....The following from Rev. W. B. Waff, one of the safest men in the North Carolina pastorate, because he is one of the godliest, speaks for itself: "Would it not be well to publish the features of the Mississippi temperance law, and also a form of petition to the Legislature requesting them to pass such a law for this State; and urge the pastors all over the State to copy off the petition and get the people to sign it and send it to the Legislature? It seems to me there ought to be a united effort to secure this if possible. Gates county has elected a good temperance man to represent her in the Legislature."

....The Rt. Rev. Jos. Blount Cheshire, Bishop of North Carolina, has issued a card authorizing and requesting "the clergy of the Diocese of North Carolina" to insert in their prayer for Congress, "after the words, in the Congress assembled, the following words, and the General Assembly of this State now in session." On the day this request and authorization was issued, the RECORDER received an address to parents from Rev. Daniel J. Currie, pastor Presbyterian church, Chapel Hill, notifying them that Rev. R. G. Pearson was to begin a revival at Chapel Hill the 20th inst., and asking that they pray for a fruitful meeting.

Royall Chair.

Received for Royall Chair from W. N. Jones, $50.00; James T. Etheridge, 5 00; Mrs. I. O. Walters, 50c.; Wyatt M. Walters, 4 00; Dr. A. T. Cotton, 5.00; S. F. Page, 5.00. Total, $69 50.

THOMAS H. BRIGGS,
Treas. W. F. College.

I send you two dollars. I do not know what amount I should send, as to value; it is impossible to estimate the worth of the RECORDER. Times are very dull financially, but I want the RECORDER to visit me.—D. H. Gore, Barnes, N. C.

More Love Letters.

In the great Mass-meeting on the Endowment of the Royal chair, I gladly yield the floor for the addresses of several of the Alumni.

The same mail brought me yesterday, among others, three letters from three States. The first is from Florida and contained three notes filled out with promises for the Royal Chair. The writer says, "Two months ago I would have willingly promised five times as much. Dec. 27th and 28th we had a freeze here that ruined every orange tree I had. That is our source of income. You will readily see my condition. I trust the amount will be raised and send best wishes for Wake Forest and all connected with it."

The next writes from Texas, "I have delayed a few days, hoping that I might make a cash gift instead of the first note. But Texas has felt the hard times, and this has been impossible. I am desirous however, of helping to do anything that would honor the memory of Dr. Royall, who was one of the men whose influence over my life is likely to be lasting. If I can increase my subscription hereafter I shall cheerfully do so." If all would do as well as he has done, success would be assured.

The letter from Virginia says; "I am glad that Wake Forest College is to be put upon a stronger basis and I am glad that I can help in doing it. It will always be a great joy to me to do all that I can for its prosperity and usefulness. If I can see, before my notes mature, that I can do more I shall be glad to increase."

This one is from a Wake county man. "I have not returned the notes, hoping that I would make some collections and be able to help. The way looks dark now but I hope times will improve soon and prospects be brighter in the future."

An aged and beloved brother, who has often helped the College before, writes, "It is my purpose, the Lord helping me, to give $50.00 this year for the Endowment, and, if the Lord is good to me and spares my life long enough, to give $50.00 more in the future."

One of the Class of '94 says, "You will find enclosed my notes for $— for the Royall Chair. I feel more interest in Wake Forest than ever, and I am praying that we may see your expectations accomplished. I send my notes for but a small sum, but I felt that I must do something."

One of the Class of '93 writes, "I have never had any object to appeal to me more strongly on its own merits than this appeal for Wake Forest, and I do not know that I have ever made a contribution that has given me as much pleasure as this one. I hope that I can do more before the matter is closed."

This is from a teacher, "I am very much rejoiced at the effort you are making for dear old Wake Forest. May god bless you abundantly in all your efforts. My notes are filled out to the best of my financial ability, but if every alumnus and friend of the College will give as much as I have promised, in proportion to their ability, our College will not be second to any."

This comes from an old student in New York City, "As I told you when you were here, I hope to be able to do something substantial for good old Wake Forest College in the near future."

This was written almost in sound of the ocean's breakers, "I had already signed and returned my three notes and I now return those received from you on yesterday. I wish that I could do more for my Alma Mater. She is worthy of the hearty support of each of her sons."

A business man in Kentucky in returning his notes says, "My recollections of Wake Forest are exceedingly pleasant, and I have watched with interest her progress. Many of her graduates have fine positions of honor and usefulness in Kentucky."

This comes from South Carolina, (with the notes filled out); "I shall watch with interest the action of the brethren in their effort to honor God, to increase the efficiency of the College and to raise a monument to Dr. Royall, the kindest and purest of men. I shall never forget the fatherly interest he took in me, a green gawky young fellow from the country."

An excellent brother writes, "I am not financially able to promise anything at this time, but I am heartily in sympathy with this movement. I shall always remember Dr. Royall with love and respect."

This is from another part of North Carolina. "My heart is with you in this work and I pray God that your efforts may be blessed in the desired amount raised. I shall ever love Wake Forest College."

A brother writes from among the mountains: "It really affords me great pleasure to have this opportunity of aiding Wake Forest College in its onward march." Still another alumnus says, "I love Wake Forest College and love the memory of Dr. Royall. If my ability only equalled my desire, I would advance all the necessary amount at once."

A doctor says, "I hope that this work will be pushed to completion at an early date. My best wishes are with the College and all the branches of its work."

A lawyer writes, "I return the notes filled out. I trust that this may help you in your cause, and that your efforts to raise the desired amount may be successful. I often think of the days I spent at Wake Forest and think that I shall spend the next Anniversary there. I wish you great success in your undertaking."

Here is what a preacher says, "I should be very glad to do more; but my family is large and my salary small, two things that do not work very well together. I rejoice in the success of the College and hope that we may yet see it all that we desire it to be."

Many others claim the floor for expression of their views; but time is up.—for this week.

I wish I could get the members of my church to subscribe for the RECORDER.—H. W. Reinhart.

Resolutions Adopted by Selma Church.

WHEREAS, Rev. O. C. Horton, who has so faithfully served us as pastor for six years, has now, by the will of the Lord we trust, seen fit to separate from us, and accept labors in other fields; therefore be it Resolved 1. That we, the members of Selma Baptist church, do hereby express our hearty appreciation of the faithful manner in which Bro. Horton has expounded the truth to the upbuilding of our church.

Resolved 2. That we do heartily commend him to the brethren and sisters of his new fields as an earnest, faithful worker.

Resolved 3. That in parting with Bro. Horton, we extend our love and sympathy, and pray that the blessings of God may rest on him and his, and may his labors in his new fields prosper, and may many be brought to know the truth as it is in Jesus.

Resolved 4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, and that a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication. L. F. BAILEY, Clerk.

The Hyde County House.

Dear Recorder:—Many of the brethren and sisters who have heard of this work did not wait for me to write to them, but wrote to me and sent a contribution. Many to whom I wrote did the same thing and sent contributions also. God bless them.

Brethren, those of you who have not helped us, please do not forget to do so. This is your work. Brother minister, please do not pass us by unnoticed this time. Lay this need before your churches. Brethren and sisters, I have confidence in you. I have never called upon you before. Do hear my humble request, which I make in Jesus' name. Please help each one of you. Let each one give something. Pennies make the dollars. God will reward you. I will thank you, and you will feel better by having helped your struggling brother.

We want to dedicate this house, but do not like to do so until we can provide for this $482 debt upon the house. God bless the brethren and open their hearts. All amounts received will be published in the RECORDER. Please send all contributions from churches or individuals to me at Hertford, N. C. JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

Hertford, N. C.

Bro. Lamberth at Reidsville.

Dear Recorder:—Let me tell you and the brethren elsewhere some things I saw and heard about the Baptists in Reidsville, N. C.

I came in on the train Sunday evening, Jan. 6, 1895, just in time to drop in at the Baptist church and worship with the saints. I saw the large house crowded to hear the first of a series of sermons by the pastor on "The Man Christ Jesus." Then on the following Tuesday evening at a supper given by Mr. and Mrs. John E. Lamberth in their home on Main street, I met with Brother and Sister Adams, who told me some of the plans the Baptist people have in view this year. They expect to support Bro. Royall, their missionary in China. At the same time they will largely support Bro. Callum, their home missionary, who will live in the town and country, and through him they contemplate building two new chapels at out stations.

May their zeal provoke many to enter more heartily and largely into the Master's work at home and abroad.

I leave Greenville where I have been preaching for two years. I received nothing but kindness from the noble people there. I enter on my work at Mount Airy, Jan. 13, hoping that the Holy Spirit is directing me.

J. H. LAMBERTH.

Mount Airy, N. C.

Mt. Airy.

Bro. Bailey:—Bro. J. H. Lamberth took charge of the work here last Sunday, and notwithstanding the extremely cold weather, his congregation was very good, and the brethren and others present were well pleased with his first sermon.

On Monday, the last day of Christmas, I went to Stokes county, a distance of twenty-five miles (most of the way on the ice).

New Year's morning at ten o'clock I married Dr. Nick Rierson and Miss Annie Martin. The morning was bright, and the young couple were bright and happy, and started a new life on New Year's day. There were quite a number present to witness the marriage.

Immediately after the ceremony, all went to the church (Potter's Creek) where we met quite a number. I preached to them from the text, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." We had quite an interesting service.

Since the Convention, I have been trying to get it fixed in my mind how the changing of the name of the Female University to "Woman's College" could be better, or sound better. If a thing doesn't sound well, it is not apt to do well. I once asked a preacher, who knew nothing for certain about the rules of grammar, how he could speak and arrange a sentence correctly. He said he could tell by the sound of it. So we can all tell what Female University means by the sound of it. I think it best to let the name stand: it is not best for Baptists to be so changeable.

Our Baptist people in this part of the State seem determined to move forward in the Lord's work, notwithstanding the hard times. There is scarcely any money in circulation.

Many would take the RECORDER if they had the money. The RECORDER is as new and interesting to me to-day as it was twenty years ago when I first began to take it. It has been of great service to me in my work. Yours,

O. C. HORTON.

Mt. Airy, Jan. 16, 1895.

The Board of Education.

The condition of the Board of Education distresses me. At the Convention in Charlotte, the Board reported a debt of $500; thirty-six beneficiaries received; others asking for help, but could be received for the lack of means; and asked for advice.

The Convention said help, and authorized the Board by resolution to increase the number of beneficiaries to forty-five if deemed wise, and said, "that we, the pastors of the churches and delegates to this Convention, will aid the Corresponding Secretary in securing the funds needed for the work."

But the contributions have not increased, but fallen off, and the Board has been compelled since the Convention to borrow $300 to meet current expenses; still other applications for help are coming in.

I make this plain statement to my brethren, and give them an opportunity of coming to the relief of the Board, and helping our indigent young ministers for Jesus' sake, and asking the churches to take collections for the Board of Education, and forward to our Treasurer, Bro. J. D. Boushall, Raleigh, N. C.

W. F. College, Jan. 18, 1895.

Arrival of Bro. Bryan and Party in China.

Dear Recorder:—Last Saturday, December 1, was a day of rejoicing in the Baptist Mission at Shanghai. That was the day of the arrival of Bro. Bryan and party.

Since Mother Yates went home to heaven, Mrs. Tatum and I have had no fellow-laborer except the silent partner we have had in Mrs. Annie Yates Seaman,—and to have Bro. Bryan and wife with Misses Lottie Price and Willie Kelly come to us in one day was a big blessing. Bro. W. W. Lawton passed on to Soochow to be associated with Bro. Britton. Miss Julia Mackenzie went to join the mission at Chinkiang. We rejoice with the Soochow Station and the Chinkiang Mission in these much heard of and well chosen reinforcements.

The joy of those returning and of those coming for the first time was apparent, too. As we all met, some were too full for utterance, and others were too full to contain themselves.

The Lord bless these who have come and all who helped them to come, and grant that we may ever rejoice in his love and delight to witness concerning it. All well.

With sincere, hearty thanks,

E. F. TATUM.

Shanghai, China, Dec. 8, 1894.

Bro. Hopkins and Mr. Booth.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Yours of several days ago to hand.

I requested the republication of the resolutions of New Bethany church and that meeting of the S. Y. Union relative to Bro. J. H. Booth—first, because I believed it to be my duty to answer the item in the personals of the BIBLICAL RECORDER of June 13th, 1894; second, in order to comply with the request of members of the same church with Bro. W. W. Bridges, who wrote you from Shawnee, N. C.

Bro. Booth's views were not presented to that Union Meeting, as subsequent information proves, and thus a man of straw was set up, and we knocked it down with a resolution.

He to New Bethany church publicly declared himself as holding views contrary to those generally held by Baptists, and that he was no longer a member of a Baptist church. Whereupon New Bethany church withdrew from him the hand of church fellowship, declaring themselves no longer responsible for his teachings.

Thus, Bro. Booth left us. But he did it as and like a Christian gentleman.

When I found that we had been misinformed as to his doctrines, I (as an individual) confessed the wrong which I felt I had done him, and asked him to forgive me for it, which he did, weeping.

I made a similar confession to a subsequent Union Meeting at New Hope church, and to the churches of which I was pastor at the time. Also, to others of our brethren; and had I then known that he had been accused in those resolutions of making a false statement, I would have asked you at once to publish my disclaimer.

I was a member of that committee, but did not write the resolutions. If I signed them (and my impression is that I did), I did so, not noticing that expression in them when I did it. I do not believe that any fair-minded man would willingly assail his character for truth or honesty.

I have known him for about thirteen years, have seen him sorely tried in divers ways, and I helped to brand him as being a Second Adventist, which I afterward found he was not, and never had been; but I have never found the shadow of deviation from the truth in the man,—therefore, could not have accused him of falsehood.

Now as to the item in the RECORDER referred to above: Bro. Booth, so far as I have learned after inquiry, has never asked to preach in a Baptist church building. In every instance, pastors or members, or both, have asked him, and generally insisted on his doing so.

He never was "connected with the United Brethren." Hence, these two charges are are wrong.

He is sound on the doctrines of grace. He believes and teaches religious liberty, converted or regenerated membership, the Scriptures and the Holy Spirit as the only rule and guides to faith and practice, a God-called and directed ministry, independence of local churches (or "assemblies," as he calls their gatherings for worship), missions at home and abroad, and is an indefatigable worker wherever you may find him.

True, Bro. Booth holds views which none of us believe that the Scriptures teach. That is his own business before his Maker, and none of mine. He has never in my hearing (and I have heard him often) mentioned them in our church buildings.

This much I have written, not as flying to the help of one more mighty than I can hope to become, but with a sense of justice to all concerned. Fraternally,

W. J. HOPKINS.

Literary.

The Elksville Girls. By Mrs. Susan M. Griffith. 12mo, 289 pages. Price, $1.00. Philadelphia: Am. Bap. Pub. Society.

This book is very readable and interesting, and on its pages time can be well spent.

The current Quarterly Illustrator is in keeping with the reputation of that excellent journal of art. The contents range from "The Origin of a Type of the American Girl," to a series of reproductions of Grutzner's famous German monks; from Parisian art to that of our own National Capital; from abstract discussion of relevant subjects, calculated to aid artists and foster artistic taste, to a strikingly illustrated story by Boyesen. There are a hundred or more illustrations. The "Illustrator" must be invaluable to artists; it is indeed the best medium we know to develop that perceptive taste to which all should aspire. Four times a year; single copy, 35 cents; one dollar per annum. Harry C. Jones, 92-94 Fifth Avenue, New York City, editor and publisher.

Anglo Israel, Jewish Problem and Supplement. By Thos R. Howlett, D. D., Philadelphia. 256 pp. Price, $1.00.

This is a well made and attractive book. It is divided into seven parts, but only one truth is aimed at in the whole book, viz., the identification of the Anglo Saxon race with the ten lost tribes of Israel. The book is well written, and the plan ingenious and well wrought. While every one will not agree with Dr. Howlett in the conclusion reached in the book, still it must be admitted that he has done more toward solving the Jewish problem satisfactorily than any man we know. The most plausible reason assigned for his position, to our mind, is to be found in Chapters 4 and 5, Part 4, on Migration. It would be very hard to make it more plausible. His Scriptural proofs are also good and in many instances striking, but on the whole far from being conclusive. The book is well worth reading, and can be obtained from the author by forwarding to him the price at 16 S. 9th, Philadelphia.

Annihilation of the Wicked.

BY JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

This doctrine is contrary to the general belief of mankind.

If it be a truth, it is unquestionably one whose disbelief and rejection would be infinitely better for this fallen world than its general acceptance. This is a strong presumptive proof of its utter falsity.

Cicero said: "If I am wrong in believing that the souls of men are immortal, I please myself in my mistake; nor while I live will I ever choose that this opinion with which I am so much delighted should be wrested from me. But if, at death, I am to be annihilated, as some minute philosophers suppose, I am not afraid lest those wise men, when extinct too, should laugh at my error."

The following language has been ascribed to Hume: "Disbelief in futurity loosens in a great measure the ties of morality, and may be supposed for that reason to be pernicious to the peace of civil society."

Voltaire is represented as having said to some friends who once proposed, in the presence of his servants to enter upon the discussion of the principles of atheism, "Wait till my servants have withdrawn; I do not wish to have my throat cut to night."

The belief of this doctrine, on the part of the wicked and criminal classes, is conducive to the increase of suicide, murder, licentiousness, socialism, anarchy, and every other crime that threatens the peace of society and the stability of government. All restraints imposed by a belief in a future state and the retributions of eternity being removed, what remains, in the hour of opportunity and provocation, to stay the hand of murder, to check the greed of lust, to quench the torch of incendiarism, or to quell the mad spirit of riot and anarchy? With no dread of God, eternity, retribution, or anything else after death, to deter them from the commission of any crime to which their hellish passions may incite them, a community of such men would be but a jungle of unchained, ferocious, blood thirsty tigers let loose to prey upon defenceless humanity.

But, I repeat, annihilation is contrary to the general belief of mankind respecting the future world. It is well that it is so. True, a few individuals may be found in every age who deny future existence and a Supreme Being. If a few simpletons should put out their eyes, as Democritus is said to have done, to prevent them from feeling the effects of light, such an act would be no proof that the rest of mankind were blind. So, if a few skeptics and profligates render themselves purblind by their sophistry and licentiousness, their condition is no proof that the light of reason does not disclose to the rest of mankind the realities of a future world.

The various peoples of the earth that agree scarcely in anything else pertaining to religion, are in wonderful harmony concerning the existence of a Supreme Being and the immortality of the soul.

Sage, philosopher and poet testify to the universality of this belief. We read of Pluto, the god of the infernal regions, with his key and ebony sceptre; the three judges passing sentence of condemnation on the guilty dead; the three Furies executing the sentence with grim aspect, a serpent-wreath about their heads, a burning torch in one hand, and a scorpion-whip in the other. Virgil tells of Elysian Fields, with bowers forever green, delightful meadows, pleasant streams, groves of warbling birds, skies serene, and fairer stars than those that light the pathway of mortals. The ancient Mexican believed in many spirit abodes,—one for innocent childhood, one for heroes, and one for the wicked. Nine heavens circumscribed their fanciful visions and ardent dreams of future bliss. The Greenlander contents himself with one future Eden, located in the abyss of the ocean, the future home of the skilful fisherman. The untutored Indian of America expects to find

"Behind the cloud-topt hill an humbler heaven,
Some safer world in depth of woods embraced,
Some happier island in the watery waste,
Where slaves once more their native land behold,
No fiends torment, no Christians thirst for gold."

The Persians have their deity Ormus presiding over the future world of light; and Ahriman over the world of darkness. The Hindoos have their world of light and abyss of darkness. The Egyptians' god Osiris, an inexorable judge, weighs in the scales of justice the actions of the dead and pronounces their doom accordingly. The Scandinavians have their Valhalla and Gimli—worlds of blessedness for the worthy; and their Niflheim and Nastrona—the abodes of the unworthy, where Hela or death presides; having Anguish for her palace; Famine, her table; Slowness and Delay, her waiters; Care, her bed; and Precipice, the threshold of her door.

To the examples may be added the familiar ones of Tantalus, doomed to perpetual thirst; the daughters of Danaus, whose endless task was the filling of a vessel with water which escaped as fast as they poured it in; Ixion, perpetually whirled about upon a rapidly revolving wheel; and Sisyphus, condemned to roll up a hill a huge stone that would roll back and renew his endless labor.

The foregoing, it seems to us, ought to suffice to show that men everywhere, in all ages of the world, and in every condition, from primeval simplicity to the highest degree of culture and civilization, have believed in a future state of existence in which men are rewarded according to the rectitude or turpitude of their lives. The wide prevalence of this belief is an unanswerable proof of its verity. We cannot believe that the All-wise Ruler of the universe would suffer a world of rational creatures to be carried away by a delusion and tantalized by a hope having no foundation in nature and contrary to the plan of his moral government.

It must be admitted that many of the notions of the rude and uncivilized respecting future existence are absurd and erroneous. What better could be expected of those whose conceptions of the Supreme Being and the principles of his moral government are so imperfect? All that I contend for is, that the vagaries, speculations and wild fancies of the ignorant have for their ground work the ideas of future existence and future rewards and punishments, and that the wide prevalence of these ideas—whether traceable to primeval revelation or supernatural endowment—is strong presumptive proof of their eternal fitness and verity.

I have undertaken to show, in this and the preceding article, that the annihilation of the wicked is contrary to the soundest philosophy, to the well-being of the individual and society, and to the universal belief of mankind.

It is my purpose to show, in a subsequent number, that it is also contrary to God's revealed will, the touchstone to which all doctrines must be brought and by which their truth or falsity must be established.

Before entering upon the scriptural argument, I would caution the reader against the expectation of finding any one of the inspired writers laboring to establish the doctrine of future existence or that of future rewards and punishments. The proofs of these doctrines come in incidentally. Like the doctrine of the existence of a Supreme Being, their truth is assumed or taken for granted. For instance, instead of proving the existence of God, the very first verse of Genesis takes his existence for granted in the declaration, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." These FIRST TRUTHS of religion force themselves upon the minds and hearts of men as moral certainties. They believe them because it is next to impossible not to believe them.

The proofs, however, will not be the less convincing, because they are incidentally presented. Idle curiosity may ask in vain a thousand question to which there may come no answer. But the truly devout, earnest inquirer, who comes to God's word, not to cavil, but to learn, will find that the Great Creator has revealed all that will be of practical value to us in our present state of limited faculties and opportunities. May we all have his guidance and blessing!

Mt. Olive, N. C.

Our Georgia Letter.

Dear Recorder:—No greater disappointment has befallen me lately than my failure to attend the recent session of the North Carolina Convention which was held in the Queen City. I had all arrangements made for the trip, and had even secured my ticket, but alas for human calculations, they so often fail us. But I must not grieve over the loss of inspiration and the great help which I am sure I would have derived from that meeting.

seem, as a general thing, to be moving along nicely. The stringency of the times has made it exceedingly hard upon them and upon the pastors, but where there has been mutual forbearance, all things have worked well. The opening of the year will, it is hoped, brighten their prospects and inspire our people with confidence for the future. Many of the churches have experienced seasons of refreshing from the Lord during the year, and in addition to the numbers who have been converted the members have had great blessings to come upon their own souls.

VACANCIES.

As is the case everywhere, Georgia has her vacant pastorates. Changes in this State seem to be quite frequent, when the settled condition of this country is taken into consideration. I believe that the reason for this state of affairs is to be found in the fact that many of our churches continue the old plan of calling their pastors annually, a system which is a curse to the churches, to say nothing of the untold hardships it brings upon pastors. The First church of Macon has made a raid, as you know, upon North Carolina, and is anxiously looking forward for the time to come when Rev. J. L. White of Asheville shall begin his labors. He is expected the first Sunday in February. From all that I can learn this is a most excellent church, strong financially, numerically, and I hope spiritually. Bro. White will receive a hearty welcome, and we shall expect great things of him. In this expectation I am sure that we shall not be disappointed. Hawkinsville is vacant by reason of the resignation of Dr. Nelson, their beloved pastor, who it is understood will live in Macon and give himself to the work of an evangelist, in which work he seems to take such great delight, and to which he is so well adapted.

is in a fair condition, but has nothing like the number of students which it ought to have when we consider the large number of Baptists in the State, and the excellent instruction which it offers to students. It is to be hoped that the time is not far ahead when there shall be a change with regard to all our denominational colleges, and when Baptists will feel that they can ill afford not to patronize their own schools. At present Mercer is struggling under a debt which was incurred on account of the failure of some of her investments to declare dividends. Dr. Chapman, the financial agent, is doing his best to raise the money with which to cancel it, but it is felt, on all hands, that the close times will make it a very difficult task for him. He is not the man, however, to be discouraged, and if the thing can be done he will do it. He is also seeking to add to the present endowment, and looking out for students, which, by the way, is a first class plan for increasing the endowment. Give us the students, and in the course of time we shall have all else.

May the blessings of God rest upon the RECORDER, and upon Dr. Bailey. He has done a great work for the Baptists of North Carolina; I am sure that many prayers ascend daily in his behalf. I will venture to say that there is not a sounder paper in the world than the RECORDER. This is saying a good deal when it is known that so many thought to be sound in the faith have drifted away, and are now advocating heresies and the new-fangled notions of cranks and fanatics. May the RECORDER ever stand firm. G. W. GARDNER.

has its own special medicine in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And every woman who is "run down" or overworked, every woman who suffers from any "female complaint" or weakness, needs just that remedy. With it, every disturbance, irregularity, and derangement can be permanently cured.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and the only medicine for women so safe and sure that it can be guaranteed. In periodical pains, displacements, weak back, bearing-down sensations, and every kindred ailment, if it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back. Is anything that isn't sold in this way likely to be "just as good?"

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, liver-ills, indigestion, dyspepsia, piles and headache.

We direct special attention to the following remarkable statement:

For many years I suffered from Catarrh, which destroyed my hearing, and for 25 years I was so deaf that I could not hear a clock strike by holding my ear against it. I had tried every known remedy, and nothing gave me the slightest relief. I obtained Dr. Moore's treatment, and in three weeks my hearing began to improve, and now I can hear common conversation across a room; can hear a clock strike in an adjoining room, 30 feet away. I think I am entirely cured, and my hearing permanently restored.

His Work is Done.

How frequently it is the case that some earnest man will rise up incircumscribed communities, live in great usefulness, even to old age, and then, in some retired locality, surrounded by only a few friends, will pass away from earth to the "great beyond," while those who knew him hardly realize that he is gone; and when they do, they say, "his work is done."

These reflections come to us on hearing of the death of an old minister of God, Rev. W. C. West, whose life, as a Baptist preacher, was spent for fifty years in working for souls in the service of Christ, in the counties of Sampson, Cumberland, Robeson, Bladen, Harnett, Johnson, Wake, and many others, preaching almost "at his own charges," for little has been the compensation, of an earthly kind, he ever received; but never once refusing, on that account, to go where there was need for the "word of life" to be held forth to the people.

Old brother West was over seventy five years "when God took him." A more active old man one rarely ever sees than he was. All the younger people, wherever he went, called him "Uncle Cummings." This was his middle name, and he loved to have his sport and fun with the little ones, who always delighted to flock around his knees.

There was no gloom or darkness, apparently, in his life; and, see him when or where you would, "Uncle Cummings" was always cheerful. Throughout the length and breadth of the seven or eight counties in this State, where he travelled, he had built churches (some 17 or 18) and had led down in the waters of baptism more than two thousand persons whom, under God, he had been instrumental in bringing to the "knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus," and was never better pleased than when engaged in revival work, all during the pleasant months of the year, up and down, in the above named counties of his native State; for he seemed to love to go, as the divine command of his blessed Lord requires.

Bro. West was not a man of "education," as the letter goes. In fact his "book-knowledge" was exceedingly limited. He could read his Bible, ("after a fashion," so to speak;) and his words were not of the choicest diction; but, when standing before an audience of plain people, such as he was born and raised among, those same words seemed to be attended by the power of the Spirit of God, and hearts would soften, tears flow, and cries for mercy would break forth from sinners all over his congregations at his preaching places; and those places were often in cross-roads school houses, in the groves of pines, and any where else, it mattered not with him, so he might get the hearers together to hear the Gospel.

It was again and again remarked by those who heard him, "What a great man he might have been if he had been educated." Well, perhaps so, and perhaps not. All the educated preachers do not become great. Success in the ministry does not depend on education. God takes the "weak things of this world to confound the mighty," that the world may see and own, that "it is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Few educated preachers in this day can point to such a record as old brother West could before he left us. Few might say, as he, "I have built eighteen churches, and have baptized over two thousand souls, professing faith in Jesus."

But his work is done—his prayer, that God would not let him linger in suffering when the time came to die, was granted, and having said "Jesus is here," he breathed out calmly the life he had so long spent for Christ, and "was not," for God took him.

Many who may read this will remember the good old servant of God as they knew him—poor in this world's goods—poor in human learning, but rich in faith, and abounding in good works. He leaves a large circle of kindred and friends in Cumberland county who will hear his voice no more on earth.

May we meet him in the world of light and glory. Amen. W. B. HARRELL.

Ayer's Hair Vigor is certainly a remarkable preparation and nothing like it has ever been produced. No matter how wiry and unmanageable the hair may be, under the influence of this incomparable dressing, it becomes soft and silky, and pliable to the comb and brush.

The American Cultivator says: "In every flock of sheep some will be found in early fall that will be better sent to the butcher than kept for further use. If a sheep has a full mouth of teeth and has grown fat during the summer it will probably never again be in as good condition for mutton as it now is. Then, too, in flocks not thus annually thinned there will be some that are past age, and which would have been more profitably killed a year or two earlier. The sheep is at best a short-lived animal. It takes a long time, therefore, for depleted flocks to be restored to their former numbers. Sheep are now lower than they are likely ever to be again, as for more than a year American flocks have been sold at any sacrifice in order to avoid marketing wool at free-trade prices. Those farmers who understand sheep-breeding should keep in the business. By purging their flocks of the poorest specimens every fall there need never be any sheep in the flock that do not pay their way."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

What is a Year?

What is a year? A little space—
A footstep in old Time's swift race—
A wrinkle added to the face.

Fall, Winter's frosts—the year is done,
Its twelvemonth course is quickly run.

Extracts from Catholic Authorities.

The Decree of the Council of Trent teaches that—

"All saving truth is not contained in the Holy Scriptures, but partly in the Scriptures and partly in unwritten traditions, which whosoever doth not receive with like piety and reverence as he doth the Scriptures, is accursed."

It is declared by the Council of Trent (Can. 5) that—

"Whosoever shall deny the guilt of original sin is remitted by the grace of our Lord Jesus bestowed in baptism; or shall affirm that wherein sin truly and properly consists is not wholly rooted up, but is only cut down, or not imputed, let him be accursed."

In Article X of the Creed of Pius IV, we find these words:

"I affirm that the power of Indulgences was left by Christ to his church; and that the use of them is very helpful to Christian people."

These Indulgences are said to be: A remission of the temporal punishment due to sin by the decree of God, when its guilt and eternal punishment are remitted, and which may consist either of evil in this life or of temporal suffering in the next.

The Council of Trent has declared thus:

"It is lawful to represent God and the Holy Trinity by images and relics of Christ, and the saints are to be duly honored and venerated and worshipped; and that in this veneration and worship, those are venerated which are represented by them."

In the Creed of Pope Pius IV, we find the following paragraph:

"I most firmly assert that the images of Christ, of the Mother of God, ever virgin, and also of other saints, are to be had and retained, and that due honor and veneration are to be given to them."

Pius IV, in the sixth article of his "Creed," says:

"I constantly hold that there is a Purgatory; and that the souls detained there are assisted by the prayers of the faithful."

The Council of Trent has decreed that—

"Although the Mass contains great instruction for the faithful people, yet it has not appeared expedient to the Fathers that it should be everywhere celebrated in the vulgar tongue."—Compiled by Rev. Thomas Phillips. Published by Am. Tract Society.

The Girls.

BY MRS. E. Y. MULLINS.

How is with you, ladies? Do you have your missionary meetings each month, enjoy them, work energetically yourselves for the cause, and then forget the children? The boys and girls who are growing up in the church and Sunday-school, their tastes forming day by day, their interests becoming more and more bent in some direction, ought you not to plan something for them, some means by which they may become instructed and interested in the great cause of missions?

Dr. Bell says every child's mind crystallizes around some one great idea, as sugar in solution crystallizes around a string and forms a stick of rock candy. Whether that controlling idea shall be Christ, or fashion, or pleasure depends on the wise care of those to whom the child is committed.

Two ardent mission workers the other day were talking earnestly over the work while a young listener sat by unnoticed. When the visitor had gone, the young listener said to her mother, "Why don't we girls know something about missions? I think we ought to."

"We girls" was a set of bright misses, with young brains all alert, ready to drink in knowledge of any kind, and full of enthusiasm over a cherished interest. I have seen their bright heads bent eagerly over a fashion book, trying to decide how the new dress is to be made; with beaming faces, planning for a coming party or picnic; or with eager eyes seeking solution of a problem. But be sure, wherever these young heads are bent together, there is vivacity, enthusiasm and success.

"Why don't we girls know something about missions?" This question put that mother to thinking, and it has put others to thinking.

"We girls," what does that mean? Not only this one bright set, but the hundreds, yea thousands of bright heads and young hearts all over the South. And why don't they know something about missions? Because we older ones do not put them in the way of knowledge. Women of the South, are we not responsible for our children? Let each missionary society think of the young in their church, the boys and girls, the young women, and do not be content until bands are formed that shall give our young folks an opportunity to know about missions, and train them to work for this supreme interest of the church to-day.

Do you know what we are actually doing in the South for our young people in a missionary way? Some facts have been gathered lately that may surprise many of you. In one of our Southern States there are 355 ladies' societies and only 90 bands; in another, 201 ladies' societies and 75 bands. In only one State are there as many bands as ladies' societies. There are to be at least one band in every church where there is a ladies' society. Let us bring this about.

Helpful material has been prepared. Send to your Central Committee, or to 9 W. Lexington Street, Baltimore, for "Garnered Gleanings" (free to Woman's Missionary Union workers), a manual for band work. Kind Words Sunday-school paper has a mission page in every weekly issue; with a fine program and blackboard exercise once a month. Subscription, 50 cents a year. The Young People's Leader, 40 cents per year, has able mission helps. Send to Baptist Sunday-school Board, Nashville, Tenn., for these last two.

A Band Department appears in every issue of the Foreign Mission Journal, price 35 cents per year. A large assortment of leaflets is on sale at Md. Baptist Mission Rooms, 9 W. Lexington Street, Baltimore. Send a two cent stamp for catalogue.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its meaning. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

A schedule has been arranged whereby every preacher in Raleigh has a certain day to open the Senate or House with prayer.

Mr. Marion Butler of Raleigh has been selected by caucus to succeed Senator Ransom for the six years term in the U. S. Senate. Mr. Jeter C. Pritchard of Madison has been similarly selected to succeed Senator Jarvis, and will be sworn in office before the present Congress adjourns.

Last week many bills were introduced, most of them of local significance, many to be revised by committees and probably so changed before passing that it is not advisable to mention them now. Moreover, some of them will probably be disapproved. Several of the bills contemplate decided change, among them one repealing the county government system, another to be substituted for the present election law.

The State printing question is giving no little trouble. There is no reason for this. The printing ought to be let out to printers, not partisans; and it ought to be let to competent men at Typographical Union rates.

The Assembly is well organized, and is in a humor for work. Certain men who are doubtful of holding their seats are using dilatory tactics.

A summary of important bills introduced and names of speakers follows; if not otherwise stated, let it be taken for granted that the bills have been referred to committees:

JANUARY 14.

SENATE.—Fortune, Cleveland, to prevent sale of low grade and adulterated kerosene oil; White, Alamance, to repeal merchants' purchase tax.

A resolution requesting our national representatives to work for repeal ten per cent. State-bank tax, failed to pass second reading. Resolution to request national representatives to work for repeal of internal revenue laws provoked remarks from Starbuck, Guilford, for, Candler, Jackson, against; Carver, Cumberland, who made the abominable statement, unworthy of a sensible man, that making and selling whiskey "feeds the hungry, clothes the poor, and educates the children of the State." The resolution was referred to a committee. A resolution favoring free silver coinage at 16 to 1 was referred. It was introduced by Abell, Dem., Johnston.

HOUSE.—Resolution to unseat Payne and Carlyle of Robeson, to seat in their places R. M. Norment and J. P. Smith, referred.

Williams, Craven, a bill to provide a State election law. Public printing bill passed all three readings.

JANUARY 15.

SENATE.—Hamrick, Cleveland, to reduce expenses of State Guard. Bellamy, Nash, to reduce salaries of State and county officials and to reduce charges of tobacco warehouses; Wicker, Carteret, to abolish county boards of education. Sigmon, Catawba, to regulate life insurance companies. Mr. Sigmon's bill to regulate public printing placed on calendar. The Senate met with the House and canvassed the vote for State Treasurer, and declared Worth elected.

HOUSE.—Ewart, Henderson, a bill repealing Railroad Commission law, with the purpose of reorganizing that institution of our government; Campbell, Cherokee, substituting life imprisonment for the death penalty. Petitions and memorials relating to twelve contested seats were presented and referred.

JANUARY 16.

SENATE.—Mewborne, Lenoir, to prevent discrimination by railroad, telegraph and telephone companies; to prohibit use of free passes. A similar bill was introduced in the House. Marshall, Surry, to establish Graded Schools at Mt. Airy, which passed later. McCaskey, Martin, to amend constitution, so that monopolies and trusts cannot operate in this State.

On joint ballot of House and Senate, J. W. Brown, Populist, of Granville, was elected Enrolling Clerk.

HOUSE.—Flack, Rutherford, to abolish office of County Supt. Public Instruction; McCall, Mecklenburg, to prevent lynching; Campbell, Cherokee, to reduce cost of marriage licenses; another bill reducing the cost to $1 50 has been introduced. Resolution to seat contestant, H. F. Brown, Jones county, passed. Much time was occupied discussing bill to reduce bond of sheriff of Pitt county, which passed both Houses later. The public printing, as usual, was the subject of a resolution, a bill and discussion, without result.

JANUARY 17.

SENATE.—Committee reported favorably on bill requesting State Treasurer to furnish information as to disbursements for higher education; unfavorably, to repeal of license tax on piano and organ dealers. Wicker, Chatham, to prevent printing fraudulent election tickets. Marshall, Surry, to abolish county boards of education and reduce salaries of county superintendents. Hamrick, Cleveland, to require railways to pay taxes as other companies. Paddison, Pender, to make education of blind children compulsory. A resolution by Sigmon, Catawba, to invite immigration by advertising the State, which passed later.

HOUSE.—Davis, Wake, to inquire into State's payment of certain persons' expenses to Chicago; to allow county officers to give bond through security companies; to repeal act establishing naval reserves; and to abolish Criminal and Inferior courts and establish courts of Oyer and Terminer. Lusk. Buncombe, to equalize assessments on all property. Flack, Rutherford, to license physicians and secure them payment for services. Lee, Haywood, defining butter and lard and regulate sale thereof.

JANUARY 18.

SENATE.—Hamrick, Cleveland, to abolish Geological Survey. Paddison, Pender, to reduce homestead exemption. Senator Lindsay was added to a committee on education. Report from State University, through President Winston, was referred.

HOUSE.—Resolutions calling for information as to number of employees of the Assembly and their wages, passed both houses. Rest of session occupied with a contested election case without definite result.

The committee on Education was announced as follows: White, Leary, Williams of Warren, Reynolds, Franck, Sutton, McKinney, Ewart of Henderson, Alexander of Tyrrell, Harris of Gaston, Young of Wake, Smith of Stanly, Gentry of Person, Yates, Cheek, Flack, Smith of Caswell, Lawrence, Winborne, Vick, Harrington, Baker, Payne, Ray.

JANUARY 19.

SENATE.—Lindsay, to reduce expenses of public institutions, and to provide for election of boards of trustees therefor. There was much ado about "making Thanksgiving Day orthodox." The introducer stated that neither Protestants nor Catholics desired to be officially requested to give thanks. The bill was laid on the table.

Resolution to have Speaker of the House and President of the Senate appoint a joint committee on municipal government, its duty being to consider bills relating to amending charters of towns and cities, or to the county government system, was referred.

Senate adjourned, this being the anniversary of Gen. Lee's birth; the House adjourned without legislative action.

Error: When a bill is placed on the calendar, it is placed in the Speaker's or President's hands, to be called up in the regular order of business, when it may be passed upon or referred to a committee. The statement on the first page of this paper is, therefore, liable to misleed.

Resolutions of Henderson W. M. S.

The committee appointed by W. M. S. of Henderson Baptist church, presented the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Rev. Robert Van Deventer having been called of God to another field of labor and usefulness, we as a Society have sustained a double sorrow in the loss of our beloved President, Mrs. Van Deventer, who has discharged with wisdom and fidelity the duties pertaining to the office; therefore

Resolved, That as testimony of our appreciation of her efficient management, we defer for one month the election of a President.

Resolved, That we emulate the spirit of earnestness and zeal which has characterized her work, that we remember with tender affection her womanly graces, her dignity of deportment, her cultivated mind and noble Christian character, and that we commend her to the esteem and sympathy of our sister society in Burlington as a woman whose "price is far above rubies."

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the Gold Leaf and BIBLICAL RECORDER, that a copy be sent to Mrs. Van Deventer, and one to the President of W. M. S. in Burlington.

I thank God that the Baptist hosts of North Carolina are represented by a paper which is sound and orthodox as the RECORDER.—L. Johnson.

"This Picture and that"

For a long time Mr. John Barbee, of 117 Main St., Durham, N. C. was a victim to Dyspepsia—He was advised to take

Brown's Iron Bitters.

On July 10, 1894, he wrote a grateful letter in which he said:
"I have used BROWN'S IRON BITTERS for two months for Dyspepsia and it has cured me."

He does not mind it's being known—perhaps his letter may help YOU to a cure! This remedy has helped thousands during the past 20 yrs. Will you try it? It does not constipate and it WON'T INJURE THE TEETH.

DIED.

DORSETT—Died Oct. 12th, near Silk Hope, in Chatham county, N. C., sister Mary Dorsett, wife of Jo. D. Dorsett. She was a devoted wife, and a consistent Christian, and passed away triumphantly. For twenty years, by industry and economy, by a smiling face and a Christian spirit, she had made home desirable and happy. All who knew her mourn her loss.

To the bereaved husband and sorrowing children, mother, and friends, may the God of all comfort give grace.

O. T. EDWARDS.

FARMER—Died October 23d, 1894, of diphtheria at the home of her grandparents in Princess Anne county, Virginia, little Janie E. Farmer, daughter of W. H. and Mary E. Farmer. She was sick only two weeks before the angel of death came and carried her home to heaven to live with God and be with her loving father, who died and left her when she was six weeks old. She was so sweet and precious! She was only eighteen months old, yet she was so sensible, and bore her sickness so sweetly. Her sufferings were great. We did all we could to save our darling. But all in vain. God knew best. She was too sweet and precious to live in this world of trouble. She leaves a fond mother and sister and devoted grandparents to mourn her loss, but our loss is her eternal gain. May we all so live that we will meet our little Janie in the sweet bye and bye.

GRANDMA.

STONER—Bro. James I. Stoner was called to his heavenly home Sunday morning Dec. 30th, 1894. He was sick but a few days. He was born Sept. 10th, 1855, and was therefore in his fortieth year. He was united in marriage May 15th, 1879, to Miss Estella LaGrange Prim, daughter of Capt. J. M. Prim. This was a happy union. "He never gave me an unkind word in his life—not so much as an unkind look," said one who knew him best and loved him most. Though this providence fell with crushing effect upon his dear companion, yet she could say "not my will, but thine be done."

The Lord gave them five children. Their first-born, little Florence Prim, was taken to heaven October 31st, 1880, when only three months and seventeen days old.

Bro. "Jimmie," as he was familiarly called, made a profession and was baptized by Elder P. Oliver in November, 1871. He was elected clerk of the church in May, 1878. He was loyal to his church and true to his pastor. He lived near the Saviour: he made the Bible his constant companion. He had read it through three times, and had commenced the fourth time in family worship.

He said nothing about dying—the family and friends needed not this testimony—his life was sufficient. A short while before he died he smiled and said, "Glory, glory, glory." He has gone from us, but the total of the family of God is unchanged by his death, the family on earth one less, the family in heaven one more.

HENRY SHEPPS.

HAUGHAWOUT—Died at her home in Caswell county, N. C., on the evening of June 3rd, 1895, Mrs. Jennie V. Haughawout.

The deceased was born and reared at the pleasant home of J. B. and M. E. Blackwell, in the above county, she being the oldest daughter, and was born August 7th, 1858. She was happily married to Jno. H. Haughawout Dec. 18, 1879, to whom she was ever a faithful and devoted wife. She left a sweet little baby scarcely two weeks of age. The deceased's life was one of purity and religious beauty, and she was never happier than when working in the Master's vineyard. She was happily converted Aug. 1, 1894, and was baptized on Sunday, Oct 1st, 1891, by Rev. J. H. Howell, her pastor, to whom she was much devoted, uniting with Providence Baptist church the same day, and continuing in the faith until called to rest. When it became apparent that "Death's mystic stream must be crossed," and all that human skill and sympathy could do had been done, he to whom she was dearer than all the world offered anxious prayers that she might be spared, and with her hand clasped in his bade her farewell, with the hope of meeting her again in the beautiful home above.

On the evening of June 26, 1894, dear little Jennie was called to join her mother in glory. She was the only child of J. J. and J. V. Haughawout, and was only five weeks old.

THORPE—Sister Nellie Brooks Thorpe, wife of Mr. A. P. Thorpe of Rocky Mount, only daughter of Capt. R. H. and Mrs. Annie Seawell Brooks of Raleigh, and grand-daughter of the late Dr. W. T. Brooks of Wake Forest, died at her home in Rocky Mount, Dec. 21st, 1894, in the twenty-seventh year of her age.

As a girl, Nellie was bright, amiable and attractive. She loved her home, and found real pleasure in the duties of a loving daughter and an affectionate sister. In early life she made a profession of religion and was baptized into the fellowship of the Wake Forest Baptist church by Rev. Wm. B. Royall, her pastor. She afterwards moved her membership to the First Baptist church of Raleigh, and belonged to that church at her death. Her religious life was marked by the same unswerving adherence to principle which characterized her in every relation of life,—faithful, generous, she adorned her Christian life by a daily exhibition of those qualities of heart and mind which emanate from those who have "passed from death unto life."

About two years ago she was happily married, and through her brief married life, which seems all too short, she was the light and life of her sweet and pleasant little home, the joy and pride of her husband, as he trusted to the future for the fuller and more perfect consummation of their happy union. But the dread angel came, taking first the little babe, then a few days of suffering and the mother was summoned to come up higher and be with the little one and others gone before, whose guardian spirits had been about her in life, in her sickness, and in her death.

Jesus to our earthly keeping
Once a jewel kindly gave;
But our joy was turned to weeping.
For we lost it in the grave.

Mourning for our vanished treasure,
Then we heard the Saviour say,
'Cease to sorrow'—for my pleasure
I have borne your gem away.

J. C. C.

ELLIS—Entered into rest, Ferdinand F. Ellis in the seventy-second year of his age, Nov. 5th, 1894, at his home near the A. & M. College, West Raleigh, N. C. This aged servant of God was born in 1822, in Chatham county, N. C., and as a youth lived in Wake county, where he was in the employ of Mr. George Mordecai. He received only a common school education, but as a young man he won his way by steady industry and honesty, and his services as overseer were sought on many of the great plantations in the South in the days of slavery. Returning to his native State in early manhood, Mr. Ellis married Miss Polly Ann Lunceford, daughter of David Lunceford, a wealthy and prominent planter of Johnston county. Together this couple have lived for fifty years, their "golden wedding" being Oct. 17th ult., and reared a family of seven children, five sons and two daughters, five of whom, with the grief-stricken wife, survive him. The subject of this sketch was one of the noblest, purest men that the State has ever produced. Though never widely known as a public man, yet hundreds of men in Wake and Johnston counties could say to day, "Ferdinand Ellis was never known to do a low or ignoble thing, and his private and public record is above reproach." The last years of his life were spent at Raleigh with his devoted wife near the homes of his two eldest sons. For some time he has been a zealous member of the Baptist church in West Raleigh. Full of years and noble deeds, he gives over the battle of life, and his work follows him. He fought a good fight, and for him there remaineth the rest that is for the just made perfect through faith in Christ. He has only gone before, and the loved ones left behind will find him waiting just beyond the river to welcome them, as they come, one by one into the kingdom of heaven.

D.

Tributes of Respect.

At a meeting of the Ladies Aid Society and the Woman's Society of the First Baptist church, Durham, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved 1. Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst, from earth to heaven, after a painful illness, our Sister Melissa Simms, and while to us the death of such a friend and faithful, consecrated child of God, with the promise of so much more usefulness, is an unseen problem, yet believing our Heavenly Father knows best, we bow submissively to his will.

Resolved 2. That we tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to the God of all grace, who is the only comfort in the home of affliction.

Resolved 3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the societies of which she was such a faithful member, a copy sent to the family, and published in the Durham Daily Sun and BIBLICAL RECORDER.

MRS. C. M. FOLLETTE,
MRS. E. E. BERNARD,
MRS. H. P. MARKHAM,
Committee.

The following are the resolutions of the Baptist Chapel Sunday-school concerning the death of Herbert Barnes:

WHEREAS, It hath pleased the Judge of All the Earth to call from among us by a mysterious providence, our friend and brother, Herbert Barnes; and whereas, in his departure, we, the members of the Mission Sunday-school and his class, feel the loss of his kindly, helpful presence; therefore, be it Resolved 1. That we endeavor to emulate the nobility of his Christian character.

Resolved 2. That we express our sympathy to the family and to those distressed with them, and pray that we all may realize the promise, "I will not leave you comfortless."

Resolved 3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the parent of our departed brother, and to the Landmark and the BIBLICAL RECORDER, with the request that they be published.

Respectfully submitted,

Statesville, Dec. 16, 1894.

North Carolina and the Home Board.

The average contribution of North Carolina to this Board for this Board for the past five years has been $4,984—in round numbers, $5,000. Last year she gave but $2,489, just half of her usual contribution.

At the earnest solicitation of her State Board last year, churches in important places were aided by the Home Board to the amount of $1,000. This practically reduced her contribution to the Board below $1,500. Then she was struggling with a heavy debt due her State missionaries. Now that Board is free from debt, and conditions are reversed. The Home Board is burdened. We started the year with a debt of $6,500. We have been constrained to pay $10,000 on houses of worship in El Paso and New Orleans; so that our necessities this year require $16,500 above our usual expenditures.

We look up to North Carolina for help. Hard as the times are, we think she should not fall below her average contribution.

The amount received from her up to Dec. 25th was but $938. This leaves $4,000 to be raised by May 1st. This is a small sum for the churches of North Carolina. Who thinks for a moment that such a meagre sum measures the ability of the 150,000 Baptists of North Carolina? The only question is, does it measure their interest in the work of Home Missions? We do not believe it does. We feel sure they will give it if they can be reached by the facts of the case. We ask this amount of our brethren, and shall await their answer.

INFLUENZA,

Or La Grippe, though occasionally epidemic, is always more or less prevalent. The best remedy for this complaint is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Last Spring, I was taken down with La Grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I began taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete. It is truly a wonderful medicine."—W. E. WILLIAMS, Crook City, S. D.

Whichever Way.

Whichever way the wind doth blow
Some heart is glad to have it so;
Then blow it east or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

My little craft sails not alone;
A thousand fleets from every zone
Are out upon a thousand seas;
And what for me were favoring breeze
Might dash another with the shock
Of doom upon some hidden rock.
And so I do not dare to pray
For winds that waft me on my way,
But leave it to a Higher Will
To stay or speed me—trusting still
That all is well, and sure that He
Who launched my bark will sail with me
Thro' storm and calm, and will not fail,
Whatever breezes may prevail,
To land me—every peril past—
Within His sheltering heaven at last.

Then whatsoever wind doth blow
Some heart is glad to have it so;
And blow it east or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

Mad With a Mirror.

Some years ago there was a missionary bazaar held in a Christian city in aid of the African missions. When the bazaar was finished, it was found that a number of articles were left unsold. Some of them, it was thought, would be very handy for the mission, so it was decided to send the lot out to Africa. Among other things was a box of little hand-mirrors, that had been given by a merchant. Looking glasses seemed queer things to send to a foreign mission; however, they were sent, and became the most useful article there. The mirrors took the people's fancy, and their fame was carried far beyond the station. The knowledge of this wonderful thing came to a princess of a distant powerful tribe. She had never beheld her dusky countenance, except as a double silhouette in a placid lake, and she longed to behold all her charms, for, being a princess, she was told by everybody that she was most beautiful; whereas, she was one of the plainest women in the whole tribe. A messenger was dispatched for one of the mirrors, which he procured and at once returned to his mistress. When she got possession of it she did not look into it at once, but took herself off to her own place, that she might have a good long look at her beauty. When she beheld herself as she was, with one blow of her royal hand she dashed the glass to pieces. She ordered the missionaries off her territory, and published an edict forbidding looking-glasses being brought into the country.

Are there not many in other lands who are in a similar condition with regard to their souls? When they are brought face to face with God's looking glass, with the hideousness of their sin, and they cannot deny the fact, they blame the mirror, seek to avoid it, and destroy it that they may lay the flattering falsehood to themselves that they are not so ugly as they appear.—Ex.

A Suggestion to Our Colleges.

The price of instruction at the college is higher than the price of many secondary or even primary private schools. One hundred and fifty dollars is an extreme price for tuition at the college, but twice one hundred and fifty dollars is an extreme price for tuition at certain private schools. But there are two special reasons for the increase of fees. The one of less force is that not a few rich men are not willing to give their money to afford the sons of other rich men an education at less than its cost. A friend of mine with whom I was recently conversing said to me, "I can give you, if you wish, a large amount of money, but that amount of money would go for the benefit of the son of Mr. A. or Mr. B., who is perfectly able to pay all of his son's fees at their full amount." The force of the reasoning cannot be easily set aside, as the truth of the fact cannot be denied. But the special reason for this increase lies in the fact that money would thus be had for the benefit of men who could not pay for a college education. If the American college could increase its tuition fee to $500, there are not a few men in the college who would be willing and able to pay his fee, and who ought to pay his fee, for the fee represents simply what the education costs. With the present endowments and, with the increase of endowments sure to be made, these payments would allow each college to offer an education to men who are not able to pay for it at a very small cost. Thus, every poor boy in America who wants an education could receive it.—President Chas. F. Thwing, in the Forum.

How I Teach a Colt.

When I wish to teach a colt to carry a saddle, I first put a blanket on him, folded to about saddle size, then a circingle strapped loosely. At the next lesson I make the circingle quite tight. At the fourth lesson I tie the colt to a hitching post, and put a boy on him. He soon gets accustomed to the weight and does not mind it; then I take the boy off, remove the blanket and put on the saddle; then put the boy in the saddle, letting him sit there for fifteen minutes, but moving himself about and otherwise making himself conspicuous. Then I put the saddle on the horse, put the boy on horseback, and lead the horse about fifteen minutes, then I give the lead-the reins and let him gently exercise the horse for half an hour. After this course of training any man or boy can ride the colt, provided he has sense enough to manage his steed.—Our Dumb Animals.

A Few of Franklin's Claims to Greatness.

No man had ever preached a doctrine which more skilfully showed how to get the best for yourself; and no man ever showed himself more ready than Franklin to do things for others. He invented an open stove to give more heat with less wood, but he refused to take out a patent for it, glad of an opportunity to serve his neighbors; and this invention of Franklin's was the beginning of the great American stove trade of to day. He founded the first fire company in Philadelphia, and so made a beginning for the present fire departments. He procured the reorganization of the night-watch and the payment of the watchmen, thus preparing for the regular police force now established. He started a philosophical society, and he took the lead in setting on foot an academy, which still survives as the University of Pennsylvania. While he was doing things for others, others did things for him, and he was made clerk of the General Assembly in 1736, and Postmaster of Philadelphia in 1737. In 1750 he was elected a member of the Assembly, and in 1753 he was made Postmaster General for all the Colonies. In 1748 he had retired from business, having so fitted his practice to his preaching that he had gained a competency when only forty two years old.

The leisure thus acquired he used in the study of electrical science, then in its infancy. He soon mastered all that was known, and then he made new experiments with his wonted ingenuity. He was the first to declare the identity of electricity with lightning. Using a wet string, he flew a kite against a thunder cloud, and drew a spark from a key at the end of the cord. The lightning rod was his invention. Of his investigations and experiments he wrote reports that were printed in England and translated in France. The Royal Society voted him the Copley medal; the French king had the experiments repeated before him; and both Harvard and Yale made Franklin a Master of Arts.—Brander Matthews, in St. Nicholas

A Successful Life.

Success cannot be measured by fame, wealth or station, writes Edward W. Bok in an article on what constitutes a successful life for man and woman in the October Ladies Home Journal. The life of the humblest woman in the land, if well lived, is as successful as is that of the woman who, with greater opportunities, is enabled to make the results of her works reach further. Some of us must live for the few, as others again must live for the many. But both lives are successful. Each of us in this world influences some other being, and it is the quality of our influences and not the number we influence, which makes our lives successful in the eyes of God. We may believe that we go to our graves unknown and unsung, but not one of us goes out from this world without leaving an impression, either for the good or the bad. And the kind of impression we make while we live, and leave when we die, is the difference between successful and unsuccessful living.

Duty.

Our blue-eyed daughter with locks of gold,
Rosy and dimpled and eight years old,
Went to Sunday-school one fine day,
When grass was springing in balmy May;
The questions swiftly went round the class,
And soon came the turn of our little lass.
"Your duty to neighbors?" the teacher said.
Promptly replied our Golden-head,
"I don't know that kind of duty, you see,
But I know plain duty as well as can be,"
His hand on her curls the teacher laid;
"Well, what is 'plain duty,' my little maid!"
"Why, duty's the thing"—with a moment's thought—
"That you don't want to do, but you know you ought!"
—Amelia Barr, in St. Nicholas.

Winter Strawberries.

Women and girls can raise strawberries in pots in the winter if they will, and why not do it as well as to raise flowers? Strawberries are palatable any day in the year, and the very rich, who delight in things out of the common, pay enormous prices for winter berries. Mothers will do well to interest their girls in strawberry culture, and then they will have both flowers and fruit.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

HERE IS Something IN Flowers, Both new and distinct.

NEW SWEET SCENTED PANSIES.

New Hybrids in which are blended the perfume of the Violet, with the beauty of the Pansy.

This new class is the result of crossing the pansy with the sweet alpine violet; the resulting hybrids, in addition to retaining the delightful violet perfume, produce the most beautiful pansy-like blossoms, 2 to 2½ inches across. The solid or self's include white, lemon, orange, claret, crimson, maroon, lavender, purple, rose, black, blue, etc., etc. The fancy varieties are exquisitely tinted, striped and blotched. Many critics consider the combinations and blendings of color in the NEW SWEET-SCENTED PANSIES to be more beautiful than the ordinary strains of Pansy.

The NEW SWEET-SCENTED PANSIES are hardy, of easy culture, and, planted in masses or lines, they form perfect mats covered with myriads of flowers. They begin to make the garden gay in early spring and continue to bloom with marvelous freedom until autumn. The flowers are borne on long stems which shoot up like the violet directly from the roots, rendering the flowers of special value for cutting purposes.

PRICE PER PACKET (MIXED COLORS) 25 CENTS.

A complete description of this new floral beauty will be found in our 1895 Catalogue of "EVERYTHING for the GARDEN," which we will send FREE with every order from this advertisement, when this paper is mentioned. If Catalogue alone is wanted, it will be mailed on receipt of 20 cents. As every copy, however, with postage, costs us 25 cents, you will find it more advantageous to order the NEW SWEET-SCENTED PANSY and get for nothing a Catalogue of 160 pages, containing nearly 500 engravings and 8 beautiful colored plates—in fact, the most superb publication of its kind ever issued. MISSIONARIES in China have found it more fruitful to require the people to give a small sum of money in return for tracts and leaflets, because the Chinese, not unlike other people, but with less reason than Americans hopelessly struggling against an evergrowing deluge of patent medicine circulars, think that only worthless things are given away free-handed. It is altogether probable that Americans will eventually become as chary as the Chinese of free printed matter. In fact, we have evidence of development in this direction in the indifference with which the average citizen regards the reports of the various departments and institutions of our government. The author of a recently issued report prefaced it with a note saying, "While this report is addressed to the Governor, it is not intended for him only," etc., etc.

Although one citizen of the State has as much right as another to the various reports, for the printing of which his taxes are expended, and which are the means through which tax payers get information concerning the government that they support, it would be too expensive if every citizen had to be supplied with them. There is reasonable complaint against the National Government for expending great sums for printing long and vapid speeches and other useless matter without end. But the demand for North Carolina's public documents is scarcely sufficient to make necessary a law to limit their distribution.

The State and the people, which may or may not be "one and the same," doubtlessly owe a great deal to the newspapers, which not only make the reports intelligible and condense them into readable length, but also do it so well that the general public prefers them to the lengthy form in which they are handed to the Governor. Thus the State's money and the reader's time are saved.

In the RECORDER of last week the Governor's message, which contained parts of the reports of the State Treasurer, the Auditor and the Attorney General, among others, was reviewed. This week we have several other reports before us.

North Carolina has nothing more worthy of her tender interest and honest pride than her institutions for the betterment of her afflicted children; and the progress she has made of late and is now making, is especially gratifying. Whatsoever the theory of God's meaning hidden in afflictions, there can be no question of our duty to ameliorate them. The God who takes away reason or sight or hearing, gives also restoratives, or, at least, palliatives; and if He seems to see fit to place these out of the reach of the afflicted, we may not question his wisdom, nor may we doubt our duty.

There is pathos in the "Report of the North Carolina Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind." Repeated efforts, it says, have been made to get the 731 blind persons less than twenty-one years of age in North Carolina within reach of her generous provisions for them, but a great many of the parents, through what the report terms "a false love and sympathy," but which is more human and more pitiful, too, than false, "keep their charge at home to grow up in a condition of mental ignorance." It is deplorable to have to recommend a law compelling blind children to be taken away from home. All means to persuade should first have been exhausted.

But the institution is not prevented from doing gratifying work. In the last two years 88 male deaf-mutes, 93 female deaf-mutes, 79 blind males, 74 blind females, all white, have been enrolled; the negro enrollment being, deaf-mute males 30, deaf-mute females 30, blind males 79, blind females 74. The State not only teaches these children to read and write and think, as any educational institution is designed to do, but, more than many of the latter have been doing, endeavors "to impart positive useful information" and "to cultivate dexterity in the manipulation of tools." Mattress making, broom-making, cane-seating, piano and organ-tuning, are the trades taught the blind.

The cost for keeping and instructing each of the pupils is $160 a year.

The reader will do the State and the afflicted a service if he will urge especially the parents of blind children in his community to send them to this kindly home provided by the State.

Last October the State opened its commodious new building at Morganton; and since then the building at Raleigh has been occupied by the blind, and the Morganton building by the deaf-mutes of the white race.

The report just reviewed embraced the two years preceding Nov. 30th, 1894; so that the "Report of the North Carolina School for the Deaf and Dumb, Morganton, N. C.," is for only two months. The school has enrolled 49 males and 54 females. The State appropriates $35,000 a year for this institution. The pupils are taught, in addition to the ordinary school branches, shoemaking, carpentry, type-setting, and farming, four most worthy occupations. The females are taught domestic work.

The school is crowded, and an appropriation for finishing and equiping the building and maintaining the school has been asked for. When the building is completed it will accommodate 250 inmates, and it will cost about $50,000 a year to support and instruct that many; but only $35,000 a year is now appropriated.

The introduction to the "Eighth Annual Report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics" (for the year 1894) shows clearly that the Commissioner of Labor Statistics knows his duty, is ardently striving to do it, but frank enough to say that it cannot be done with his present resources. Statistics have been gathered in part this year by travelling agents, the system of circular letters with return blanks having proved almost a failure last year. In consequence of the agents' work, statistics of mills and manufactories are more nearly complete and altogether more suggestive, and the tone of the compilation is clearer and fuller.

Letters of inquiry were sent to farmers as well as favorably disposed manufacturers. "A great many," says the Commissioner, "want very stringent laws passed against dogs, others against saloons, others want interest reduced to six per cent., but the largest number of both farmers and mechanics want a compulsory education law," all of which "wants" are commendable.

"There are now in operation in this State 167 cotton- and ten woolen mills; of these 106 responded to our inquiries." The fact that 71 did not is a good argument for the thorough equipment of this Bureau. It suggests that something is wrong with them. Six thousand women, and 2 340 children under fourteen years of age, 1,000 of them being girls, were employed in the factories heard from. This number is too great, not to mention the number employed in the seventy one factories which were not heard from. The fewer women there are in hot and dusty factories, the more vigorously will the State grow in future years; and a boy or girl under fourteen years old ought not be confined to factory work. It is a matter of daily bread with many, but that does not alter the force of ought not. The men's wages are not at all paltry; but those of the women and children are pitiable, considering that they have themselves to clothe and feed and perhaps families of little ones besides.

As one looks down the columns of statistics of factories he will be surprised to find that the sanitary condition of the mills is uniformly good. Wages have been decreased in many factories in the last year, but in some they have been increased; in most they have not been changed. There is an unexpected degree of satisfaction among the factory workers, at least in those heard from.

There are also agricultural statistics, reports from mechanics, letters from organized labor leaders, and many very interesting letters from farmers and mechanics, which were alluded to in the outset. These letters relieve the monotony of the statistics and suggest a great deal that would not otherwise be taken into consideration.

The report is both instructive and interesting, and, although it is not complete, it is more nearly so than we had thought it could be.

North Carolina has gone to considerable expense to teach her citizens the "art of agriculture." She runs a college, an experiment station, several offices and a printing press, all, except the college, especially for the farmers. These ought to be used as much as possible. The publications, at least, cost one nothing except in taxes, and since they are paid for with taxes they belong to every citizen. Moreover, it may be profitable to keep up with the experiments.

We hope our farmer readers who have not received it will write a postal card to the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station, Raleigh, N. C., and ask for "Feeding Trials with Animals," and other free matter, which may be gotten without even sending a stamp for postage.

WE have pleasure in informing our readers that the overcoats mentioned in our review of the Governor's message were paid for by their wearers, and, therefore, our remarks concerning them were impertinent.

An Educational Controversy in England.

Those who read the British Reviews and Magazines are familiar with the discussion which originated in the London School Board, and has deeply stirred the English people. But they may not know what a large part Baptists have taken in it.

A section of the Church of England, led by Mr. Athelston Riley, insisted some months ago that the children in the public schools of London should receive more distively denominational teaching in religion. Nearly half of the seven thousand teachers employed protested against it. The question was carried into politics and made an issue, if not the main issue, in the November elections.

The London correspondent of the Chicago Standard writes as follows:

"Baptists took a prominent and effective part in the recent School Board election. Indeed, by common consent, Dr. Clifford did more than any other individual to win what was a very decided moral victory for the advocates of undenominational religious teaching in London Board schools. The Westbourne Park pastor fought like a Trojan. For weeks together he was incessantly occupied in addressing public meetings, in writing to the newspapers rousing and keenly argumentative letters, in personal conference with leaders on both sides of the controversy, and in short, doing everything that a man of his great ability and tireless energy could accomplish to defeat the party which seeks to deprive the children of London of sufficient teaching, to supersede the Bible by man made dogmas, and to subject school board teachers to theological tests. In the height of the conflict the Doctor attained his fifty eighth birthday, and for a man of his years his labors were simply amazing. Another Baptist, the venerable Dr. Angus, who a short time ago relinquished the presidency of Regents Park Baptist College, was impelled by the gravity of the issues at stake to throw himself into the contest with a vigor second only to that of Dr. Clifford.

"The London Baptist Association was moved to pass a resolution insisting that neither in letter nor in spirit shall the stipulation which excludes the use of denominational formularies be infringed. The president of the Baptist Union devoted his address at the autumnal meetings at Newcastle entirely to the question of the religious instruction of the young. The British Weekly characterized Mr. Short's address as 'a ripe, far seeing and Christian deliverance,' in face of an attempt on the part of the High Church party to capture the schools of England. The Baptist denomination has reason to be proud of the zealous efforts of its leaders during what is nothing short of a great national crisis. Although the Progressives, who stand for undenominational instruction, have not secured a majority on the new Board, yet of the total votes a majority were cast on their side, and but for the cumbrous system of the cumulative voting Mr. Riley's party would have been utterly routed."

The Outlook, in an editorial on the situation in London, sums up the points at issue, as follows:

"To our thinking, the principle involved is a very simple one. It is the business of a free State to teach all that is necessary to good citizenship, and it is not the business of a free State to teach anything more. He would be a very narrow minded man who should insist that the peculiar tenets of the Trinitarians, or of the Protestants, or of the Roman Catholics, or of the Jews, as distinguished from the general principles of the istic faith and Biblical morality held in common by all four, are necessary to good citizenship. So far as any peculiar belief is necessary to prepare us for another world, it may be left to the Church to inculcate that belief. The State may legitimately confine itself to those principles of morality and religion on the recognition of which the peace and prosperity of the community here and now depend."

Anent the question of religion in schools supported by taxation, the following expression of opinion by The Churchman, one of the ablest champions of the Episcopal church in the United States, is interesting. It is especially commended to the attention of those of that church who have condemned the same views, when expressed by Baptists, as strange and heretical:

"The direct teaching of Christianity must be forbidden in American public schools. This is not because America is un-Christian. The necessity springs from the fact that America is one, and American Christianity manifold. It would be well if a child could be taught Christianity in the same place and from the same persons as furnish to open intelligences the rudiments of secular education. But Christianity is to be shut out from the school because all forms of Christianity cannot be admitted into one school, and if one form of Christianity is taught by the State to individuals professing to believe in other forms than that which the State, by hypothesis, teaches, the result is rank injustice. One Church becomes in a measure established and endowed; one section of American citizens is taxed to provide religious education for another denomination."

The Weapons of Our Warfare.

Introductory Sermon preached by Rev. T. J. Taylor, Warrenton, N. C., before the Baptist State Convention at Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 6, 1894.

[Concluded.]

"For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but are mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." 2 Cor. 10: 4.

Again, the weapons of our warfare are mighty because they are the divinely appointed means to a definite end. Every truth on each special occasion is designed to accomplish some specific purpose. God's truth always accomplishes God's will. The same truths existed at the beginning that exist now; but men did not have such comprehensive views of truths as they now have. But the truth, as they saw it from the standpoint they occupied, was fully sufficient for all their necessities. In the progress of ages emergencies have arisen and complications have been developed of which the fathers knew nothing. It is not, however, necessary for God to give a new revelation of advanced truth in order to meet the exigencies of our condition. But under the guidance of the Holy Spirit we obtain new views of divine truth, and learn how to apply the same old truths of which we have obtained new views in such a way as to meet the necessity that is upon us in the circumstances in which we are placed. Travellers in different positions see the sun from different standpoints. Each sees a different combination of lights and shadows. The man far up the mountain side has a more extended prospect than the one in the valley; but the same sun floods the valley with light that casts its shining robe over the mountain side, and throws its radiant streamers across the extended plain. It affords light to meet the necessities of all; and each may accomplish his mission guided by its unfailing beams. The same is true of the Word of God, no matter what our necessity, or our mission; in the Word of God we find provisions to enable us to meet the one and so complish the other.

God says, "My word shall accomplish that whereto I send it." If we, therefore, go forth in the name of God to pull down the strongholds of sin and build up the kingdom of Christ, and in the prosecution of this enterprise we faithfully wield the weapons of our warfare which is the Word of God, we shall succeed; because these weapons are divinely appointed to this very end, and are therefore mighty.

Again, the weapons of our warfare are mighty because God accompanies them. The Word of God is called the sword of the Spirit; because the unerring and omnipotent arm of the Spirit directs it to the object to be attained. The words of the Bible have no power to convict sinners and lead them to Christ, to strengthen saints and overcome the forces of sin except as they are rendered powerful by the strong arm of the Spirit of God. We are often surprised at the great results that follow the preaching of the plain gospel, forgetting that the power is not in the simple words, nor in the man that utters them, but in the Spirit of God who controls both the man and the words, and sends the truth with overpowering force into the hearts of those who hear it. "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called" to the work of preaching the gospel; but the foolish things of this world often overcome the mighty, and the weak things of this world overcome the strong. In all this we see the truth illustrated, "Not by power, nor by might, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

A traveller, on examining the sword of Scanderbeg, exclaimed, "I do not see anything in this sword to have made it such a powerful weapon as it is said to have been!" "Ah!" said a bystander, "you forget that when it was powerful, it was in the hands of Scanderbeg." This is gloriously true of the Word of God. It is all powerful to accomplish the will of God when it is in the hands of God's Holy Spirit.

In my county there are two humble, unlearned men. One of them is an intolerable stutterer, and the other can barely read the simplest sentence; but they have learned to know Jesus as a personal Saviour and friend. For the past twelve months they have been going from house to house holding prayer-meetings, and telling "the old, old story of Jesus and his love," and during that time they have won more men and women to Christ than have all the pastors in the county. This does not mean that God puts a premium on ignorance, but it does mean that the Word of God will be mighty in the accomplishment of his will whenever and wherever preached. It will be mighty even though the preacher may be rude and ignorant, because the Holy Spirit accompanies it. Therefore the Word of God, which is the weapon of our warfare, is mighty, because God accompanies it.

In considering the weapons of our warfare, let us notice—

1. What they accomplish.

The pulling down of strongholds. Jeremiah was commanded to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant; and he was to accomplish this by the Word of God. Likewise the people of God are now commanded to overthrow the kingdom of Satan and to build upon the ruins thereof the kingdom of Christ. This they are to do by preaching and living the Word of God. They must first pull down and then build up, and they have for their encouragement in this arduous work his promise that their "labor shall not be in vain in the Lord;" for, "he that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

The powers to be overthrown are rightly called strongholds. They include all those forms of infidelity and iniquity that exist in the human heart. They include every species of vice and folly that dishonors God in the individual life. They embrace every variety of skepticism and sin that arises against God in the high places and low places of this world. The powers of darkness are strongly intrenched in the hearts and affections of mankind, and are supported by the wisdom and wealth of a multitude of the men and women who are conspicuously connected with the social, commercial, and political enterprises of the world. Therefore, the powers of darkness being thus fortified are rightly called strongholds, and from a human standpoint the work of overthrowing them is impossible.

The enemies of Christ are often disposed to sneer at the weapons with which we purpose overthrowing the strongholds of Satan, and indeed we would be discouraged, if we did not know how thoroughly the weapons of our warfare have been tried, and how certain they are to accomplish the will of God. It has ever been thus, the enemies of God have always sneered at the apparent weakness of the servants of God.

I presume that when the army of the Lord was silently marching around Jericho, the people of the city laughed them to scorn. They likely said, "What do these fools mean? Do they think to break down these massive walls, overcome our valiant soldiers, and destroy our city by such childish methods? Let them carry their ark around, and blow their ram's horns, and compass the city; we trouble not ourselves about such warriors as these." But the battle plan of Joshua was the method of God, and the priests blew their rams' horns, and the army of the Lord went tramp, tramp, tramp around the doomed city, until the seventh time, on the seventh day, when Joshua cried "Shout!" and the people shouted, and the walls of the city fell down flat; and every man went up before him, and the city was taken and destroyed. A very strange kind of attack, you will say. Truly it was, but it was very effective, for God fought for his people, and the strongholds of Jericho were overthrown.

Had the hosts of Midian seen Gideon's little band of three hundred men marching through the darkness to attack them, with no weapons save pitchers and trumpets and lamps, they would doubtless have wakened the hills and valleys with the echo of their contemptuous laughter. But when at the given signal the three hundred blew their trumpets, crashed their pitchers, and waved their flaring lamps, the great army of Midian fled, defeated and panic stricken, from the field. Why was this? Pitchers and trumpets and lamps are surely not formidable weapons against a well disciplined and thoroughly equipped army. Truly, they are not; but on this occasion, they became mighty through God to the pulling down of the strongholds of Midian.

Doubtless, many in the army of Israel thought the shepherd's sling in the hand of the stripling David a poor weapon with which to meet the giant of Gath, and even Saul thought he ought to be better equipped, and the Philistine giant, when he saw him, made merry at his expense. But David went forth to meet him in the name of the God of Israel, and putting his hand into his shepherd's bag, he took therefrom a stone, and adjusting it to his sling, sent it whizzing into the brow of the giant, and it crashed through his skull, and he fell down dead. An insignificant weapon, you will say, with which to accomplish so great a feat. Truly it was; but this was God's plan, and God was with David, and therefore the stone from the brook and the shepherd's sling in the hand of the stripling David became mighty through God in the overthrowing of the strongholds of the Philistines.

Many will say, "What good is there in singing and praying and preaching? What do you hope to accomplish by these methods? You will never preach and pray and work the Devil out of the world, nor overthrow his strongholds by such childish methods. If you would save the world, you must employ instrumentalities that commend themselves to the wisdom of the world." In reply to these taunts, we have this to say, we are not yet ready to receive from the Devil or his agents the weapons with which we are to attack his strongholds. The gospel of Christ has been fully tried. The power of holy living and prayer has been verified over and over again, and we are willing to go forward in this warfare with no other weapons than those supplied by the Captain of our Salvation. These are all we need, for as sure as the walls of Jericho fell at the shout of the army of Israel, as sure as the army of Midian fled before Gideon's valiant three hundred, as sure as the giant of Gath was slain by a stone in the hand of the stripling David, as sure as our King has promised to his little flock the kingdom, so sure are the Word of God, which constitutes the weapons of our warfare, be mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.

The gospel of Christ is the power of God in the salvation of the sinner. It is also the power of God in driving the enemy from the hearts of the redeemed. The gospel of Christ is that weapon that shall break the

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 30, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

SEND petitions against the saloons to your representatives, as many and as often as you can.

THE RECORDER would be glad to get more letters from the fields. Every Baptist church in North Carolina ought to have some progress to report in these columns. A letter or a postal card, according to what there is to be said, from any member of our churches will be appreciated.

NOT so many years ago there was quite a serious crop-failure in Greeneville county, Virginia. Appeals for help went forth; and the State Legislature made an appropriation for the relief of the poorer classess, especially the negroes.

When winter had passed and planting time was at hand, farmers who, as was their custom, set out to employ negro hands met with great difficulty, most of the negroes declaring that they were "gwine to see what the gov'ment will do for us fust." They liked appropriations.

The State University has neglected good opportunities to raise endowment, waiting to see what the government will do. All the State aided schools will continue to wait for appropriations, until the government warns them that the time has come for them to look to their own resources.

WHATEVER may be the state of opinion as to further organization, the RECORDER knows that it has the hearty support of North Carolina Baptists in its opposition to any alliance of our young people with the Baptist Young People's Union of America, with its woman-speakers, flag-wavers and state-yellers.

If the present arrangement with regard to the young people, that is, local organizations with the sanction and watch-care of the churches, with provision for an annual meeting with the Convention—there being no separate organization,—if this arrangement is not sufficient, then all the arguments of those who asked for annual meetings of the young people are void.

But the present arrangement is sufficient. The election of a State-president, salaried secretary and committees, etc., etc., could be of no possible help. One who argues that long and expensive trips further the Lord's work is dangerously slighting the "Weapons of our Warfare." A meeting for study and comparison of methods of work will do good. Rev. R. Van Deventer, who may very properly be regarded as the most active of advocates for organization of our North Carolina young people, has said that he is satisfied with our existing arrangement, and we confidently hope the agitation for further organization will have assuaged of its own accord before the next Convention.

Meanwhile there is danger. The B. Y. P. U. A. is trying to get a foot-hold in our State. Its proposed meeting at Baltimore next summer is a bid for Southern sympathy. Plans are on foot to stampede the next Southern Baptist Convention for general organization of the young people. Some are advocating a Southern Union, others are adhering to the B. Y. P. U. A. We pray to be delivered from either.

The Baptist Union, organ of the B. Y. P. U. A., has been making overtures to our Southern press. Doubtless several brother editors have been asked to have their photographs printed in it; but this effort seems to have been largely a failure. Of late, however, we have been condescendingly offered the privilege of printing each week the "Bible Readers' Calendar." It is a copyrighted, new method affair, which the Secretary of the B. Y. P. U. A. will be glad to have us print, if certain conditions are complied with. First, we must entitle it, "Bible Readers' Course," which we are not presumptuous enough to do, since we are willing for Bible readers to pursue their own course, knowing that they cannot go wrong so long as they stick prayerfully to the regular edition of the Bible and keep modern methods, new dispensations and alphabetical innovations out of their heads. Another provision is that we print under the title the following, "Recommended for Baptist young people by the Baptist Young People's Union of America," and that underneath the calendar shall be carried in small type the statement, "copyrighted 1895, B. Y. P. U. A." It is further provided that this must be done "week by week without change."

This is the manner in which B. Y. P. U. A. [illegible] advertisement in North Carolina. It will not get it from the RECORDER.

CHRIST A BAPTIST.

Our Saviour's teaching and example harmonize with the denominational tenets of no people save those of the Baptists; and it is not exceeding the bounds of sober fact to say that Christ's statement of doctrine, tested by Romish or Pedobaptist standards, must be considered heresy. It is, moreover, within the province of sober fact to assert, reversing the proposition, that Romish or Pedobaptist standards, tested by Christ's statement of doctrine, must in turn be pronounced heresy. The noble army of Baptist martyrs endured persecution and exile, or else suffered, when the will of their enemies so decreed, the barbarities of fire and sword for believing and practicing what our Lord clearly taught.

Was Christ a Baptist? Let the answer be found in the following statements: He founded a Baptist Church; he taught Baptist doctrines; his teachings condemn the distinctive doctrines of all Pedobaptist bodies. A few points will suffice for illustration.

1. Christ was not baptized in infancy; but he waited thirty years to submit to the holy rite of baptism, thus throwing the whole force of his example against Pedobaptism. Had he designed to give sanction to the baptism of infants, we cannot account for his conduct in passing his entire youth in disregard of such an ordinance. Divine providence had sent a messenger to prepare a way before him, and to make his paths straight, but none of the paths was infant baptism; and John understood the divine will as pointing to Christ's baptism in later life. Thus was Christ's baptism deferred until he was ready to enter upon his public work. This is Baptist doctrine. Baptism indicates the beginning of a new life, the consecration of the soul to God, and should not be administered until the candidate proposes to devote his life to divine service.

Christ still farther shows that the baptism of infants never occurred to him when he said, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Not a word about baptism, no act of baptism; but he laid his hands on them and blessed them. This was all, and although his disciples objected to the coming of the children, yet the Master did not instruct them on the subject of baptism; but inculcated by his words and act the importance of the religious training of children. It cannot be controverted, then, that Jesus never made mention of infant baptism, nor ever said anything from which it might be inferred; but on the contrary, he gave the church a system of truth that absolutely condemns it.

2. That Christ was immersed, is admitted by all the best ecclesiastical authorities. No first-class late lexicon or encyclopedia will defend sprinkling or pouring as the primitive practice. Those persons who think that the rite may be changed on the ground that it is non-essential, receive scant support from the Saviour; for it was his first public act. Previous to his baptism, he preached no sermon, spoke no parable, wrought no miracle, saved no soul; but after receiving that ordinance, he healed the sick, raised the dead, preached the Gospel, founded the church, saved the lost, redeemed the world. Indeed, whenever Christ used the word it was fraught with most wonderful meaning. For instance, when he said, "He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved," he associated baptism with faith and salvation; and surely no man, no church, has a right to separate the ordinance from this holy company. Faith and baptism are placed side by side in the scriptural economy, and had they never been divorced by the rude hand of man, the monstrous doctrine of baptismal regeneration would never have cursed Christendom. He made, moreover, baptism the potent symbol of his tremendous and overwhelming agonies as he suffered and died to ransom the world, saying, "I have a baptism to be baptized with." To suppose that sprinkling or pouring could represent the divine plunge into the sea of darkness, is to belittle the atonement, and to mock the heavenly sufferer.

It is noticeable that our Saviour's last thoughts were occupied with baptism as one of the great features of his kingdom; so that, just before his ascension to glory, he commanded his disciples to "teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Here we have the only act ever required to be done in the name of the Trinity—baptism. It is also true that the only occasion on which the Trinity ever appeared sensibly to men was at Christ's baptism. With such a prestige, can we think of baptism as a rite to be dealt lightly with?

3. The Saviour himself received baptism before he participated in the Supper, and never by precept or example did he authorize open communion; for, all of his followers being of the same faith, such a thing would have been impossible; and further, had his commands been obeyed, no discussion on this subject would have arisen.

4. Christ taught the perseverance of saints when he said, "They shall never perish," and, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." He forbade popery and episcopacy when he said, "Call no man master." When he ascended on high, he gave some pastors, some teachers, some evangelists; but he never gave anybody popes and modern bishops. Thus Christ, in word and deed, was a Baptist; and we are of the opinion that, should the Saviour return to earth and preach the Gospel as he once did, no Pedobaptist pulpit committee would invite him to "supply" for a single Sunday, "with view to a call."

WITH a timely article by Dr. Taylor, the conclusion of Rev. T. J. Taylors's good sermon, the third and strongest of Rev. J. T. Albritton's articles on annihilation, the statement of our committee appointed to memorialize the General Assembly and the editorial article, "Christ a Baptist," strong and clear and thorough, the RECORDER has only the meagreness of its letters from the fields to apologize for. However, an abundance of news is not to be expected in midwinter, and the reader may console himself with the assurance that we lay before him all there is and that it is reliable.

We do not desire to have to announce any more resignations, as they are generally bad news; we look forward with pleasure, however, to the time when we can announce that the vacant fields in our State are occupied by godly men. Let no one think that there is lack of these, for, so far as we have heard, the difficulty is to choose one of many.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....A new church has been organized in Duplin county by Rev. A. A. Butler.

....Rev. S. F. Conrad has accepted the care of Fork church, Davie county.

....Rev. E. Y. Pool changes his address from Wake Forest, N. C., to Blue Wing, N. C.

....An area in Africa larger than the whole of Europe is unoccupied by missionaries.

....The house of worship in Hyde county will not be dedicated till the second Sunday in April.

....The Baptist church at Windsor, Rev. J. B. Boone, pastor, is being painted and repaired.

....There were twenty conversions at the Suffolk revival, in which Evangelist Barron aided Pastor Love.

....It is better to spend our efforts in pressing forward in the narrow way than in trying to "broaden" it.

....Rev. W. F. Fry changes his address from Bayboro to Grantsboro. He is getting along well with his work.

....The Raleigh News and Observer began its thirty eighth volume the 24th inst. It has been improved of late.

....Rev. J. S. Felix, whose sad affliction compelled him to leave his Lynchburg work, is well again and preaching.

....Six persons were received for baptism at the Fayetteville Street Baptist church, Raleigh, N. C., on Sunday last.

....If any one but Sam Jones were leading the attack on the Methodist bishops, we would have some hope in the movement.

....Rev. C. W. Matthews, Chincoteague Island, Va., writes: "My work here is of the most encouraging character. I never had a better field."

....The RECORDER has a few more papers of January 9th and a hundred or more Almanacs that will be sent out to the first new subscribers that are sent us.

....Bro. E. Pendleton Jones accepts a call to Clifton Forge church, Va.—Pendleton St. church, Greenville, S. C., has called Rev. C. T. Herndon, Loudoun county, Va.

....The action of the Board of Missions in sending a brother to preach once a month to the convicts at the State farm in Halifax county was a step that all will approve.

....The move of our Board of Education to require those aided to give notes in return has excited extensively favorable comment, and likely will be adopted by Boards in other States.

....Rev. J. F. Fletcher, Edgewater, Va., writes: "I am well pleased with my field here, where I have been four years. I still feel a lively interest in all your work in North Carolina."

....Rev. J. L. Smith sends us seven new subscribers, and says: "I have been a constant reader of the RECORDER for twenty-five years. I think it grows better with each issue." Thank you.

....We were very glad to see Rev. C. W. Scarboro of Murfreesboro in Raleigh last week. He was a delegate to the Prohibition Convention. All his churches, are, as usual, earnestly pressing on.

....If the Legislature should look into the action of the Board of Trustees of the University in issuing ten perpetual scholarships to the heirs of Mr. Cameron, there would be a revelation calling for vigorous action.

....The christening of ships and church bells is authorized by the very next verse, in the same chapter and book, to the one which commands the christening of babies. Look into your Bible and see if this is not true.

....Bro. Spillman has made a fine start at Kinston. Few preachers of his age get a better place. Comparatively speaking, the church is financially strong. The brethren are wise, conservative and helpful to the pastor.

....The Mohammedans have raised a fund that returns $10,000 of interest annually, which will be used to maintain Mohammedan missions in America. This is plainly traceable to the World's Parliament of Religions.

....Why should the Legislature appropriate money, the taxes of the people, to a sectarian, a denominational, a Baptist institution, as it does in case of the colored orphanage at Oxford? It is a violation of Baptist principles.

....Prest. Charles F. Meserve, of Shaw University, has been elected Special Agent of the Indian Rights Association. We hope he will not accept. His administration at Shaw, though short, has so far been very gratifying.

....A long time ago a Georgia Legislature declined to charter a Baptist college on the ground that it would give the denomination too much strength. The Legislature had good judgment, but lacked wisdom and sense of justice.

....Bro. J. F Stevens of Clinton, N. C., is in Baltimore for treatment for his throat. He has been a man of wealth and great liberality, and many brethren who have been welcome visitors at his home will hear with sorrow of his failing health.

....The law has taken a decidedly gratifying turn against gambling since the Louisiana lottery was rooted out of the country. It is now a criminal offence to offer chances on guesses of the number of seed in a melon, etc. This is as it ought to be.

....Rev. A. L Betts of Madison sends two new subscribers and writes: "Dan Valley Baptist church gave the Sunday school a library of sixty-five volumes Christmas. This is the best disposal of money we have made. The children are delighted."

....We are pained to hear of the death of Bro. B. F. Keith, Sr., who died at his home at Keith, Pender county, N. C., the 15th inst., in his seventy-fifth year. He was a Baptist for more than half a century, and was clerk of his church, Bethlehem, many years.

....Prof. Steven McIntyre, principal of the Louisburg Male Academy, is one of the Wake Forest class of ninety three who has been steadily and creditably engaged in school work since he left Wake Forest. He has a good school and prospects are growing brighter.

....Can we not get every pastor to canvass, or get him to secure some one to canvass his church for the RECORDER? Many have helped us. We have made arrangements that warrant us in promising that the RECORDER will be unusually helpful the coming year.

....A great missionary rallying meeting is to be held in Mexico March 13, 14 and 15. Missionary Powell says "no one can be satisfied with the slow progress of Mexican missions," and he is striving for more soul-winning. The fact is, more progress is being made in Mexico than in any of our fields.

... Rev. John H. Mason of New Haven, in a paper recently read on Baptist Progress, is authority for saying that in the early days of Yale College, two young men were expelled from that institution of learning for no other reason than that they, during vacation in another town, attended preaching at a Baptist church.

....Revs. W. L. Grissom and H. M. Blair, editors of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, were pleasant visitors in the RECORDER office last week. They are aiming to make a great paper for the Methodists, have purchased a job printing outfit, and are earnestly at work.

....Thirty Christian colleges in North Carolina are deeply interested in Senate Bills 171 and 179 now before the Legislature. The former repeals special privileges given to the graduates of certain schools, and to two teachers, and the latter reduces, during the next two years, the appropriations to the University to ten thousand dollars.

....We regret to hear that Bro. H. B. Duffy, whose ardent work at the Charlotte Convention marked him as a zealous man of God, sustained a loss by partial burning of his residence at Newbern one day last week. Fortunately, Bro. Duffy had insurance both on his house and furniture.

....Messrs. I. M. Meekins and I. S. Boyles have been elected to represent the literary societies of Wake Forest College at Morehead in the Teachers' Assembly oratorical contest. Mr. Gray King has been elected business manager of the Wake Forest Student. 230 students have been enrolled.

....Brother Vann's article on the Home Board is earnestly commended to the reader. As we have said, this Board has made no special appeals for help; and now that a crisis is at hand, this appeal should meet with a brave response from our people. Bro. Tyree and others have written articles on the subject, which we hope to present next week.

....The memorial, as presented to the Legislature by the committee of the Convention, gives due notice to all of the continued, widening and deepening discussion of this question before the people. Men never were more determined on anything than our brethren are on the continued discussion before the people of this question. They have no doubt of the final results.

....Rev. R. T. Vann of Scotland Neck was a welcome visitor in this office last week. He came to attend the meeting of the State Board, and brought some new subscribers for the RECORDER. We were glad to see Bro. Vann looking so well.

....There are more than sixty applicants to the Foreign Mission Board right now on hand, and others coming in every week to be sent to the foreign field as missionaries of the Board, and no money in hand to send them.—R. J. Willingham at the South Carolina Convention.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard was in Raleigh a short while last week. He is greatly encouraged in his work. The brethren are receiving him well wherever he goes. About eight thousand dollars have been pledged, and there are many who are holding back to make up their minds. Bro. Blanchard has authority to take subscriptions for the RECORDER.

... Bro. J. H. Tucker and family are visiting relatives and friends in Warren county. They hope soon to have a pastor for the First church in Asheville. We are glad to hear from him that Bro. Betts, who recently went to the second church, is succeeding finely with his work. We hope a bright day has dawned for the brethren and sisters of this church.

....It will be to our mutual advantage if the pastors will urge their people to take advantage of our offer of the RECORDER from Jan. 9th to May 10th for fifty cents; this is less than three cents a week. Who cannot afford that? One cent extra, and we send an Almanac, a copy of which every Baptist ought to hang by his fireside.

....Bro. J. H. Lamberth writes that he is much pleased with Mt. Airy, his new field. Gratifying improvements have recently been made in fitting up the church. Mt. Airy, from a business standpoint, has a hopeful future. The cause of the Baptists will continue to grow stronger under the wise and vigorous ministry of Bro. Lamberth.

....With the articles on "Annihilation," which are concluded with a vigorous instalment in this issue, it will be easy for any reader to refute the heresies of the Adventists. Brother Albritton did his work thoroughly, treating the subject from every standpoint. A brother of acknowledged ability is preparing a series of articles on Seventh day worship.

....Statements have been made by newspaper correspondents that a caucus of the dominant elements in the General Assembly has decided not to touch the University and other appropriations to higher education. These statements are not to be believed. On the other hand, while we cannot say what will be done, we are confident that a step will be taken toward the right.

....The reader will be surprised to know that a State-aided institution of higher education that has been boasting of the number of needy students it is helping, counts children under ten years of age on its rolls. We wish there were means to learn the exact number of students at the University, the schools or departments they are in, and the time of year and the place at which they were matriculated.

....Dr. Robertson of Glascow, Scotland, is represented as saying recently that it was by only one vote, that of the chairman, which gave twenty-five to twenty-four that established sprinkling instead of immersion as baptism in the Presbyterian Confession of faith in the great church meeting in A. D. 1644. It is well said "by how little some people miss the truth," and yet how far they miss it.—Exchange.

....Bro. J. K. Fant of Littleton has been called to Barnwell, S. C. He has done good work at Littleton and other points in the Tar River Association, and we hope he may find it in the path of duty to remain in this State.——We are grieved to hear of the critical illness of Sister Browning of Littleton. The Editor of the RECORDER remembers Brother and Sister Browning among his earliest and best friends and extends to them his sincere sympathy.

....Sec'y J. F. MacDuffie informed us last week that the cause of ministerial relief is rapidly growing in favor. His article on another page is especially deserving of prayerful consideration. It is rather unusual but it is nevertheless true, that this Board has not yet begun to reach a majority of those for whose benefit it was organized. There are many needy retired preachers here and there about the State, and they ought to be cared for.

....At a recent fortnightly gathering of the Wake Forest "Bible Bands," an organization, under the direction of Prof. W. L. Poteat, engaged in study of the Bible, Prof. J. H. Gorrell read a paper on the "Interbiblical Period and the Rise and Characteristics of the Jewish Sects," of such merit that he was requested to send it to the RECORDER for publication. It will be printed as soon as some other matter is disposed of.

....Rev. N. S. Jones of Salisbury called to see us one day last week. He gets more and more in love with his field, and his people are growing stronger. It has not been long since Salisbury was a mission point. Now it has a good church, a good pastor, a good parsonage, and makes contributions to all our objects. There is a secret of this progress that all should know: systematic work and keeping everlastingly at it.

....The following brethren have our thanks for clubs of subscribers sent last week: Revs. Josiah Elliott, Hertford, C. W. Blanchard, Cary, G. O. Wilhoit, Asheville, J. A. Stradley, Oxford, J. A. Campbell, who reports 180 enrolled at Buie's Creek Academy, Bro. Wm. Rogers having moved into the community in order to get the advantage of this excellent institution; Rev. J. M. Hilliard, High Point, Rev. J. A. McKaughan, Enfield, who is rejoicing in the good things the sisters pounded him with the other day. Others who have sent one or more have our gratitude.

....From a table of statistics published by the Baptist Courier, we take the following figures: There are 864 white Baptist churches in South Carolina; their membership was increased 3,787 by baptisms last year; fellowship was withdrawn from 1,165. Total membership is 85 941; they contributed, all told, $170,875 16 last year. Church property is valued at $975,886.

....With the RECORDER at fifty cents for nineteen weeks, running a series of articles especially designed to indoctrinate, there can be no excuse for weak memberships any longer. Remember we have an extra supply of last issue and this issue, in order that new subscribers may get the benefit of the entire series. If the money is not convenient, we will send the paper on any pastor's security.

....We are glad to hear of the cheerful spirits of Bro. C. M. Cooke of Louisburg. The defeat of few men has ever caused so much sincere regret from friends in all parts of the State. We hear that his law practice was never better than now. With plenty of work, and the calm and sensible way Bro. Cook has of dealing with affairs, he is out of reach of harm from a calamity of this sort.

....From the Calvary Baptist Weekly, published by Calvary Baptist church, New Haven, Conn., we learn that this church, of which Rev. E. M. Poteat is pastor, has a total membership of 809: the increase by baptisms last year was 82. A new church has been formed from this church in the last twelve months, but notwithstanding, the mother church shows a net gain of 48 members. The total benevolence of the church was $5,200.

....Rev. J. N. Stallings lead the list last week with a club of ten subscribers. He has sent us many in recent months. He writes: "I hope you are not publishing any of the paragraphs going around to the effect that I have removed to Rowan county." His resignation of his Davie work has not been accepted, and he is still preaching as usual. It is earnestly desired that he will remain. Bro. Stallings and his accomplished daughter, Miss Bettie, are teaching at Franklin Academy, but this work is probably temporary.

....The State Prohibition Association met at Raleigh last week. Most of the legislators attended the session. Revs. J. W. Carter, D. Atkins, Mr. Jones, Mr. Rice and Mr. T. B. Long made speeches. The meeting was a vigorous one and made a good impression. If the good people of the State will work up petitions, it is probable that an anti saloon measure will be enacted. Every reader is urged to send his name at least to the Assembly, praying for deliverance from the evils flourishing under the present law.

....The "underlying thought" of the next B. Y. P. U. A. Convention, to be held at Baltimore, is evangelism. The Baltimore Baptist has christened itself the Evangel. Two and two. By the way, a brother remarked not long ago that the Baptist's change of name was very timely (in another direction, we mean), since in the issue announcing the change, it advertised the program of an occasion to be observed in the church of which one of the paper's editor was pastor, and on the program was a woman-speaker. Evangels may do as they choose, but Baptists must stand by the Bible.

....Rev. C. C. Brown has planned a map of Baptist churches in South Carolina, for no other reason, says he, than that he believes there ought to be such a work. The map, which is now in the hands of the publishers, will have marked any Baptist church in the Palmetto State, with indications of the date of its organization, the size of its membership, &c., &c. We know a man (he is named Durham), who carries a map of North Carolina Baptist churches in his head. When his brethren give him time and he is grown a little older, we expect him to put his knowledge in the permanent form of a book. At present he is engaged in the more admirable work of history making.

....The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools was in session till 11:45 p. m. Jan. 23nd. Most of the appropriations for the year were made. In all the applications, almost $30,000 were asked for by the mission fields. Many worthy applications for aid could not be granted. In most cases, too, when appropriations were made, the amount given had necessarily to be much smaller than the amount named in the application. The Board united with the Tar River Association in the appointment and and in the support of a brother to preach once-a-month to the convicts on the State farm in Halifax county. The Board could use wisely in the work, for the next five years, $35,000 annually, and could use $75,000 annually in aiding mission stations in building houses of worship. These destitute sections need and ought to have this help. The next meeting of the Board will be held in mission rooms at 7:30 p. m. Feb. 26th, 1895.

....Rev. J. F. MacDuffie of Durham was in to see us last week. He has an earnest announcement on another page that we commend to our readers. Bro. MacDuffie gave encouraging accounts of our Durham interests. The first church is getting along finely in its efforts to enlarge. Bro. Tyree grows stronger and stronger with his people. Bro. Dowell is faithfully at work, and his people are encouraging him. Bro. Horton has settled down, and is going with the same steady gait that characterized his Selma work. Bro. MacDuffie has a church in West Durham now. It began with less than twenty members, but is growing rapidly. The Sunday-school, under the direction of Prof. E. L. Middleton, is doing much good, and is a constant source of members to the church. With a church in East and West Durham, and a First and Second church besides, there is every reason to rejoice at the prospect of Durham becoming a Baptist stronghold.

....We would like to recommend that some of our pastors, or others who may have the work of raising money to defray church expenses, would write either to Bro. W. B. Morton or Bro. E. S. Green for the plan the church at Louisburg is now using. The first day of January, 1894, by the Treasurer's account, the church was nearly one hundred dollars in debt; the first Sunday in January, 1895, the church had about the same amount to its credit after all debts had been paid.

....Rev. L. R. Pruett writes 24th: 'Our meeting at Albemarle closed last night. Large crowds came to the services through the rain and mud. I have never been in a more enjoyable meeting, one in which I had such free use of the Bible. It was a power. Forty-two were converted, thirty-four of whom joined the Baptist church. Pastor Tuttle has won the hearts and hands of the brethren; for they are going ahead in building a parsonage and Sunday-school rooms, and fitting in a baptistery in rear of pulpit. Our work in Charlotte is prospering."

To the General Assembly of North Carolina.

A MEMORIAL AND PETITION.

A Committee appointed by the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, at its sixty-third annual session, to memorialize the General Assembly of North Carolina with reference to friction between the State and private schools which are engaged in higher, collegiate, and university education, most respectfully submits to your honorable body the following Memorial and Petition.

After several months of serious consideration, the Committee is fully convinced;—

That the roots and ultimate causes of the friction which you are asked to remove are in the laws of the State; and that nothing less than a change in the laws which direct the educational policy of the State will relieve the friction:

That this relief can be given by action of the General Assembly; for the Constitution makes the will of the people, expressed from time to time through their Representatives in the General Assembly, the supreme authority of the State for the appropriation of money from the Treasury of the State to higher, collegiate, or university education:

That a large proportion of the voters of the State, including many of the best friends of education, without regard to their political affiliations or religious convictions, believe that the time has come for a cautious but thorough revision of the laws which shape the educational policy of the State:

That the several Christian colleges and other private and denominational schools whose usefulness is imperilled are entitled to consideration from your body. They represent, in their equipments, endowments, &c., several millions of dollars invested and voluntarily contributed by friends of education. They employ as instructors many men and women of the best scholarship and the highest character. They have sent forth a large proportion of the most successful teachers, preachers, farmers, lawyers, doctors, and business men in the State. They have many thousands of friends who are ready to make sacrifices to sustain and enlarge them. They are exerting such widespread and salutary influences that their continued existence and unhampered expansion seem necessary for the greatest good of the State:

That the illiteracy of large numbers of the people of North Carolina is a reproach to the State, is unfavorable to its prosperity, and is a menace to its good government; that this illiteracy can be removed only through the agency of the Public Schools; and that these will require all the taxes of the people which can be expended for educational purposes.

That the policy of appropriating the taxes of the people to the support of higher education in Colleges and Universities is not only unjust to the public schools, with which these Colleges and Universities have no organic connection, but is actually obstructive to the most natural and healthful development of collegiate or university education in the State:

That the continued appropriation to higher education of any part of the taxes of the people which might be used in keeping the Public Schools open for four months a year, as required by the mandate of the Constitution, is unnecessary, and, therefore, unwise and wrong:

That this appropriation is unnecessary because it is possible for all higher collegiate, or university education to be provided for, not from the taxes of the people, but by private munificence, through endowments or otherwise, on the principle of voluntary support:

That the voluntary system is not only right in itself, but has proved its practical efficiency in every State in which it has had a fair trial:

That some of the same general principles which have demanded the separation of Church and State demand also the severance of higher education from State support; that no more important service was ever rendered by human government to true religion than its severance from State support and control, and no more friendly service was ever rendered to the established churches themselves than the action which compelled all the churches in this country, without discrimination, to adopt the voluntary system: that, now, no more important or friendly service can be rendered to the cause of general education and to the several schools now maintained by the State for higher, collegiate, or university education than the adoption for them by the General Assembly of the system of voluntary support:

That nothing short of a practical recognition and actual establishment of the principle of voluntary support in the higher education can remove the unnecessary, unwise, and hurtful friction, or can relieve the State of the widening and deepening discussion of what is believed by many thousands of people to be an unjust policy in education on the part of the State.

Now, therefore, we, your Memorialists, beg to submit to your honorable body that the Christian denomination, by whose Convention we are charged with this duty, has always, in peace and in war, been faithful to every interest of the State; that its members are the uncompromising friends of civil and religious liberty; and that they are ardent advocates of all education, the highest as well as the lowest.

Representing, as we believe, the views and wishes of the overwhelming majority of the members of this body of Christians, we beg you to hear and consider our petition:

1st. While we do not ask for any violent action on your part, we do ask that practical recognition shall be given by your body at this session to the voluntary principle in the support and control of all higher education in our State. We ask that this principle shall be so fully established in the laws of the State as ultimately to put all the institutions of higher learning on the same plane, so far as the principle of their control and support is concerned. We recognize the necessity for a period of transition. We believe that this period should be reasonable in extent, but definite in limit.

2nd. That all the taxes of the people which are available for educational purposes shall be spent in the better schooling of the children of the State in Public Schools, and that due encouragement be given to the principle of voluntary local taxation for Common School purposes.

3rd. That no exemption from examination for certificates to teach in the Public Schools shall be allowed to any person.

4th. That no institution for higher, collegiate, or university education shall be allowed, while aided by appropriations from the Treasury of the State, to issue or use scholarships unless these are based upon an actual annual money income sufficient to pay the regular charges in full for the privileges granted, said income to accrue from sources other than the appropriations made, for the time being, by the State.

5th. That all institutions chartered by the State for industrial and normal education shall confine themselves strictly to that work so long as they shall be supported in whole or in part by appropriations from the State.

6th. That no law making an appropriation to any institution shall continue in force, without re-enactment, for a longer period than the intervals between the meetings of the General Assembly.

It is believed that, if it were necessary, petitions signed by a majority of the voters in every county where this subject has been discussed before the people could be presented to you. But we hope that this will not be necessary, believing, as we do, that the members of your honorable body already understand, to a great extent, at least, the wishes of the people of North Carolina as to the educational policy of the State.

Fully trusting to your capacity and purpose to deal with the very important questions which are brought to your attention in this Memorial in such a way as to secure the best and largest and most permanent results to all classes of the people of the State, we submit our Petition to your honorable body.

And your Memorialists will ever pray, etc.

The Crisis in Our Home Mission Work

In the RECORDER of Jan. 16, Dr. Tichenor says that the indebtedness of the Home Board is not only heavy and growing heavier, but that it seriously endangers the Board's credit. This is a very grave statement, and demands our thoughtful attention. Hitherto the funds of both the Foreign and Home Boards have come in so irregularly that they have been under the necessity of borrowing large sums; by the close of the year, the churches have sent up the necessary amounts, so that the credit of the Boards has been maintained, and the work has gone on.

This plan has been somewhat costly, but it has seemed the only available one. In spite of many efforts to secure regular contributions so as to enable the Boards to proceed on a cash basis they have so far been compelled to work after the same old methods. Now: failure of the credit of either Board would amount to a calamity so far as we can now see, it would mean the curtailment of its work by at least one half, and the abandonment of fields that have been won at so much cost.

Brethren, are not the Baptists of North Carolina responsible in part for the present condition of the Home Board? While our numbers have steadily increased for the last four years, our contributions to this Board have as steadily decreased. In 1891 our gifts for this object, including money for the Havana house, reached nearly $10,000, while last year they amounted to only $3,000. This shrinkage is, no doubt, due in part to the stringency of the times; but it is far out of proportion to the decrease in our contributions for other objects.

The Board must have $30,000 in ninety days. If every pastor in North Carolina will see to it that his church or churches take one collection for this object by the middle of April, our part of the deficiency can be easily raised.

"An Offer of $200 00 in Gold."

No book is selling so rapidly as "Talks to Children about Jesus." The publishers, R. H. Woodard Company, Baltimore, Md., are making a most liberal offer of $200 in gold to agents who sell within the next three months two hundred copies. The book is sold very low and is beautifully illustrated. Freight is paid and credit given. Send at once thirty-five cents for canvassing outfit and full information. They also publish other popular books.

Help Deserved.

Dear Recorder:—Two appeals have been made by Josiah Elliott to the brethren throughout the State for aid in lifting the burden which rests upon him from having encumbered his home in building a church in Hyde county. Acquainted with all the circumstances, a witness to his zeal and unselfish devotion to the cause, and with full knowledge of the exigency of the situation, I wish to add my voice in asking brethren to make him a contribution.

He has done what no other brother within my knowledge would have been willing to do. He has made it possible for us to say, what before was not possible, that we have a Baptist church in every county in North Carolina from Dare to Cherokee.

But to do this, which ought to be a matter for rejoicing to every Baptist in the State, he has been forced to place a mortgage on his own home. There has been no failure on the part of our churches here to do their part. But it is not expected that one little Union Meeting should be able, in these hard times, to add one thousand dollars, within a few months, to its already liberal contribution to other denominational objects. We have the right to appeal to Baptists throughout the State in this matter. The debt now is $480. But a few weeks ago, it was over $1,000.

I am not writing to praise Josiah Elliott; he doesn't want me or any other man to do that; but to urge and press this matter upon the attention of Baptist who have the Lord's money and want to put it where it is urgently needed.

Send a contribution—if not large, then small—to Rev. Josiah Elliott, Hertford, N. C.

Elenton, Jan. 24, 1895.

Our Ministerial Relief Board.

I call it "our Board" because it belongs to us as New Testament churches. I believe it is of Divine origin, hence I believe it our duty to support it. Support it with benefi ciaries as well as means. The Educational Board at Wake Forest is a failure if we as a people do not send boys there for them to see after and devise plans for their mental training. It does not make any difference if we had one million dollars endowment, if they have not the material to work on, it is a failure. Our Mission Board at Raleigh is a failure if they have no unconverted souls to send the gospel to, if we were to contribute five times the amounts we send for these objects. So it is with all the departments of our work. Boards, if I understand for what they are organized, are simply coupling mediums to connect the work with Christ's church. It is only a matter of organized conveniences for special church work.

Brethren of the churches, pastors and laymen: We need your co-operation and sympathies in two ways—first, we need information about those worthy ones in your churches, who have well nigh spent their lives in preaching the gospel, and are getting only a meager support from those about them. Those about them, no doubt, are doing their duty by them, for I don't think I would be loyal to my Master if I did not divide the last morsel of bread with one of them if I were to see him suffering, but there are so many who are not doing anything in this direction for their relief, who would no doubt, if their needs were brought to bear upon their minds,—men and women whom they have learned to love and respect for their work's sake. The trouble with many of our brethren is, they don't know anything about them—where they are—and what are their needs. If you will let us know of these, we will try to let everybody know of them and what are their needs. This is our business, brethren, and we take pleasure in doing so. The other need is a support for them after they shall have been received by the Board. We did more for them last year, than we have ever done, but not so much as we ought to have done.

Out of all the Associations in our Convention, there are only ten beneficiaries on the Board, and three of these are from one Association. I hope there are no others in needy circumstances, but I am constrained to believe if the brethren will look around them, they will find others in need. Brethren, let us hear from you if there are any. It will help them, help us, and help you.

We would be glad to hear from the brethren to whom we have written in the following Associations, but have received no answer: Alexander, Ashe and Alleghany, Beulah, Brier Creek, Brushy Mountain, Cedar Creek, Columbus, King's Mountain, Mecklenburg and Cabarrus, Montgomery, Pilot Mountain, South Atlantic, South River, South Yadkin, Stanly, Stony Ford, Three Forks, Union, and Yadkin. If these brethren don't represent us, will the Moderators of these different Associations kindly recommend some suitable brother.

We have ten beneficiaries on the Board now with their families (thirty in all), and we would be so glad to give them a good contribution at our meeting the fourth Wednesday in February. Take one collection for us, brethren, if you can before that time, so that we may be able to gladden their hearts and homes.

A Valuable Seed Book.

Every gardener and farmer should send for a copy of T. W. Wood & Son's new Seed Book for 1895. It gives much practical information about the culture of all crops, monthly operations for the farm and garden, and hints as to what can be most profitably grown. It is especially valuable to Southern farmers and gardeners, and will be mailed free to all readers of the "BIBLICAL RECORDER" who will write for it, to T. W. Wood & Son's, Richmond, Va.

My paper—the RECORDER. I hope to send you a club soon.—John C. Hocutt.

Royall Chair.

Received for Royall Chair: J. R. Moore, $10.00; John H. Bowling, $5 00; Rev. J. W. Lynch, $10 00; Rev. C. L. Merrill, $5 00; W. W. Vass, Jr., $25 00; A. F. and A. V. Purefoy, $10 00; Judson church per Rev. J. H. Edwards, $5 00. Total, $70 00.

The Keeley Institute.

GREENSBORO, Jan. 28, 1895.

The Rev. Egbert W. Smith, co pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, at his own instance, recently instituted an investigation into the merits of the Keeley Treatment as evidenced in the graduates of the Greensboro Keeley Institute who live under his immediate observation, and in the Daily Record of the 26th gives the following statement to the public over his own signature. He says:

"The whole number of alcoholic patients from Guilford county that have been treated in our Greensboro Institute is thirty-two. The average time that has elapsed since their treatment is three years lacking two months. Of this number nineteen, or six y per cent. have remained perfectly sober since leaving the Institute.

In my judgment this showing, though unfair to the Institute, as will presently appear, is yet amply sufficient to convince the most skeptical of the efficacy of the Keeley treatment and to make it the duty of every drinking man to try it. If it offered the victim of the drink habit one chance out of ten for deliverance from so intolerable a curse, surely to refuse it would be folly; but even according to the gross figures given above it offers him not one but six chances out of ten.

But the probabilities of a cure are far greater than sixty out of one hundred, as we shall now see. Of the thirty-two patients thirteen relapsed. Of these thirteen, twelve had taken not the full four weeks but only a three weeks' treatment. The brief course used to be sometimes permitted, but for more than two years it has been discarded by the Keeley authorities, experience having proved that a thorough cure can not certainly be effected in less than four weeks. They refuse to register any man as a patient unless he will take the complete treatment, and also place himself as a lodger under the daily regimen of the Institute. The above twelve fulfilled neither of these two vital and common sense conditions of successful treatment. Subtracting these from the entire number we have twenty left, of whom nineteen, or exactly ninety-five per cent, are to-day industrious and sober men.

It seems to me that such facts should command the attention not only of drinking men, but of parents, pastors, and church officers. Their prayers for the reformation of the intemperate would no doubt be more speedily answered if they would persuade the backsliding members of their families and congregations to adopt this means of grace and rescue which God in his Providence seems to have provided.

EGBERT W. SMITH."

From Bull Head, N. C.

Dear Recorder;—Ever since I have been living in this part of the State, I have often wondered why our church (the Baptist) did not make some effort to establish themselves in this region.

I am indeed pleased to know that there have been efforts made in this direction. We are also pleased to know that Rev. W. A. Ferrell is the man to work this field. Bro. Ferrell accepted the pastorate of our church at Eureka on last Sunday. We feel worthy of congratulation in securing his services as pastor. We are sure that the right man is in the right place, when Bro. Ferrell is to engage in doing the mission work in this field.

A MIDNIGHT VISITOR.

Every Mother Should Be Prepared to Battle with Croup—The Best Remedy.

(From the Providence, R. I., Telegram.)

What word carries more terror to a mother than croup, that insidious visitor who steals upon her children at night when drug stores are closed and physicians not within reach. Croup does its deadly work quick, and if not met at the outset with stringent methods is almost sure to prove a conqueror. Every mother should keep a remedy where she can reach it at the first ominous bark. It has been truly said that a bottle of Perry Davis' Pain-Killer on the medicine shelf insures greater safety from such ills than would a doctor in your house. Pain-Killer was the chief remedy of our grandfathers and with all the advances of science nothing has been found to take its place.

For croup it is without an equal. An instance of this was yesterday cited to a reporter by Mrs. J. B. G. Hoskins, of No. 60 Marion Street, the wife of one of the sturdy wheelwrights of Providence, R. I.

"Nobody knows the anxiety, the torture of mind I have experienced because of croup. Hours of sleep I have lost while watching at the bedside of my boy, who has suffered almost a thousand deaths from croup in its worst form. I tried every remedy that kind friends could suggest. All failed me, and I was in despair. Pain-Killer finally conquered the terrible disease. My boy is now seven years old, and whenever I see that croup is returning I give Pain-Killer. In twenty minutes the trouble is over and we both go to sleep.

"Pain-Killer? Why I wouldn't be without it in my house a moment for a king's ransom. I feel as though it saved my boy-year old son of trouble after all other remedies failed, and it saved me the probable loss of a limb from a broken artery caused by the kick of a vicious horse. Pain-Killer at once reduced the swelling and prevented blood-poisoning."

Some British Liberal newspapers are advocating the expulsion of the Turk from Europe—say the time is now come for that work to be done. But for the jealousy of the nations about the possession of Constantinople, it would have been done ere this.

power of sin, and restore this sin-cursed world to him who redeemed it.

I knew a community where sin abounded, and righteousness was almost unknown. The general resort for the men of the neighborhood was the bar room. A few devout Christians gathered the people into a Sunday school, and taught them the Word of God. A humble man of God began preaching the gospel to them once a month. In a few short years the character of the neighborhood was changed. Large numbers professed faith in Christ, and followed him in baptism. A strong church was organized, a substantial house of worship was erected on the identical spot formerly occupied by the bar room, and the baptistery was built within the walls of the old still house. What caused this change? Not worldly might nor worldly wisdom, but the gospel of Christ which is the power of God unto salvation.

The gospel of Christ is the hope of the world—without it the world is lost and ruined forever.

The reformers of our day are earnestly seeking for something that will successfully reform the world. Each has his own pet scheme, and each is doomed to disappointment. The gospel of Christ is the only antidote for the vices, corruption, and dishonesty that exist in the social, political, business and religious world, and this remedy is when properly employed gloriously effective.

I believe in the salvation of the world. I am no pessimist. I know there are those who say that sin will always abound, and that vice will always exist. They insist, for instance, that there is no use in fighting the rum power, for it is too strong for us, and we shall never overthrow it. But this cannot be true, for God lives, and has promised to give our Saviour King the heathen for an inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession. When that time shall come, and come it will, there will be no place in this world for bar rooms and still houses, for rumsellers and drunkards. I do not think that this will be accomplished by associations for moral reform or political agitation, or legislative enactment. I do not oppose these efforts, on the contrary I heartily rejoice in the efforts that are thus being made. They will likely do good, and under the influence of the gospel of Christ hasten the day of redemption. But if the world is to be saved from intemperance, heathenism, idolatry, and all manner of vice and corruption (and it will be), it will be by the gospel of Christ faithfully preached to the world, for the Word of God, which constitutes the weapons of our warfare, is mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.

Brethren, an important trust has been committed to our keeping, even the glorious gospel of the Son of God. We have been assigned to an important mission—the evangelization of the world. In the prosecution of this work, we will need to equip ourselves with the whole armor of God, and faithfully go forward in obedience to his commands. There must be no laggards, there must be no drones, for the Captain of our Salvation expects every one to do his duty.

Brethren and fellow-soldiers, the work in which we are engaged is far more important than any enterprise that ever inspired the energies of men or angels. Men assemble in their conventions and associations to devise plans for the promotion of the political, social, commercial, intellectual, and moral enterprises in which they are interested. The representatives of the people assemble to legislate for the varied interests of a vast domain. We are assembled in convention to devise means for the promotion of the kingdom of Christ, and to put in operation plans for the saving of the world. Their work is important, but it relates to the material advancement of the world in which we live; and important as it is, it is destined to perish with the world to which it belongs. We are engaged in the work of the Lord, and our efforts have reference not only to the present, but also to the eternal welfare of mankind, and when the works of the wise shall have perished, and human pomp and human greatness shall have forever passed away, the results of the labors of the faithful of the Lord shall still exist, approved by him, and the faithful workman shall receive his reward.

Brethren, the battle rages! The enemy is strong and arrogant. On every part of the field he disputes the progress of the soldiers of the Cross. But the news of the battle is encouraging. In Christian lands many thousands are annually being captured from the enemy. These heartily join themselves to our forces and are doing valiant service for the Master. From the outposts in heathen lands the cheering news comes that the strongholds of heathenism are slowly giving way before the continuous assaults of the heroic band of missionaries that constitute the vanguard of the army of Christ. Do not become discouraged, though the battle is fierce and terrible and the time of deliverance seems to tarry. God is on our side and we have as the weapon of our defense the Word of his power; and we know that "the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but are mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as you know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." As we go forward in the work of the Lord, let us faithfully watch for his coming, and earnestly pray, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

"Five years ago," says Angus A. Lewis, Ricard, N. Y., "I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and had been given up by my physicians. I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and after using two bottles was completely cured."

No man ever worked honestly without giving some help to his race.—Ruskin.

Annihilation of the Wicked.

BY JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

The very copiousness and variety of Scripture testimony to the everlasting punishment of the wicked make it difficult for me to decide where to begin or where to end. I cannot give a tithe of the testimony, but must be content with a few of the clearest and most convincing passages from the Word of God.

It may be well to say, at the outset, that much of the language used by the sacred writers and by Christ himself to describe the realities of the future state is figurative, and necessarily so, from our utter ignorance and inexperience of existence beyond the grave. Even the Supreme Being is represented to our finite minds as having corporeal parts, as arm, hand, finger, eye, &c. We need not be surprised, therefore, to find corporeal parts ascribed to man in the state after death, or to find the inspired descriptions of the future state abounding in imagery drawn from the familiar objects, scenes, usages and customs of the present life.

We may reasonably expect that the plainest teachings concerning the future state fell from the lips of the great Redeemer, who brought life and immortality to light. During his ministry, he came in contact with various religious sects, among which were the Sadducees and the Pharisees.

The Sadducees, like some modern annihilationists, considered the soul as dying with the body, and denied a future state of rewards and punishments, the resurrection of the body, and the existence of angels and spirits. See Luke 20: 27, and Acts 23: 8.

The Pharisees, while they were rigid interpreters of the letter of the Mosaic law, frequently violated its spirit by their traditional and philosophical interpretations. And hence, the Saviour often denounced them for their pride, covetousness, hypocrisy and ostentation. They believed in the immortality of the soul, future rewards and punishments, and the resurrection of the body.

Says Josephus, "The Pharisees believe that souls have an immortal vigor in them, and that under the earth there will be rewards and punishments, according as they have lived, some virtuously and others viciously, in this life: the latter are to be retained in an everlasting prison, but the former shall have power to revive and live again." "They suppose every soul," continues Josephus, "is incorruptible, but only the soul of the good passes over into another body, while that of the bad is punished with eternal punishment."

Paul says, "I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." Acts 23: 6. Says Paul again, "After the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." Acts. 24: 14, 15. We learn that the resurrection of the just and unjust, AS SUCH, was the faith of not only the Pharisees, but also Israel and the Apostle to the Gentiles.

Now, as to a future life and its conditions, with which of the foregoing sects did Christ agree? Did he agree with the Sadducees? Or did he agree with the Pharisees? Or did he agree with neither of them?

Turn to Luke 20: 27-38, where the Sadducees sought to humiliate Christ and demolish the doctrine of the resurrection by the argument known as the reductio ad absurdum. They thought the argument unanswerable. The case was this: seven men, one at a time, married a certain woman. All the men having died, at last the woman died also. In the resurrection, would she be the wife of one, or of all of them? In either case, non-existence or annihilation would be preferable to existence cursed with such domestic infelicities as this case suggested. Our Saviour had a fine opportunity to affirm the doctrine of annihilation, if he believed in the annihilation of any human being. But he did not so believe; and, therefore, he met the argument by replying, in substance, that the marriage relation, designed for the well-being of society in this world, would not be perpetuated in the world to come. "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." True, Christ speaks truly of the resurrection of the just only, or of those "accounted worthy to obtain that world" and called "the children of God;" but, like Paul and Israel, he believed and taught elsewhere the resurrection of the unjust also. Said he, "The hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5: 28, 29. So, according to Christ's teaching, there is no annihilation before the resurrection and there is none after.

The endless duration of future punishment is repeatedly taught by the Saviour and his apostles. He declared that, at his second coming, all nations should be gathered before him, and separated as a shepherd divides his sheep from the goats. Of the two classes he says, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." Matt. 25: 46. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." John 3: 36. Paul says, "Despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long-suffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance? But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God; who will render to every man according to his deeds: to them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life; but unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, * * * * in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel." Rom. 2: 4-9, 16. According to Paul, they that obey unrighteousness will go from the judgment—not to annihilation—but to indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish.

We have seen that Christ does not agree with the Sadducees in their belief that the soul dies with the body, and that there are neither rewards nor punishments beyond this life; but that he does agree with the Pharisees in their belief of future existence and retribution, although he often denounced them for their hypocrisy and other sins.

In the sixteenth chapter of Luke, we learn that he encountered them and so displeased them that they derided him. Then follows the so called parable of the rich man and

Lazarus, one of the most important and instructive passages in the word of God. Some regard it as a narrative; others, as a parable. Assuming it to be the latter, let us ascertain—not what the Saviour intended to teach or enforce by it—but what constitutes its background. For all his parables have their setting in a background of well-known facts, customs or natural objects, or generally recognized principles and beliefs.

Upon a careful reading of the parable in Luke 16: 19–31, we will find that the chief facts and principles that constitute its background are these—(1) men live; (2) men die; (3) men live after death; (4) some men are happy after death; (5) some men are wretched after death; (6) destiny is determined by character and conduct; and (7) the destiny of men, for weal or woe, beyond this present life, is unalterably fixed.

If there had been, in the minds of those to whom Christ spake this parable, no knowledge of the fact that men live or die, and no belief in conscious future existence, and no belief in the unhappy condition of the wicked and happy condition of the righteous after death, then the parable of this godless worldling and pious beggar would have had no basis, nothing to rest upon, and, consequently, the whole passage would have been without force or significance to those for whose benefit it was spoken. It is as reasonable to deny that men live or that men die, as it is to deny existence beyond the grave, or that a man's future condition will be happy or wretched according as his life has been virtuous or vicious.

I cannot forbear quoting a sentence or two from Dr. Alvah Hovey upon this parable. Says he, "he (Christ) presents in brief the history of two supposed persons as samples of the way in which all who are like them will be treated—the prosperous unbeliever of this life sinking into misery at its close, and the afflicted believer passing at once from death into blessedness. Thus interpreted, the lesson is indeed a tremendous one, but as an honest man I cannot possibly give it any other interpretation. Nor can I believe that the merciful Redeemer purposely exaggerated the difference between the state of the lost and the state of the saved after death. How unutterably criminal, then, is sin! And what madness is in the heart of those who will not repent! In these days of apology for evil-doing, the language of Christ seems fearfully bold and plain, but something in the secret places of the soul responds to its truth, and warns the sinner at times to flee from the wrath to come."

Before leaving this instructive parable, I wish to add a word or two concerning the underlying principle, that the destiny of men, for weal or woe, beyond the present life, is unalterably fixed. This principle is clearly set forth in the reply of Abraham to the rich man, "Between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence." Luke 16: 26. If this answer teaches anything, it teaches that the destiny of the righteous and the wicked is unalterably, eternally fixed, by a great, impassable gulf—whatever that may be—of separation between the wretchedness of the wicked and the happiness of the righteous, a no infernal chasm that genius can bridge and no celestial wing can pass. There will be, after death, no radical change of character, no regeneration, no passing from death to life or life to death. The just will continue to be just, and the wicked will continue to be wicked. If there be any change whatever, it is in the direction already taken—from good to better, or from bad to worse. True, the rich man wished relief from suffering; but gave no evidence of penitence for his sins. It is also true that he prayed; but even in his prayers he ignored God as he had done in the present life, and prayed to a saint! He that lives and dies in a state of settled hostility to God will remain in this state forever.

Dear reader, the Bible is a plain book, written for plain men. The few passages which I have brought forward from that book are but a modicum of the passages that teach the endless punishment of the wicked. These Scriptures, taken in their obvious meaning, are sufficient for the honest, candid inquirer after truth, however uncultivated his intellect or scanty his learning. If they do not teach the endlessness of future punishment, then the Holy Spirit has spoken in a manner fatally adapted to mislead the soul on a subject of the utmost importance, and Christ and his apostles, had it been their constant and studious aim, could not have spoken more delusively to mankind.

They who deny the doctrine feel that the Scripture testimony is against them, and are driven to the most absurd methods of interpretation, to the distortion and perversion of the plainest language in the Bible, and to the wildest jugglery of Scripture words and phrases ever known or heard of. A wise man will shun their learned mystifications, as he would the coils of the deadly serpent.

But are there not some passages that seem to teach that the soul will be annihilated? Suppose there are; our duty is to interpret them in harmony with those passages whose meaning is obvious and unmistakable.

For instance, John 3: 16 and 2 Thess. 1: 9 have been thought to favor the cause of the annihilationists. "He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." They who teach that the soul will be annihilated at death claim the first passage as supporting their view, holding that to perish means to be annihilated; while they who teach the annihilation of the soul at a subsequent period or at the judgment rely upon the second passage, holding that everlasting destruction means annihilation.

The words perish, destruction, &c., which are used in the Scriptures to describe the destiny of the wicked and unbelieving, whatever else they may mean, cannot mean the annihilation of the wicked, since such an interpretation of these words would be contradictory to the teachings of those Scriptures whose meaning is obvious and unmistakable. Besides, the words perish and destroy are used in speaking of the change the human body undergoes in death. Paul said, "though our outward man (the body) perish, yet the inward man (the soul) is renewed day by day." 2 Cor. 4: 16. The Saviour said, "Destroy this temple, (meaning the body), and in three days I will raise it up." John 2: 19. Paul's body perished, and that of the Saviour was destroyed; that is, they both passed through the experience of death. But who would affirm that the bodies of Paul and Christ were annihilated? If human bodies may perish or be destroyed without being annihilated, let us not be guilty of the folly of affirming that the soul that perishes or is destroyed is necessarily annihilated.

Look again at the passage, "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." When? At the judgment, or "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels." The destruction spoken of is the punishment; and if "everlasting destruction" is annihilation, then it is the end of the punishment, and the everlasting destruction of the disobedient is an everlasting deliverance from suffering or the possibility of suffering; and therefore, the passage should read, "Who shall be saved from punishment by everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." But they "shall be punished with everlasting destruction," and not saved from punishment is the declaration of the unerring Word.

I have written these articles in the interest of truth and humanity. I have done my utmost to show that the doctrine of the annihilation of the wicked is contrary to, and irreconcilable with, the soundest philosophy, the well-being of society, the general belief of mankind, and the plain teaching of the Holy Scriptures. May the humble effort redound to the glory of the Redeemer and the good of my fellow men.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Vengeance of the Priests of the Black Christ.

WHAT THEY WISH TO DO WITH THE PROTESTANTS AND LIBERALS.

During the civil war in this country, when the Liberal party was fighting effectually to break down the power of the priesthood, the following prayer was written by the priest, Dr. Felix Rosa Angel of this city, and called by him "The litany of the holy animals." He announces the object of it to be—to obtain from the saints, through the intervention to their pet animals, the utter extermination of the Liberals and Protestants, then fighting against Roman Catholicism as represented by the grasping priesthood, and gives notice that the Bishop of Morelia, D. Clemente Munguia, will grant to those who use this litany two hundred days of "indulgence" for each word it contains. This very remarkable "Litany" is as follows:

Horse of St. James—Trample upon them.
Lion of St. Mark—Tear them in pieces.
Eagle of St. John—Peck at them.
Turtledove of St. Nicholas—Coo at them.
Deer of S. Atenogenes—Tread on them.
Sweat of S. Mary Veneando—Bathe them.
Bull of S. Luke—Gore them.
Goat of S. Francis—Butt them.
Dog of S. Domingo—Bite them.
Devil of S. Michael—Scratch them.
Crow of S. Onofre—Pick out their eyes.
Pig of S. Anthony Abad—Root them up.
Fish of S. Raphael—Give them indigestion.
Mule of Bethlehem—Kick them.
Sheep of S. Luis Beltran—Bah at them.
Saw of S. Joseph—Flay them.
Chains of S. Peter Nolasco—Tie them.
Whale of Jonas—Swallow them.
Powerful S. Christopher—Crush them.
Back teeth of S. Polonia—Chew them.
Grill of S. Lorenzo—Roast them.
Lance of S. Longinus—Pierce them.
Sword of S. Catharine—Rip them up.
Ass of Balaam—Thou knowest what to do.
Rooster of S. Peter—Follow them.
Dragon of S. George—Kill them.
—Amen.

Does not the reader now believe that Mexico is an idolatrous nation, and without the gospel hopelessly lost? Will you not work, pray and give for Mexico? How many churches, woman's societies and associations will agree to support, each, a missionary?—W. D. Powell, Toluca, Mexico, Aug. 1, 1892.

Obstacles to Progress of Missions in Mexico.

The ignorance among educated people respecting religion is remarkable. Doctors, lawyers and professors are almost invariably utterly ignorant of the Bible, of the history of the church, and of comparative religion. There are no Roman Catholic Sunday-schools; preaching in the churches consists principally in tirades against Protestants and their books; the secular schools are strictly non-religious, and the parochial schools teach mostly bead counting, Mary worship and treason. Twin sister to ignorance is that fanaticism which Romanism always breeds, and which closes the eye and ear to reason and Christian testimony. This is the cob-web which the bloated, gaudy spider, Rome, has spun over heart and mind and temple doors, and which shuts out the light of truth. The people fear to listen to a sermon, to read a tract or a Bible. They are trained that thinking on religious subjects imperils the soul. The Chinese bind the feet; Romanism binds the soul, shackles the mind and manacles the will.

The almost universal viciousness sadly impedes the progress of the gospel. The more light one has on the subject, the darker it grows. The moral sense has been blunted till it scarcely pricks. While society in Mexico is not so corrupt as in some other Roman Catholic countries, her sixty-five percentage of illegitimacy suggests her condition. And this among the members of a church which some would have us consider "a branch of Christianity." The Aztec love of truthfulness and honesty has been lost. The doctrine of "probability," as taught by the moral theologians of Rome, and as practiced by their disciples, has well nigh destroyed the distinction between mine and thine. This distressing state of morality, or rather immorality, is largely due to the influence of the priesthood. Crimes which would shame a beast are common among these wretched profligates, who, to every Roman Catholic, are "Christ's on earth." They have trained the people of Mexico, as those of Europe, to believe that a different code of morality governs priest and people. The life of the average priest may not be even hinted at in such a tract as this, and yet the Mexican priesthood is accounted the most faithful and orthodox in the church. They are the Pope's crown jewels. Such object-lessons explain the well nigh universal corruption prevailing in society, business and political circles.—Hugh P. McCormick.

Nothing can be substituted for the Royal Baking Powder and give as good results.

No other leavening agent will make such light, sweet, delicious, wholesome food.

If some grocers urge another baking powder upon you, it is because of the greater profit upon it. This of itself is evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

To insure the finest cake, the most wholesome food, be sure that no substitute for Royal Baking Powder is accepted by you.

Announcement

TO THE PEOPLE
TO THE CAROLINAS AND
BY THE SOUTHEAST

The Charlotte Observer makes an announcement of more than ordinary interest. By special arrangement with the publishers of that greatest of all reference libraries, The Encyclopædia Britannica, ninth (latest) edition, we are enabled for a short time to place this King of Books within easy reach of every reader. This edition is bound in

28 Royal Octavo Volumes

And is the only complete and unabridged edition of this great work in existence revised to date. That some sort of an Encyclopædia is a necessity, all must acknowledge. That the great BRITANNICA is the very best Encyclopædia, none will deny. Only its great cost—$125 for the Scribner Edition, $200 for the Edinburgh Edition—has prevented its purchase heretofore. At these prices none but the rich could afford to own it. We offer for a limited time to the readers of THE OBSERVER an edition superior even to the costly Edinburgh Edition at the unheard of introductory rate of

TEN CENTS A DAY

For this small outlay you can secure these 28 Royal octave volumes, complete and unabridged, revised to date. The Britannica itself needs no endorsement. For 119 years it has stood the crowning work of our English language, the noblest work in all literature, the one only adequate representative of the advanced thought and scholarship of the world. It is the only Encyclopædia in which each principal subject is treated by an acknowledged authority upon that subject. No other Encyclopædia has given Ten Thousand Dollars for a single article, nor Six Hundred Dollars a page for written matter. The fact that

Was expended in its preparation, requiring the labor of 4,000 of the world's greatest scholars, tells the story of its exalted superiority. Over 600 American authors were employed on American subjects and American institutions.

The Edition We Offer

To our readers comprises many features worthy of special mention.

1. A thorough equipment of new maps up to date, costing $30,000 to produce.

2. The American Copyright Articles, re-written to date by eminent American writers. In other respects this Edition is word for word, line for line, page for page, identical with the expensive Edinburgh Edition, costing $8.00 per volume.

3. But the crowning feature of this Edition is its American Additions and Revisions, prepared under the supervision of that widely known Encyclopædic Editor, W. H. DEPUY, D.D., LL. D., assisted by a corps of trained writers, thoroughly revising the entire work to date.

Not only are all Scientific and Historical Subjects brought absolutely up to date, but a vast fund of new information is added, relating to the material, social, industrial and educational progress of the world, together with many thousand New Biographies not in the original Edition nor in any other Encyclopædia.

For a Short Time

This elegant Reference Library will be offered to subscribers of THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER at remarkably low introductory prices, and on terms so easy as to seem almost ludicrous.

There are four styles of binding, and all styles have double-hinged, flexible backs, sewed precisely like an Oxford Teacher's Bible, so that they are durable and convenient. It is an actual fact that this book is more strongly bound than the Edition which is sold for $8.00 per volume.

Upon application we will send you descriptive and prices of the various styles, and you may select any style of binding you choose and have the privilege of paying for it at the rate of 10 cents a day, half the set being delivered to you at once; or, we will deliver the entire set of all volumes on payment of $5.00 per month. All charges paid by us to any railroad station in the United States.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its meaning. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

PRICES: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 60c.

General Assembly.

JANUARY 21.

SENATE.—Snipes, Hertford, introduces bill to provide for study of music in the public schools; McCaskey, Martin, for a reformatory for young criminals; Herbert, Clay, for retrenchment in expenditures of the various departments of our State; Stephens, Caswell, to require goods made by convicts to be labeled; Fortune, Cleveland, to amend insurance laws.

The following bills passed their third reading: To levy a special tax to build a jail in Haywood county; to amend charter of Winston; to amend stock laws of Madison, Jackson, Swain and Graham counties. The rest of the session was occupied in the discussion of a bill to make six per cent. the legal rate of interest. There was considerble difference of opinion, but most of the Senators favor the bill. It is feared that money-lenders will evade any law of this kind that may be made.

HOUSE.—Bills to protect holders of life and fire insurance policies, and to provide for uniform taxation, were favorably reported by committees.

Payne presented a petition from citizens of Robeson for a new county; Sutton, Guilford, bill to make sheriffs and other county officers ineligible for more than two successive terms. Smith, Caswell, to appropriate $152,000 extra for public schools. Lyon, Granville, to amend constitution to forbid free passes. Linney, Alexander, to enforce equal and just payment of the debts of insolvents. A resolution requesting the Judiciary Committee to frame a bill increasing the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, passed.

JANUARY 22.

SENATE.—Westmoreland, Davidson, to let the public printing to the lowest bidder. Hamrick, Cleveland, to exempt from taxation for five years cotton and iron mills and factories that may be built in the State by outside capital. Dula, McDowell, to reduce salaries of State officers. The President announced the ratification of the bill to annul the public printing act. Amendment to withdraw pensions from soldiers' widows who marry again, passed third reading. Resolution to inquire into expenditures of the Department of Agriculture, the Penitentiary, the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, etc., etc., passed third reading. Resolution to appoint joint committee from the two branches to draft bills for county government, passed third reading.

The Senate then proceeded to the election of United States Senators. Mr. Marion Butler was nominated to succeed Mr. Ransom; Mr. Thos. W. Mason was also nominated. Vote: Butler 44, Mason 4. Mr. Lee S Overman was nominated to fill out term of the Senator Vance; Mr. Jeter C. Pritchard was also nominated. Vote: Overman 4, Pritchard 44.

HOUSE.—Turner, Mitchell, to aid public schools by public assessments. Flack, Rutherford, to abolish county boards of education. Lusk, Buncombe, to change tax on charters of corporations from $50 to $25; with an amendment exempting educational, charitable and religious corporations, the bill passed. Bill fixing the fees of solicitors as receivers of the estates of infants, passed third reading.

Election of United States Senators: For the short term, Pritchard 72, Overman 41; full term, Butler 73, Mason 41. State Treasurer Worth took the affirmation of office.

JANUARY 23.

HOUSE.—French, New Hanover, introduced bill to appropriate $20,000 to Atlanta Exposition. Ewart, Henderson, to reduce compensation of clerks and doorkeepers of the Legislature. Lineback, Forsyth, for the support and maintenance of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. D. H. Abbott was declared to be the duly elected member from Pamlico, after prolonged discussion.

SENATE.—White, Alexander, introduced a bill to protect the people against fraudulent coal or other illuminating oil. Cook, Warren, to prevent prize fighting. Bill to repeal merchants' purchase tax was laid on the table. On motion of Cook, the Senate hall was offered to a woman-suffragist named Blake, from the North, to speak at an early day. The bill to make the 30th of May, Federal soldiers' day, a legal holiday, passed third reading. Bill making it lawful to catch terrapins at any time of the year passed third reading. Six per cent. interest bill passed third reading, only Abell and Sigmon voting in the negative.

JANUARY 24.

SENATE.—Sundry bills of local character were introduced. Hoover introduced a bill to prevent any but chartered insurance companies from doing business in the State. Fortune introduced a bill providing that any county desiring to improve its public roads may vote a tax levy for the purpose, and that any county raising such a fund shall be entitled to the services of twenty five convicts from the Penitentiary. Hamrick introduced a resolution asking information of the Treasurer of the State University.

HOUSE.—Abbott, Pamlico, a bill to encourage the study of civil government in common schools. The rest of the session was occupied with a violent discussion of the contested election case of Crews against Lyon of Granville. Crews, who is a negro, won.

JANUARY 25.

SEATE.—Carver, Cumberland, introduced a bill to regulate working hours in mills and factories. A bill to require railways to pay ten dollars for each day they delay shipments, passed second reading. Most of the session was devoted to a vain discussion of a bill to inquire into the Pattie D. B. Arrington allegations. The bill to amend the constitution so as to forbid the operations of trusts was laid on the table.

HOUSE.—McLean introduced bill to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors (Mississippi law). Rules to meet at 10 a. m. and adjourn at 2 p. m., and to forbid smoking in Hall, adopted There was a lengthy discussion of a rule limiting speeches of certain character. Several new rules were adopted.

JANUARY 26.

SENATE.—Grant, Wayne, offered the memorial of the committee of the Baptist State Convention concerning State-aid to higher education. It is printed in another column. Hoover, a bill to admit the Farmers' Alliance to the same privileges in the matter of insurance, as other benevolent organizations. Grant, to require examinations of all public school teachers; and to cut the appropriation to the State University down to $15.000 the coming year, to $10 000 next year, and to make appropriations for only two years. Moody, Haywood, to prohibit the employment of boys under fourteen and girls under twelve years of age, in factories and, making nine hours a day's work. Bill providing for vocal music in public schools was laid on the table (where it ought to remain) The session was consumed with a happily fruitless discussion of a motion to have women on school committees. It was put on the table (where it ought to and likely will remain.)

HOUSE.—Lusk offered memorial of the committee of the Baptist State Convention. Ray introduced a bill to provide for just distribution of school-fund according to population. Bill to incorporate Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association, so that each county may have a branch of this Association, referred. Bill to appropriate $3,343 to the N. C. Asylum for the Insane, for especial purposes, passed third reading. Bill in favor of electing United States Senators by the people, tabled. A question of personal privilege that amounted to nothing occupied the remainder of the session.

Literary.

Daisy. By Marshall Saunders. Author of "Beautiful Joe." 16mo, 57 pp. Price, 75 cents. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

This is a very sweet little story and one that will be read by the older folks as well as the children. Daisy is thoroughly original, and in herself, no less than in her romantic attachment to the young man Robertson, cannot fail to attract.

The Royal Road; or, Taking God at His Word. By Marian Harland. 12mo. Cloth. Ornamented. $1.50.

"The Royal Road" may be considered as a companion to "Stepping Heavenward" in singleness of purpose and in directness of treatment. It assumes throughout and proves from Scripture and experience that there is but one royal road to happiness, and that is to take God simply at his word in living by the day, and trusting him entirely for the days to come. According to the author, the repeated injunctions to cast all of earthly care upon him who careth for his creatures with wise and sleepless love, means everything or nothing. Following this motif, she has written what can hardly be called a novel, but is a tale of every day and real life, full of incident throughout. In dealing with people in various ranks of society, she shows the workings of this cardinal principle of practical religion in joy and in sorrow, in distress of mind, body, and estate, and proves it to be the philosopher's stone that solves the great mystery of human existence, the one rule without an exception. She holds that the very simplicity of the formula to "take no anxious thought for the morrow," but to do what the hand finds to do, to day, as if the daily task were all of living, has misled many as to its efficacy. The book commends to every Christian a trial of what may be called a safe recipe for peace of mind and active usefulness for the good of mankind and glory of God. Anson D. F. Randolph & Co., 185 Fifth Avenue, New York, Publishers. Sold by booksellers, or sent by mail by the publishers, prepaid.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.
JUSTICE'S CHAMBERS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 5, 1894.

Dear Sir:—Ever since I began to use the Electropoise in our family, I have taken frequent occasion to speak to my friends of its wonderful curative powers. We have both the pocket and the wall Electropoise and we would not part with them under any circumstances.

I have found that no medicine or drug will as quickly give relief as the Electropoise, and particularly is this true with a cough, or in case of sleeplessness. The application of the instrument almost instantly stops the cough, and thereafter produces sleep.

Ordinarily, I decline to give public testimonials, for I very much dislike notoriety in any form; but I take pleasure in recommending the Electropoise, because of the wonderful relief it has accomplished in our family. Yours truly,

MRS. HOWELL E. JACKSON.

For information, write to Jno. W. Graham, Agent, Atlanta, Ga.

In the Legislature.

It is gratifying to note the number of counties asking for provisions for good public roads. The movement for better roads deserves all encouragement.

The public printing question has not been determined. It is hoped that it will be let out directly to proprietors of printing houses.

A number of churches and school houses have asked that the sale of liquors be prevented in their vicinity. Their petitions ought to be granted. We hope to see the time when there will be so many churches and schools in the State that no room will be left for saloons.

A. Golden, Druggist, Birmingham, Ala., writes: "Please publish some of the testimonials I have sent you for Japanese Pile Cure." Sold by Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C.

It is computed that the death rate of the world is sixty seven a minute, and the birth rate seventy a minute, and this seemingly light percentage of gain is sufficient to give a net increase of population each year of almost 1,200,000 souls.

No one in ordinary health need become bald or gray, if he will follow sensible treatment. We advise cleanliness of the scalp and the use of Hall's Hair Renewer.

DIED.

BUNCH—Died at her home in Chowan county, Sister Mollie Bunch, wife of J. R. Bunch. She was a consistent church member, devoted wife and mother. She leaves a father, husband and son to mourn their loss. The burial service was conducted by the writer at the old burying ground.

G. W. WHITE.

CLAYTON—Died at her home in Cabarrus county, N. C., on Dec. 21st, 1894, Mrs. Sarah A. Clayton, at the age of thirty-five years. She was a member of the Baptist church. She leaves a husband and several children to mourn their loss. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

J. O. ALDERMAN.

BARRETT—Alexander Franklin Barrett died at his home in Concord, N. C., on Saturday, Dec. 29th, 1894, at the age of eighteen. His mother and an only sister are left to mourn their loss. But God can more than fill the place made vacant. May he comfort and bless these two sorrowing sisters.

J. O. ALDERMAN.

FEREBEE—Died Nov. 2d, 1894, Mrs. Lina L. Ferebee, beloved wife of Benson Ferebee. She was a member of Sawyer's Creek church, Camden county. She leaves a husband, two children, mother, sister and brothers to whom we would say the separation will be short if you only take her Saviour to be your Saviour.

A FRIEND.

IVEY—Died Nov. 10th, 1894, Sister Ivey, aged seventy years. She was a faithful servant of Christ, and has gone to her reward. May her death be a blessing to Woodville church, of which she was a consistent member. May the children who are now in middle life be led by mother's God.

PASTOR.

ZIMMERMAN—On Sunday, Jan. 6th, 1895, little Pearl Zimmerman, after an illness of only a few hours, passed to her "true home" at the age of five years. Pearl was a bright, interesting child and being an only child was the special delight of her house. She often wanted to go to Sunday-school. Her father and mother look for a time when they shall see her again.

J. O. ALDERMAN.

Concord, N. C.

BARKLEY—Died January 8th, 1895, near Rocky Mount, N. C., Mrs. J. G. Barkley, in her eighty-second year. She had been a Christian and a member of the Baptist church for more than seventy years. She was the mother of eight children, six boys and two girls. Three of her boys and husband survive her. She died as she had lived, a devoted Christian. May the Lord bless the loved ones she left behind.

BYRD—At the residence of her husband, Sister Lucy F. Byrd died, July 30th, 1894, aged about twenty-six years. For fifteen years she was a useful member of Summerfield Baptist church. She leaves a husband and three little children to mourn her departure. Her Christian life was exemplary. Enclement weather prevented services at burial. Funeral service was conducted afterward by the pastor.

E. P. ELLINGTON.

COPPLE—Sister Frankey Copple, wife of Deacon Henry Copple, was called away from this life Nov. 26th, 1894. She was more than seventy-two years old, and for the greater part of her life was a consistent member of Liberty Baptist church, Davidson county.

Her aged husband and ten children, with many relatives, await the time when they shall greet her in "the land of the blest."

"Farewell, friends! yet not farewell,
Where I am ye, too, shall dwell.
I am gone before your face,
A moment's time, a little space;
When ye come where I have stepped
Ye will wonder why ye wept;
Ye will know, by wise love taught,
That here is all and there is naught."

J. R. M.

TAYLOR—Rev. J. H. Taylor died at his home in Polk county, N. C., Thursday morning, January 3d, 1895. He was sixty-four years old, and had been preaching forty years. He leaves a wife and ten children and a host of friends to mourn his loss; but they mourn not because his spirit has gone to God who gave it, but because his body is in the grave. It would be cruel to weep for a soul in glory. Yes, our Bro. Taylor has gone, and left an awful chasm behind him. A widow is bereft of a tender and kind husband, children of an affectionate and loving father, neighbors of a constant friend and pleasant companion, two Baptist churches of their pastor. May the Lord bind up their broken hearts and heal all their wounds.

J. C. SORRELS.

Tributes of Respect.

Bethesda Baptist church, Raleigh Association, in memory of Bro. M. C. Smith, who died at his residence near Clayton, N. C., on the 17th day of November, 1894, in the forty second year of his age, submits the following:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the All-wise Ruler of the Universe to take from his earthly career our much beloved brother; and as he was a member of our church from the time he was baptized (which was in his early life) up to his death, having been reared in this community; and as he was deacon of his mother church for many years, and also superintendent of our Sunday-school; therefore, be it

Resolved 1. That it is with much sorrow that we have to take our leave of him; and yet we are profoundly grateful that his faith was strong in life, failing not in death.

2. That we will ever remember with grattude his zeal as a Christian, and his great usefulness, especially as a deacon or leader in the church of the Son of God, believing also that he has gone to that rest which remaineth for the righteous.

3. That it be our purpose ever in the future to follow his example as he followed Christ.

4. That we tender to his beloved family our heartfelt sympathy in this their great bereavement.

5. That these resolutions be recorded on the church book, a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Smithfield Herald with request for publication and a copy to the bereaved family.

J. H. EASOM,
W. H. LANCASTER,
C. L. BARNES,
Committee.

WHEREAS, God in his inscrutable wisdom has seen fit to take unto himself our beloved brother, N. E. Cannady, who was our oldest member, and one of the constitutors of Brassfields church, having been a member for sixty-two years; therefore

Resolved, That in his death Brassfields church has lost one of its most faithful and efficient members, the one who throughout all its previous history has been a pillar of support to this church by his counsels, his labors, his means and his prayers.

Resolved further, That we bow humbly to this dispensation of our Heavenly Father, feeling assured that while we have lost so much, our brother is now realizing the fruition of that eternal life begun upon earth.

Resolved further, That our sincere sympathies are extended to his bereaved family; that a copy of these resolutions be delivered to them, a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication, and the same be placed upon our record book.

COMMITTEE FOR THE CHURCH.

Wilton, Nov. 17, 1894.

At our last meeting at Maple Spring, the following resolutions were presented and adopted:

Resolved 1. Whereas, it has pleased the All-wise Disposer of Events to remove from our midst our dear brother, Wm. H. Harper, who was born in Chatham county in 1812. He was married three times, and was the father of sixteen children. He first united with the Fall Creek church, and soon after entered the ministry. He was a delight in the Convention. When the split took place in 1858, he moved to Randolph county, and united with the Mount Tabor church. He remained there until about a year ago when he joined the Missionary Baptist church at Maple Spring, and where he remained until his death, Nov. 15, 1894.

His remains were deposited in the graveyard at Maple Spring. He leaves a wife and eigh tchildren, two brothers and two sisters, with many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1863, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarrun, Bastrop, Tex.

Praise and Adore Him.

Ps. 103; 20: Rev. 5: 12, 13.

Praise and adore him, ye angels of light,
Praise him with jubilant song;
Blessing and honor and glory and might
Unto the Saviour belong
Sing the glad chorus again and again;
Sing till all heaven resounds with the strain,
Sing till the glad earth sends back the refrain,
Peace, and good will among men.

Prostrate before him in reverence fall;
Cast your bright crowns at his feet,
Sorrow and pain hath he suffered for all—
Now is his triumph complete
Lo! with the Father exalted on high,
Ever to reign in the Kingdom of Love,
Lifted forever all sorrow above,
Never again shall he die.

Blessing and honor and glory and might,
Be unto him on his throne;
Angels shall praise him by day and by night,
Satan his power shall own.
Praise him, ye messengers doing his will,
Till your glad song in the hearts of men,
Echoing sweetly again and again.
Biddeth sin's discord be still.

Growing Disposition of Americans to Live on the Government.

"The horseleech hath two daughters crying, Give, give." Americans appear to grow more disposed to illustrate the proverb by living on the government. Of course the whole theory of rotation in appointive and non political offices is that the party in power has a right to pay for the private services of its followers out of the public treasury. A recent Governor of the State of New York put this practice in its baldest form when he approved a corrupt public contract so as to pay off his election expenses. The ordinary state of mind as to pensions is similarly low. A few months ago a distinguished soldier, diplomat, and statesman, defended the action of a man who was drawing a pension for total disability while an active member of the United States Senate. "The law," said he, "makes no distinction; it does not recognize the possibility of mental labor by a man physically disabled." "But," it was objected, "might not the Senator look at the matter simply as an honest man?" "You might as well say that I have no right to the pension that I draw," replied the General. The discussion ceased at that point; but the wonder remained that men of wealth and station and public spirit should take, and encourage others to take, payment for their own gallantry. There is no effective public sentiment even against notorious pension frauds. In what community would a person be esteemed who gave information against a widow who had married again and still drew her pension? Yet any of us would notify the police if he saw the same woman stealing ribbon at a counter.—Professor Albert Bushnell Hart, in the January Forum.

Conan Doyle's Opinion of Novels in General and American Novelists.

From a real conversation between Conan Doyle and Robert Barr, in McClure's Magazine for November.

Barr. Don't you read American fiction?

Doyle. Not as much as I should wish, but what I have read has, I hope been fairly representative. I know Cable's work and Eugene Field's and Hamlin Garland's and Edgar Fawcett's and Richard Harding Davis's. I think Harold Frederic's "In the Valley" is one of the best of recent historical romances. The danger for American fiction is, I think, that it should run in many brooks instead of one broad stream. There is a tendency to over accentuate local peculiarities; differences, after all, are very superficial things, and good old human nature is always there under a coat of varnish. When one hears of a literature of the West or of the South, it sounds aggressively sectional.

Barr. Sectional? If it comes to that, who could be more sectional than Hardy or Barrie—the one giving us the literature of a county and the other of a village. You know that a person in a neighboring village said of Barrie that he was "no see bad fur a Kerrimuir man." When you speak of a section in America, you must not forget it may be a bit of land as big as France.

Doyle. Barrie and Hardy have gained success by showing how the Scotch or Wessex peasant shares our common human nature, not by accentuating the points in which they differ from us.

Barr. Well, I think Howells is demolished. What do you think of him and of James?

Doyle. James, I think, has had a great and permanent influence upon fiction. His beautiful clear-cut style and his artistic restraint must affect every one who reads him. I'm sure his "Portrait of a Lady" was an education to me, though one has not always the wit to profit by one's education.

Barr. Yes; James is a writer of whom you English people ought to be proud. I wish we had an American like him. Still, thank goodness, we have our William Dean Howells. I love Howells so much that I feel sure you must have something to say against him; what is it?

Doyle. I admire his honest, earnest work, but I do not admire his attitude towards all writers and critics who happen to differ from his school. One can like Valdes and Bourget and Miss Austen without throwing stones at Scott and Thackeray and Dickens. There is plenty of room for all.

Barr. But there is the question of art.

Doyle. We talk so much about art that we tend to forget what this art was ever invented for. It was to amuse mankind—to help the sick and the dull and the weary. If Scott and Dickens have done this for millions, they have done well by their art.

Barr. You don't think, then, that the object of all fiction is to draw life as it is?

Doyle. Where would Gulliver and Don Quixote and Dante and Goethe be if that were so? No; the object of fiction is to interest, and the best fiction is that which interests most. If you can interest by drawing life as it is, by all means do so. But there is no reason why you should object to your neighbor using other means.

Barr. You do not approve of the theological novel then?

Doyle. Oh yes, I do, if it is made interesting. I think the age of fiction is coming—the age when religious and social and political changes will all be affected by means of the novelists. Look, within recent years, how much has been done by such books as "Looking Backward" or "Robert Elsmere." Everybody is educated now, but comparatively few are very educated. To get an idea to penetrate to the masses of the people, you must put fiction round it, like sugar round a pill. No statesman and no ecclesiastic will have the influence on public opinion which the novelist of the future will have. If he has strong convictions he will have wonderful facilities for impressing them on others. Still his first business will always be to interest. If he can't get his sugar right, people will refuse his pill.

Dairying in North Carolina.

Georgians are going into the butter and cheese business on an increased scale. It is wise and important. The dairies are a great source of comfort and wealth. North Carolina should wake up here. Not half is done that could easily be done in this most necessary and remunerative industry. In Putnam county Ga., a big business in dairying is done, and hundreds of the farmers ship lots of the "gilt edged," and are far more prosperous than when they stuck to cotton. The Atlanta Constitution says:

"A successful dairy means a good deal more than simply the process of churning butter. It means better cows, more fertile fields, and better stock of all descriptions. Around the dairymen business in Putnam have grown other successful branches of farming, such as the raising of fine cows and horses and the continuous improving of lands devoted to Bermuda grass. What Putnam has done and is doing can be done in every county in Georgia. A few years ago Jersey cattle were held at a fancy price, but now $50 will buy a Jersey bull of the best."

Other counties are also prospering. Cheese factories are to be started. North Carolina is a fine grazing State. Half the counties, we suppose, offer superior advantages for dairymen on a large scale. There is always a demand for pure, sweet butter and for fresh cheese. Let North Carolina make its own cheese. We would like to know the pounds of cheese brought from the North every year and sold in North Carolina. It would aggregate hundreds of thousands of pounds. Shall our people be forever dependent in this as in so many other things? Utilize your resources.—Wilmington Messenger.

If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer Thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true,
With the work I fain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the thing I meant;
Let me find in Thy employ
Peace that dearer is than joy;
Out of self to love be led,
And to heaven acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my nature's habitude.

—Whittier.

Stonewall Jackson was not a man to speak ill of another; but the Southern Bivouac publishes the following tart exception to this rule: At a council of generals early in the war, one of them remarked that Major —— was wounded, and would be unable to perform a certain duty for which he had been suggested. "Wounded!" said Jackson. "If that is really so, I think it must have been by an accidental discharge of his duty!"

Kindness is the golden chain by which society is bound together.—Goethe.

A LOAD of misery is taken from women, by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Weaknesses that distress your womanhood can be relieved and cured by it, safely and certainly. It has done this for thousands of suffering women—and the makers are willing to guarantee, if it doesn't benefit or cure you, they'll return the money.

Bearing-down pains, internal inflammation and ulceration, organic displacements, weak back, and all kindred ailments are cured by the "Favorite Prescription."

Nye, Putnam Co., W. Va.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—Mine is a case of eleven years' standing, which baffled the skill of the best medical aid procurable. I obtained no good effect, until I began the use of the "Favorite Prescription," which lifted the burden which was making my life.

My gratitude I owe to the "Prescription." I hope that all suffering humanity (as in my case) may profit by the result of my experience.

WE HAVE to confess that we regard with suspicion the announcement that an effort will be made in April to bring the Cigarette Trust under the law; and no one who knows our standpoint will deny that our grounds are reasonable.

Public sentiment, without which laws are vain, but which has not infrequently failed to enforce laws made in deference to it, is overwhelmingly against Trusts. Moreover, there is a National law designed to rid the country of trusts. But trusts are multiplying and flourishing. The State of North Carolina has a law against trusts, has had it two years; but the cigarette trust, the plaid trust and others are, without apology or concealment, largely operating in North Carolina. Both law and public sentiment in the United States and in North Carolina have thus far been impotent in regard of trusts; and both have had a fair chance,—at least, as fair as can be had under the present administration of affairs.

When the RECORDER set out last fall to bring the trusts and the law together, it was met in about three weeks with statements from those in authority that the present law is defective—"cannot reach them with it," some said. Another stated that he had no authority to act, and another that a previous effort before the grand jury had failed. This, coming from such sources, is enough to make us distrust the North Carolina law.

But District Attorney Glenn is a Federal officer, has the approval of Attorney General Olney in this effort, and is going to make his suit in a Federal Court and base it on the laws of the Nation. That sounds substantial, but stop! Did not the sugar trust compel the Congress of the United States to yield to its greed? What will it care for a court? Will an Attorney General who has frequently been counsel for trusts strike them a blow down here in North Carolina, after letting slip several good opportunities in other States? We cannot pass judgment now; but it is only right that we state why we are suspicious.

Let the General Assembly not be turned from its pledge by any possibly false hope—a spring time will o'-the-wisp. It CAN make a law that will root up trusts, and its plain duty is to make one. We cannot foretell the outcome of the April suit, but we know that now is the time to provide against an unfavorable issue.

There are people who hold that trusts are advantageous to a State. As a rule, they either own stock or are otherwise paid for their opinions. The reader has heard time and again how the Oil Trust reduced the price of oil, and how the wealth of its stockholders increases the endowment of educational institutions. These are facts, but they do not prove anything for trusts in general, and, indeed, not too much for the Standard Oil Trust. All other trusts that we have ever heard of increase prices; and while it is creditable to the Standard Oil Trust that prices have been decreased, we need not, for that reason, overlook the unmerciful way it ground the life out of competition whenever it could, nor how it whined where it could not oppress. It killed when it could; when it could not, it bought out its rival. Nor should we be unmindful that it makes enormous profits as it is, having made one man the wealthiest in the world in a few years.

Probably it would injure a city or two, if the cigarette trust were driven from the State; probably it would give a back-set to manufacturing, if the plaid trust had to move beyond our border. General interests are paramount to local advantages or disadvantages. Moreover, we are of the opinion that the capital of the trusts will not leave the State; for it is too evident that it will be kept migrating from State to State by laws similar to ours, if it should begin such a policy. On the other hand, it will be easy for it to hold its way here in North Carolina honestly, within conscience and the laws of the State.

Whether or not, however, our State will do well by herself to make and enforce a law that will rid her of the last vestige of trusts, monopolies and combines. If she shows that her laws cannot be transgressed without punishment, her example to the country at large and her own children will compensate her for any other consequences of such a course.

EVERY issue of $50,000,000 in bonds for the purpose of replenishing the gold reserve, is the means of absorbing $50,000,000 from our currency. Gold is paid by American bankers for the bonds; before it has been in the Treasury five days, the English bankers require payment in gold for merchandise or dividends on stocks or for greenbacks. The bonds are put away in vaults, neither merchandise nor stocks are currency, and the greenbacks are cancelled as soon as they have been redeemed: thus the currency is being contracted in a time when the greatest need is expansion.

We are reluctant to believe the talk about conspiracies, European influence, bribery of our officials, etc., etc. We are not yet prepared to substantiate any of the hundreds of charges of corruption that one can hear wherever he goes. But we are apprehensive.

We have seen $100,000,000 in gold collected by bonds from American citizens and shipped to Europe, diminishing the circulating medium of the United States by that amount; we are face to face with the probability of another and a larger issue, which will have precisely the same effect as former issues. Those who authorize these issues, claim that the gold reserve must be maintained. Their chief reason is that it has been maintained heretofore. They know as well as we that issuing bonds, not only does not help maintain the reserve, but—and this is reason for grave apprehension—causes American gold to be placed where it can be gotten on demand by English bankers.

We have no financial measure to propose. We are of the opinion that free coinage of silver and gold at a ratio of sixteen to one is the first need of our country; we also believe that our banking system needs thorough revision. And further, we believe the financial salvation of this country depends upon the making of our laws of all kinds without regard to England or any country except the United States. It is false doctrine that English distrust can affect our welfare; it is ridiculous to profess to think that our currency must be approved by England before we may use it.

LEGISLATURES can make holidays legal, but there never has been a body of men which could make a legal holiday, although Legislatures frequently attempt to make them. It is one thing to say that it shall be lawful for the public offices and the banks to close on a certain day, but it is quite another to make the day a genuine holiday. For instance, all of us will keep at work the 22d of February, although flags will float above the public buildings, and the government and bank clerks will have a day off; but no business man in town nor farmer in the country will stop long enough to think about it, and if he does not get a daily paper, he will not know that Washington's anniversary has slipped by until the weekly comes. The anniversary of General Lee's birth occurred the other day, and although it has not been a holiday but two years no one in North Carolina, so far as we know, observed it. Some think that this was unpatriotic and ungrateful. It was neither. If we gave a day to the memory of every man we love, the year would be a round of holidays.

The Legislature may make a hundred or more holidays legal, if it likes to affect to honor men or events in this manner. It will have no more serious effect than letting off government and bank clerks for one day with the prospect of having to do two days' work the day after. It is slightly inconvenient; but we can stand stand that.

We cannot let pass the opportunity of saying that the effort to make the 30th of May, Federal Soldiers' Day at the North, a legal holiday in North Carolina, is farcical beyond expression. It is hard enough to get together a handful of patriots to observe May 10th, Confederate Soldiers' Day, May 20th, Mecklenburg Declaration Day, or July 4th, National Independence Day. The millenium will surely have come when North Carolinians swell with that broad sense of oblivious patriotism which will prompt them to turn from their daily paths to keep the 30th of May. But if the employees of the State and the bankers need the 30th of May to pursue their own inclinations, and will catch up with their work the 31st, we think the Federal Soldiers might have whatever else there be in voting the day a legal holiday.

Books.

BY HIGHT C. MOORE.

God be thanked for books!—W. E Channing.

For the book is in my heart,
Lives in me, moves in me, dreams in me;
My daily bread tastes of it
—Elizabeth Barrett Browning

Libraries are the wardrobes of literature.
—James Dyer.

The true university of these days is a collection of books.—Thomas Carlyle.

What is a book? It is a storehouse of power. It is a steam chest filled with energy from some glowing intellectual furnace; and only the lever of reading must be turned in order that its caged forces may leap forth into generous activity. It is a cannon, booming through the world to defend or destroy. It is a Niagara, sometimes with its rainbows, sometimes with its ruin. It is a phonograph, pouring into our minds the thoughts and feelings of other times and places. It is an angel, either of light to bear us upward and onward, or of darkness to drag us down.

The influence of books, good or bad, is beyond calculation The turning point in the history of many great men can be directly traced to the subtile forces lying mutely on the printed page. Dr. Watt's hymn-book for children gave Rowland Hill his first religious impressions and led Scott, the commentator, to abandon an evil course and enter a new and useful life. The "Voyages of Captain Cook" inspired William Carey to undertake his labors as a missionary. Carey's letters, in turn, first presented to Henry Martyn the claims of India. Buchanan's "Star in the East" sent Adoniram Judson to Burmah. David Livingstone said that the reading of Dick's "Philosophy of a Future State" caused him to devote himself to the missionary cause. Loyola, wounded at Pamfeluna, read the "Lives of the Saints," and determined thenceforth to found a religious order. The entire life of Benjamin Franklin, by his own confession, was moulded by a reading of Cotton Mather's essay on "Doing Good."

Books have not only given the youth a life-time impetus, but they have also been the incessant and invariable companions of all towering intellects. Erasmus contended that books were the necessaries of life and clothes were the luxuries. Cicero was willing to part with all his possessions if only he might live and die among his books. Southey sat stroking and kissing his books when he could no longer open or read them. Liebnitz died with a book in his hand. Petrarch would not forsake his library in his last hours. "My poor book" were the last words of Buckle, and they "tell a passion that forgot death."

The value of a select library cannot be overestimated. It is an unbounded inspiration to the studious and appreciative owner. On its shelves are to be found the bowing sheaves gathered from the choicest fields of literature. If books, according to Dryden, are "spectacles to read nature," then here is an observatory from which we may behold the undetected beauties of the world around. It is a mental gymnasium in which the mind is polished and strengthened. Inheriting the true wealth of the past and containing the best treasuries of the present, books are of more value than the riches of the millionaire. On their wings we soar at will; wafted by their breezes, we reach desired havens; and controlled by their ideas we rush on to our destiny.

Beyond their intrinsic value in the rigid culture of the mind, books afford the most elevating and the most agreeable recreation. Baxter felt that "good books are a very great mercy to the world." If the mastery of them is like climbing a steep rugged mountain, it is comforting to find that they afford by the wayside cool arbors, sparkling fountains, and broadening views over the once-trodden valleys below. "A taste for books is the pleasure and glory of my life," wrote Gibbons; and these silent companions of his life gave him command of a renowned literary eminence to the end of time. Often when the mind is weary with its own thinking, a glance into some bright, clean page will crown the whole system with a happy restfulness, secured in no other way. And when the conversation around the social hearth grows dull, a fresh story or an elegant poem will shed new lustre into the circle and flood each heart with cheer. We heartily agree with William Hazlitt that "books are the first and last, the most homefelt, the most heart felt of all our enjoyments."

The valuable book which instructs and sympathizes and lives is not a mere composition of polished phrases, but, as Beecher says, "it must have thoughts and sentiments that touch the head and heart." Then it becomes a silent force growing in potency and influence. A good book is an occasion for sincere gratitude. Charles Lamb, owning his disposition "to say grace on other occasions besides dinner," very properly inquires why we may not thus express our appreciation of the literary repasts spread upon the shelves of the library. It was the opinion of John Milton that slaying a man was little worse than the murder of a good book. He considers that "many a man lives a burden to the earth; but a good book is the precious life blood of a master spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose, to a life beyond life."

Every young man should aspire to the ownership of a select library. The literary wealth of all the ages is now presented in better form and at lower prices than ever before. The most serious difficulty confronting the young book-buyer will be the making of the most suitable selection from the great mass before him. It is best to go slow and not make hurried or thoughtless purchases. If an eye is kept on the literary departments of standard magazines and newspapers, important and might be often obtained. Conversation and correspondence with some gentlemen of literary attainments would add to the list of desirable books for purchase. If funds are regularly laid aside for this purpose, it will not be so hard to carry out Channing's rule that "any luxury should be sacrificed" for good books. One should aim at the best editions of any work; poor typography and press work have often destroyed the vitality of an otherwise inspiring volume. Rarely is it wise to secure any other books than those which have been tested and proved true. The lines of Pope are generally quoted as the safest rule:

"Be not the first by whom the new is tried,
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

Joseph Cook describes a liberal education as a temple having fifteen apartments, as follows: "Mathematics, Logic, Rhetoric, Languages, Political Economy, History, Physics, Chemistry, Natural History, The Fine Arts, Music, Gymnastics, Metaphysics, Ethics, Christian Evidences. Each one is occupied by masters who are to be freely consulted by the earnest student.

The general reader will ordinarily classify his library in a slightly different way. With the minister more stress will be laid upon works of special homiletic value while the abstract treatises will occupy second place. Perhaps he could do little better than arrange his books in ten groups: Bible Helps, Theology, Philosophy, History, Biography and Travel, Fiction, Poetry, Science, Essays, Miscellanies. If the leading minds are amply represented in each of these departments, the mastery of their ideas will surely be followed by pre eminence in intelligence and usefulness.

When once a book is secured, its proper use is of prime importance. Bacon tells us that "some books are to be tasted, others swallowed, and some few to be digested." A fine discrimination is, therefore, necessary or one is likely to fall into Carlyle's class of 'flimsy, desultory readers who fly from book to book and get good of none." The mere habit of reading without reflection amounts to no good whatever. In fact, some undertake so much on the outset that they faint by the way; thus it is said that "Rollin and Gibbon have slain regiments of possible readers." Robert Hall regarded an erudite friend of his very clever, but said "he laid so many books upon his head that his brains could not move." It is far better to fully master a few worthy pages than hastily scan over numerous volumes.

To detect a meritorious volume and absorb the gist of it is then a very important problem. If one is ever to go through many books with profit, he must be systematic in his reading. Horace Mann used to say, "Resolve to edge in a little reading every day, if it is but a single sentence. If you gain fifteen minutes a day, it will make itself felt at the end of the year." A favorite department of literature should not be pursued to the neglect of others equally, if not more, important. Thus poetry should not be sacrificed for history, fiction for philosophy, science for miscellanies; but each branch given its due prominence in a well-rounded education. The marking of books in various ways, though sometimes condemned, has its manifest advantages. Indeqing some of the more prominent materials of a volume is a habit which aids the memory and renders the book of more value for reference. Where rigid study is required to master the great ideas of a worthy book, it should never be withheld, but lavished freely with an earnest longing after the truth. Says Elizabeth Barrett Browning:

"Mark, there. We get no good
By being ungenerous, even to a book,
And calculating profits.....so much help
By so much reading. It is rather when
We gloriously forget ourselves, and plunge
Soul forward, headlong, into a book's profound,
Impassioned for its beauty and salt of truth—
'Tis then we get the right good from a book."

This mental ownership of a select library affords a never-failing source of happiness and utility. A genial companionship arises with the princes of thought in every age. "Poets sing at our bidding their immortal songs. Historians repeat for us the deeds of other days. Philosophers dig deep for us about the roots of knowledge. Great students, with dreams on fire with God, offer us the result of their life-long studies. The men of science probe nature's very heart for secrets and lay their trophies at our feet." Thus seated in the midst of the world's literati and surrounded by the accumulated genius of the earth, we may gratefully become

"Heirs of all the ages, in the foremost files of time."

Home Missions.

Dear Recorder:—The financial condition of our Home Mission Board, as stated by Dr. Tichenor, ought to stir the hearts of God's people and cause them to come to its relief. It is evident that the brethren who compose the Board, and to whom we have committed its operations, are greatly perplexed. The debt already accumulated is a heavy burden, and their credit is almost exhausted. They have now 400 missionaries employed, looking to them for their support and the support of their families. If these missionaries do not receive their salaries, which, in most cases, if paid promptly, are scarcely sufficient for their support, they and their families must and will suffer. The Board has promised to support them, and they have gone to their fields relying upon this promise; so the Board is in this painful situation, these four hundred families are looking to them for support, while they are doing the Lord's work, and the Board has not the means or credit to pay their salaries and keep them from want. Our sympathy for the brethren, who are doing faithful and heroic service in so many destitute fields, and sympathy for the brethren of the Board, who feel so keenly their grave responsibility, should stimulate us all to do what we can to relieve the situation, and do it at once. But there is another and still stronger motive that ought to appeal to us: this Board is God's agency for carrying forward his work. Its mission is to save souls and build up Christ's kingdom in our own country. God has unmistakably accepted and acknowledged it to be his institution by the divine power he has exercised through it, and the great results he has enabled it to achieve. It belongs to God, and what we contribute to it is given to God, and what we withhold is withheld from him. When the honor and reputation of this organization is threatened, the sacred honor of God's name is involved. We should remember that it is God's Board that is in debt and is losing its credit. Nothing so alarmed and aroused the people of Israel as when the Ark was in danger. They would shed their blood to defend and protect it. Brethren, when the efficiency and honor of our Mission Board is endangered, we should feel a similar concern, and in our poverty we ought even by great sacrifice to come to its rescue. What a sad fact this is that stands out before the world! the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention now owes nearly $30,000, and has well nigh exhausted its credit. Will not such a fact increase the scepticism of the unbelieving world of to day, and and cause men to doubt God's existence, or his power, or his interest in the mission of the gospel? Can we wonder that men of the world should question as to whether Christianity has any vital influence and power over men if such a host of Christian people allow an organization to become thus bankrupt, which they claim belongs to God and is used by God.

I believe God has a purpose concerning this matter. I think he is now making a special call to his people. Money is very scarce, and most Christians must make real sacrifices if they give much to benevolent objects. The Home Mission Board is in greatest need, and I believe God is trying his people, to test how much they love him, and whether they are jealous of his honor and the honor and reputation of every thing in which he is involved. This I think is a true test, and when we see the condition of the Home Board, and the Foreign Board which is also in great need, we can know whether we truly love God's cause, and are sensitive to any reflection upon his honor, by the sacrifices we are willing to make in order to relieve the Boards and enable them to do their great work. I sometimes fear that one reason why God has sent national adversity upon us is the selfishness and illiberality of his people. In fact, I believe this and the prevailing wickedness of the people are the chief causes of our nation's present trial. In the great calls that come to sustain and enlarge all departments of God's cause, God is really giving us an opportunity to atone for our former selfishness, and if we do so, we may remove one cause of hard times, and bring back God's smiles upon us as individuals and as a nation. Mal. 3: 8–12.

I might urge as another motive for doing what we can to relieve the Home Board the importance and necessity of the work it is doing among the colored people and foreign population and native white people in destitute sections of our Southern States, but I have already written more than I intended. I do hope and pray that God may move us all to do what we can to relieve the Home Mission Board in this the most trying period of its existence. W. C. TRAIL.

Labor's millennium will know no saloon. This is a fact, however blind the so-called leaders of labor may now be to the withes which the liquor Delilah is binding on the sleeping Samson. Wake, Samson! and, in the name of free American workingmen, cast off the bonds! There will be little or no more advancement for labor while the drunken workingman continues to hold back his sober brother.—The Voice.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, who so finely exemplified the possibility of growing old gracefully and making the last earthly days the best days, said no brighter or truer thing than that a man had better be seventy years young than forty years old.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

BRO. MOORE'S paragraphs on books will repay perusal. As usual he displays searching knowledge of details and fine appreciation of his subject.——Bro. Tyree writes urgently and from the heart.——Bro. Sievers' letter on the Germans, and Dr. Tichenor's statement of the case of the Home Board generally, with Bro. Tyree's article, and the Woman's Missionary Department, make this in a degree a Home Mission issue. It is well. This Board is in great need, and it has not called on us especially heretofore. Let us see to it that it does not call in vain this time. The Foreign Mission Board is also in grievous need. We would to God that it might be raised up out of this debt, and we trust that it will be.——Bro. Stringfield represents the Female University as zealously and hopefully as ever. We are glad to note his good spirits.——Brethren Taylor and Blanchard are pulling together admirably, and between them Wake Forest is just beginning to realize how many and how loving its friends are.

REV. N. S. JONES' suggestions are worth serious reflection. An effort along the line of the work Bro. Jones proposes has been under the consideration of our State Board a good while, and last year some work of the kind was done.

There are so many needy places within the bounds of our Board that some of them cannot be helped at all and others are only half helped. It is rare that evangelists get to these localities, from the very nature of the case. And while regular preaching may serve for regular purposes, no one will deny that a special effort once or twice a year would likely be a source of renewed life and strength. If this work is done, it is wholly for the glory of God. For this very reason we ought to be swift to it.

Of course the RECORDER does not favor any new organization. So far as we can see into the future, we never will advocate additional organization. But the pastors who volunteer to this work could write to Secretary Durham, or go on to some particular field without any correspondence save as much as is usually necessary.

Churches so disposed might pay their pastors' travelling expenses for these occasions. And churches or communities in need of services might make it known by corresponding with Secretary Durham or by direct correspondence.

These are simply suggestions. It seems to us that the idea is a good one, promising a rich harvest of blessings.

A MEMBER of the faculty of the State University will please accept the thanks of the RECORDER for a copy of the initial number of the University Alumni Quarterly.

The RECORDER is naturally interested in North Carolina literary enterprises, and it is accustomed to look to our educational centers for out-bursts of that literary spirit which they are thought to foster. We had heard of the Quarterly, but we did not hope that a modest little note, relative to the number of students that have been enrolled at that institution, would bring us a copy so speedily.

Of its kind, the Quarterly is excellent. But our good friend misapprehends our note, if he thinks a very innocent "List of Students," beginning on page 9, fulfils our desire for information. To be clear, the RECORDER has read it in print and heard it said that four hundred and fifty-one students have been enrolled at the University this year: we wish to know if this is true. We have heard that no few are counted as enrolled who have had no real connection with the University. We wish to know if this is true. But the excellent Quarterly does not tell us.

The Alumni Quarterly is a straw in the wind, yes, indeed, is itself a very breeze. Prest. Winston introduces it with a concise statement of the "Plan and Purpose of the Quarterly," in which, we were surprised and gratified to read: "It (the Quarterly) will hope to bind together all the alumni, however remote be their lots, and will lovingly chronicle whatever pertains to University men. It cordially invites them all to send it frequent messages of news, of advice, of affection, of criticism—even of money."

We have not read anything pertaining to the University more encouraging than the preceding lines. An effort is actually being made to get practical advantage of the large and illustrious list of University alumni.

The Quarterly has a great and worthy mission; and its launching is most timely.

RICHMOND Baptist churches have determined to double their foreign mission contributions.

THE RISE OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—NO. 1.

In speaking of the Roman Catholic Apostasy, we shall use the word church in its modern sense exclusively; for, in its scriptural import, it would be misleading and absurd to apply that term to a pagan institution. Let us say further, by way of preface, that these editorials are intended especially for the masses of our people, who will, no doubt, demand of us, in the treatment of this momentous question, homely phrase and rugged logic. We are aware of the difficulties of the task undertaken, and fully recognize the fogs, and the clouds, and the thick darkness that compass the subject; yet, historical Christianity cannot be understood without a critical study of Romanism; we, therefore, venture upon a line of investigation rarely attempted.

Many good people have been deceived by the grandiloquent pretensions of Rome to Apostolic origin, and have fallen into the quite common error of regarding the great hierarchy as the first church, and hence, the oldest Christian organization on earth. This gross mistake has grown out of the fact that Pedobaptist writers, owing as they do their origin to the Apostasy, have been reluctant to take the bold, but only true position, that Popery is not in any sense a Christian institution. The child does not like to cast reflections upon its mother; therefore, the mask has remained on the face of the Beast whose pagan features have thus been long concealed. A kindred mistake may be traced to ignorance of the true source of ecclesiastical history, so much paraded, so little understood. Church historians have not, for the most part, possessed the right temper, nor caught the key-note of historic Christianity. They have sought religion in the bosom of the Harlot, they have demanded truth from the Man of sin. They have, moreover, refused to recognize the patent fact that in spite of all her tricks, and signs, and "lying wonders," the Papacy is not a church of Christ at all, but simply unblushing paganism. In this way history has been distorted, and Christianity has been made to bear the horrible reproach of papal idolatry, whose dark mysteries make a thrilling chapter in the records of mythology, but whose methods and aims are a base caricature of the religion of Jesus.

Roman Catholicism has been defined to be a compound of Judaism and Paganism with a little Christianity sandwiched between; to which we add, that Christianity is not a characteristic feature, whilst paganism unquestionably leavens the whole lump. That there may be here and there some persons in the communion of Rome who have risen sufficiently above the shackles of a heathen creed to exercise faith in the Son of God, we shall not deny. There may be such persons in the bosom of Mormanism, in Mohammedanism, possibly occasionally in other false systems of religion, where but little light has been received—this is a question for the Judgment.

At present Romanism is a counterpart of Buddhism. Destroy dates, looking simply at results, and it would puzzle the inquirer to say whether Popery sprang from Buddhism, or Buddhism from Popery. They are marvelously alike. Notice the following characteristic similarities:

The Buddhists teach the dogma of the immaculate conception of Gautama, their founder, which is duplicated in that of the Catholic Church, known as the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary. The Shangha was a Buddhist Order of Mendicants who retired from the turmoil and business of life, devoting themselves to contemplation of spiritual truths, begging their food from house to house; thus corresponding to the Romish Order of Monks that sprang up afterwards, begging bread, living in meditation, and accomplishing as much evil as their Buddhist brethren. Both orders lived in monasteries and advocated the celibacy of the clergy. Gautama was led, by the persuasion of his wife, "to establish an order of female recluses," and the forsaken wife "became one of the first of the Buddhist nuns." This order finds its counterpart in the Catholic Sisters of Charity—both of them travesties on true womanhood. As Gautama is the infallible head of Buddhism, so is the Pope of Romanism. Nirvana, the final rest, preceded by changes, toils, and spiritual purgations, is reproduced with strange accuracy in the Romish purgatory. Buddhism has been a state religion no less than Catholicism, and perhaps has blighted the nations over which it has held away no more. Buddha's relics were worshipped among his followers just as St. Peter's were among Catholics. When the Buddhist transgressed, he was required to confess his sin to his superior, who meted out proper penalties or absolved, as the mood struck him—a scandalous dogma imitated afterwards by the Church of Rome. The clergy of both systems fasted at certain times, kept always closely shaven, relied on works, and were equally destitute of spiritual religion. An English authority sums up the matter thus: "Lamaism (a form of Buddhism), with its shaven priests, its bells and rosaries, its images and holy water, its popes and bishops, its abbots and monks of many grades, its processions and feast-days, its confessional and purgatory, and its worship of the double Virgin, so strongly resembles Romanism, that the first Catholic missionaries thought it must be an imitation by the devil of the religion of Christ; and that the resemblance is not in externals only is shown by the present state of Thibet—the oppression of all thought, the idleness and corruption of the monks, the despotism of the Government, and the poverty and beggary of the people." Thus the comparison holds throughout.

In the next issue we shall attempt to trace the rise of this mongrel of Judaism and Paganism.

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

Dear Recorder:—Did Christ establish his church while on earth, or was it an outgrowth and development of his teaching? If so, can Baptism and the Lord's Supper be church ordinances?

AN HUMBLE INQUIRER.

As to the origin of the church and its relation to the Lord's Supper, we have to refer the inquirer to the article on Close Communion lately published in these columns. Granting, however, for the sake of argument, that the church is the outgrowth of Christ's teachings, the position and relation of the ordinances would in no way be affected. For, whatever grows out of Christ's teachings must be contained in these teachings, and nothing was more clearly taught by him than the nature and relation of these ordinances. If he did not entrust the ordinances to the church, to what body did he entrust them? Who, if not the church, is responsible for their observance? It can't be supposed that the Saviour intended any man, or even any Christian man, to start out at will and baptize his neighbors and administer the Supper to any he deemed fit for that service. All denominations, we believe, hold that they are church ordinances except Quakers, who reject them altogether—a course which would be generally adopted if the sacred rites were not considered church ordinances.

THE UNIVERSITY AND OTHER STATE SCHOOLS.

A memorial has been presented before the Legislature, signed by a committee of the Baptist State Convention, asking that the State reverse its policy of higher education and gradually withdraw all aid from the University and the other higher institutions. The request virtually is, that the State withdraw entirely from the field of higher education. This seems to us entirely impossible. North Carolina cannot consent to be the only Southern State without a system of public higher institutions.

We need more education, and not less. There is need of both church and State to work for higher education.

Let the State institutions be carefully inspected, and let any mismanagement be exposed and corrected. But they must not be destroyed; for this is to stab the State in a vital point.—The Caucasian.

Do Baptists ask that any State institution be destroyed? Consult President Taylor's articles, which embody our principles and defend our position, and which have not been answered.

"This seems to be entirely impossible," says our contemporary; but not a jot of logic or fact is in evidence to support the statement. And we confidently believe no one will say it if he studies "How Far Should a State Educate?" But a great trouble with State-aid defenders is their aversion to studying any but their own interests.

Do the Baptists show a destructive disposition? Is it destructive to reduce the appropriations gradually, which they are manifestly willing to have the State do?

"We need more education, and not less." Yes, indeed; but it is not now a question of quantity, for all realize the lack. The question is, Where do we need it, top or bottom? For your answer ask the people.

If a mother had a grown up son and a houseful of little children, and if the little children were half starved, would the mother divide her last loaf of bread among the little children? Or would she give the grown up son twenty-five times as much as she gives to any one of the children? The State gives each year about fifty dollars each to her University students, while her little children in the country districts get less than two dollars each. The grown up sons not only have education, but they can get more without using State funds, if they want it; with the children it is a question of State help or dark ignorance.

Moreover, no one is so insane as to believe that appropriations to our State institutions of higher education will ever be increased. They are now doing all they can on their present income; then, whence must come "more higher education?" It is clear that it must come from voluntarily supported schools. The State institutions will make no effort for endowment so long as the State makes appropriations. Cut off the latter and the institutions will begin to grow. The present policy retards the growth of State schools and cripples the denominational schools. There is but one way out.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

I always like to hear Bro. Brown of Winston preach his first sermon in January. For three years I have attended his church on this occasion. I remember them distinctly. He is in better health than usual, and this, with it pretty well settled that he is to remain in Winston, is cheering to the brethren. Sometimes the very best signs of growth and development in our churches are wholly or partially overlooked. I do not know how many members have been added to this church in the past five years. The adding of members is just one means of increasing the strength of a church. When I look upon this church now, and compare it with what it was even five years ago, I see a great change indeed. Bro. Brown told me Dr. Montague's influence and efficiency as a church member had increased a hundred per cent. in the past ten years. Bro. Day, who came here from Oxford, is one of his best and most liberal members. Bro. Wilkerson has not been here long, but he has taken hold of the work in the Sunday-school and church, and we hope he is to be of good service. Bro. Smith furnishes the best of music and has trained a most efficient and orderly choir. It is fine generalship to train a choir and keep the members in a good humor. Drs. Watkins and Conrad are among the first members of this church and leaders in the Sunday-school work.

Bro. D. S. Reid has moved to his elegant home in South Winston, about one mile from town. His house is just completed and is a model of taste in arrangement, comfort and convenience.

This was not a good time for my work, although I found just the same encouragement so far as appreciation of the RECORDER is concerned. Few of the factories are at work, and this makes money scarce with most of our people.

Bro. Wray is nicely situated and is much interested in the starting off of the work at Broad Street church. The brethren here are zealous and aggressive. There are few churches that are willing to undertake more, considering its financial strength than this. I heard Bro. Wray's sermons spoken of in a most complimentary manner by many of the members. This—the ability to preach and do it well—is what, after all, must measure the pastor's success.

I spent a night with Bro. Conrad. He is much interested in Bro. Wray's work and feels confident that his ministry will be a fine success. I got through going and coming without seeing Brother Thomas. I knew, however, where I could have found him—at his study hard at work. We have no preacher in the State who has grown more in the past five years than Bro. Thomas. The reason for this is simply because he has applied himself closely to his work. In his study you will find some of the best and most useful books, magazines and newspapers. This sort of reading, if wisely done, cannot fail to give point, edge and volume to a preacher's work.

Bro. G. W. Wright, who has been on the road for years, but who never allowed anything to weaken his interest in his church work, has gone into business in Greensboro. We wish him the sucess his energy and industry deserves.

Bro. R. W. Brooks starts the new year with good prospects for business. This is a matter of general interest so far as every object of the denomination is concerned, for when Bro. B. does not respond to every call, it is simply because his business does not afford it.

Judge Eller has returned to Greensboro, and is now Manager of the Keeley Institute. It was a real blessing to see him back in the work where he made such fine success a few years ago. When I met him, he said: "I have been hoping to meet you since I returned to North Carolina, in order that I might have the RECORDER sent to my family."

Sister Payne, one of the oldest members of the church here, always has plenty of good things to say for her church, her pastor, and also those who were there in the church's weakness and hard trials.

Dr. Rowe thinks the new Association will succeed and that its organization will secure the mission work which is so much needed in all this section.

The brethren are glad to welcome Bro. Van Deventer to Burlington, for whether his church joins the new Association or remains in the Mt. Zion, his work and influence will be felt in all of this section.

"Who is writing those articles on the Divine Origin of Baptist Churches?" is asked me daily. Every new subscriber wants his paper to begin with these articles. The brethren at are in the "dumps" somewhat, for fear their pastor may leave them. He was gone North when I was there. The weather was very cold, and it was hoped that this might act as a "discourager" to him. There are few better pastorates in the State than that at Goldsboro. For many years this flock has had, from time to time, some of the best preachers in this State or other States for pastors. The brethren are of the opinion that the Goldsboro church has been serving as a sort of advertising agency for the pastors; at least, they say that as soon as they get a preacher, it is not long till he is wanted in other fields.

But while these brethren are troubled thus, others wonder why no other church wants their preacher. Now, which is worse?

J. C. C.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Three large Baltimore pastorates are vacant.

....Our Polkton brethren are without a pastor.

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....The new Lord Mayor of London, Sir Jos. Renals, is a Baptist.

....Rev. T. C. Buchanan is now situated at Atlanta, Ga., instead of Sheltonville, Ga.

....A Baptist church house will be built at Little Brasstown, Western North Carolina.

....Rev. A. C. Dixon has just closed a ten days meeting at Worcester, Mass., with abundant results.

....Rev. G. W. Rollins of South Carolina has decided to return to North Carolina. He was at Raleigh last week.

....Asheville, Biltmore, Dillsboro, Sylva, Webster, Hot Springs and Murphy are all without pastors.—W. N. C. Baptist.

....Rev. J. A. Smith of Fair Bluff has gone to Georgia, where he will remain about a month preaching in various fields.

....Send petitions against the saloon to your representative and and insist that he present them to his branch of the Assembly.

....Mrs. M. B. Brown of Washington, N. C., has given her home to the State King's Daughters, for an asylum of imbecile children.

....Rev. J. R. Jones of Milton has been called to the pastorate at Cape Charles, Va. We hope to keep him in North Carolina and probably will.

....Rev. A. G. Wilcox of Brinkleyville is soliciting for the seventh church he has built in Halifax county, says the Scotland Neck Democrat.

....Pastor Suttle's (Albemarle) name was printed Tuttle in the last RECORDER. We beg his pardon. His letter on another page tells of great progress.

....Bishop Potter, Episcopalian of New York City, is president of a club that keeps whiskey, wine, etc., to sell to its members on Sundays and other days.

....Pastor Ford having gone to Bayboro to take part in the ordination of Bro. W. F. Fry, Rev. Sam. J. Porter of Morehead occupied the Newbern pulpit Sunday.

....Dr. Thos. Hume informs us that up to the 1st inst. there had been more than one hundred professions of faith under Evangelist Pearson at Chapel Hill.

....The Sandy Grove brethren, near Bladenboro, deserve and will gladly receive help; they lost their church-house January 13th by fire. Help them, brethren.

...."Norfolk will be a sober town in six months more."—Atlantic Baptist. We are hoping and praying to be able to say as much of North Carolina after a little.

....Rev. John Ammons, who is representing his Senatorial district in the General Assembly, preached a good sermon to the inmates of the Soldiers' Home, recently.

....Good work is being done in New Orleans. In the last three months Rev. D. G. Whittingill has welcomed seventy-five new members of Coliseum Place Baptist church.

....The Evangelist is the name of a new interdenominational paper published at Winston, Rev. J. T. Jenkins editor. Rev. S. F. Conrad is said to be connected with it.

....Sister Laura G. Barton, one of our beloved missionaries in China, has arrived and is at Louisville, Ky. The first we heard of it was a postal card requesting change of address.

....We were surprised and pleased to read a very interesting and just letter about "Raleigh, N. C.", from the Northern standpoint, in the Christian Secretary, Hartford, Conn., Jan. 30th.

....The Oxford brethren and sisters have taken fresh courage and determined to resume work for their new church house as soon as the weather permits, and to push it steadily to completion.

....Rev. J. N. Stallings offers to do what we hope every pastor will do, when he writes: "I will canvass all my churches, seeing all personally, who are not already subscribers to the RECORDER."

....Bro. O. P. Middleton of Warsaw was in Raleigh last week in a worthy cause. The representative of Warsaw in the Legislature was about to have passed a bill opening Warsaw to the saloons. The bill was delayed.

... Tickets to an entertainment for the benefit of the Raleigh Y. M. C. A. this week were placed on sale at a cigar and general tobacco store, in which petty gambling was carried on last Christmas. The eternal unfitness of names!

....Can we not get every pastor to canvass, or get him to secure some one to canvass his church for the RECORDER? Many have helped us. We have made arrangements that warrant us in promising that the RECORDER will be unusually helpful the coming year.

....A Kentucky Judge has decided that the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary must be taxed, notwithstanding that the institution was located at Louisville on condition that it be exempt from taxation. A rehearing of the case has been granted.

....The prospects for restricting liquor-selling by the General Assembly grow brighter. A brave effort is being made, and, it is certain, if something is not done this session, such a sentiment has been created that good results are sure to follow.

....Good news: Secretary T. P. Bell of the Southern Baptist Sunday-school Board and Miss M. E. McIntosh of Society Hill, S. C., were united in marriage January 22d. The bride is a zealous church-worker; Dr. Bell is known well enough. God bless them.

....People who charge us with desiring or trying to tear down or cripple any educational institution, are either blindly and pitiably prejudiced, or are deliberately designing to prejudice their ignorant hearers or readers. If there ever has been an effort to build up education, higher and lower, the RECORDER is making one.

....The addition to the Baptist church is much advanced towards completion. The design is very pretty and the general appearance of the church will be unique and modern. The stained glass windows are models of neatness and good\taste. Preaching and Sunday-school will be conducted there Sunday next.—Washington Gazette.

....With the RECORDER at fifty cents for nineteen weeks, running a series of articles especially designed to indoctrinate, there can be no excuse for weak memberships any longer. Remember we have an extra supply of last issue and this issue, in order that new subscribers may get the benefit of the entire series. If the money is not convenient, we will send the paper on any pastor's security.

....Rev. Jonathan Wood, who up to January 1st, had been pastor at Raton, New Mexico, for several years, is now pastor at Bryson City, N. C., having succeeded Bro. Chas. Durham. Bro. Durham is preaching in Virginia with the purpose of entering the Seminary next fall, we believe. Bro. Wood is a good and able servant of the Lord, and we bespeak for him the hearty encouragement of our western brethren.

....This, at least, can be said for the RECORDER: So far, neither its editor nor its contributors have ventured so much as a sentence of discussion of meaningless "monism." There is too much more tangible work to be done. But the fashion will have its course, and as in this instance the subject serves to warn us from columns proverbially dull, we do not object.

....The following brethren will please accept thanks for sending the RECORDER new subscribers last week: George Woodward, Statesville; S. E. Edwards, Ray; Jos. S. Fox, McAdensville; W. C. Meadows, Poors Knob; C. E. Gower, Lincolnton; G. T. Watkins, Roxboro; C. W. Blanchard, Cary; J. L. Smith, Siler City. We still have a few Almanacs and back numbers on hand, which we hope our brethren and sisters will take advantage of by getting others to subscribe.

....Rev. Livingston Johnson, one of the solidest preachers we know, has accepted the call extended by our Lumberton church, and he and his family are now in the parsonage there. Bro. Johnson will preach at a country church, once a month, we believe. Bro. Johnson's departure is greatly regretted by the Rockingham people, among whom he has labored to the upbuilding of the kingdom about ten years. Through him God has added great strength to our forces in that part of the State.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard is proving the wisdom of those who selected him as financial agent of Wake Forest College. He himself reflects honor on the institution in whatever sphere of work he engages. If the pastors and brethren all over the State will rally to his efforts as they should, the Baptists of North Carolina will have the greatest educational institution in the South in a few years. We speak advisedly. The possibilities of Wake Forest College are realized by only a very few people.

....The Atlantic Baptist states in one column, on other authority, that a sister has asked the privilege of giving ten thousand dollars to the Baptist Female University and in the next "that the $60,000 claimed to be raised for the proposed Female University of North Carolina could be divided by six and then be in doubt." We are sure our contemporary is striking for the truth, but his sword is dull and he wields it like a ploughman. A little more than $19,000 has been contributed to the Baptist Female University.

....Rev. J. F. Love was called by telegraph to Elizabeth City, N. C., last Saturday morning to attend his father in his dying hour, as was supposed then. He has been constantly at his bedside since, but has no hope for his recovery, as he is critically ill, being paralyzed, unconscious and entirely helpless. Mr. Love has been peculiarly distressed the past six months by reason of sickness in his and his wife's families, which afflictions he has bravely borne with that Christian forbearance which marks his every action.—Suffolk Herald.

....The excellent Literary Societies, the pride of Wake Forest College, will observe their sixtieth anniversary the 15th inst. as usual. The program follows: Debate, 2:30 p. m.—President, William B. Royall, Jr.; Secretary, John R. Moore. Subject: Should the House of Lords be abolished? Isaac S Boyles, Aff.; Richard G. Rozier, Neg.; John H. Kerr, Jr., Neg.; Isaac M. Meekins, Aff. Orations, 8 p. m.—William Carey Newton, Raleigh Travers Daniel. Marshals—H. Tolar, William C. Barrett, Wyatt P. Exum, Jr., John M. Heck, J. Dunn Hufham, Jr., Robert S. Sledge.

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins is aiding Brother Pruett in a meeting at Charlotte.

....Rev. C. J. F. Anderson has accepted the care of our church at Jonesboro.

....Rev. G. L. Finch has resigned at Biltmore, N. C., and will go to Pulaski, Va.

....We were incorrect in saying that Rev. E. Y. Pool had left Wake Forest College.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield is, this week, aiding Pastor Edwards in special meetings at Williamston.

...."Rev. Mr. Ferrell," says a correspondent of the Kinston Free Press, has accepted charge of Snow Hill Baptist church.

....The Baptist church has been thoroughly overhauled and repainted inside and out. A large baptistery has been built under the pulpit.—Windsor Ledger.

....Rev. S W. Hall, Treasurer of the Orphanage at Thomasville, was in our office long enough Saturday to say that all was well with our Thomasville interests.

....That the House committee on Education should have been increased to thirty-two members is most remarkable. It is reported that one of the objects sought is to prevent a reduction of the appropriations to higher education.

....The distinguished editor of the Western Recorder, Dr. T. T. Eaton, will observe the twenty fifth anniversary of his ordination the 15th of this month. Rev. Dr. T. F. Skinner, who ordained him, has written a letter which will be read on this occasion.

....We regret to announce the death of Bro. J. H. Stevens of Clinton, in Baltimore, of whose departure for that city we made note last week. Bro. Stevens was one of the most useful laymen in the State, a thoroughly loyal Baptist and an humble servant of God. We sympathize with his family.

....It will be to our mutual advantage if the pastors will urge their people to take advantage of our offer of the RECORDER from Jan. 9th to May 10th for fifty cents; this is less than three cents a week. Who cannot afford that? One cent extra, and we send an Almanac, a copy of which every Baptist ought to hang by his fireside.

....We are pained to announce that Elder J. H. Vernon is dangerously ill with pneumonia at Mr. W. H. Long's residence at Busby Fork, Person county. Our informant says there is very little reason for hope of his recovery. Bro. Vernon lately left Pollocksville on account of his health, which had given away under strain of sad bereavement. May God spare him to his calling.

....Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston is dead. He was the foremost of American Baptist preachers. The fame of the missionary spirit of his church has gone far and wide. His mission articles were the strongest that we ever saw. Above all, Dr. Gordon was a man of unmistakable spiritual power. Death came suddenly, overtaking him when about sixty years of age. The day of his death we received a new book by him on the "Ministry of the Spirit."

....Rev. D. K Bennett died suddenly at Wilmington last Sunday morning, aged sixty-five years. Bro. Bennett was born in Brunswick county, and has been living in Wilmington and supplying churches in that county for a year or more. In his day he was esteemed an efficient servant of God, and no doubt has entered into that rest which He has prepared for all His people. To his bereaved daughter and three sons, we extend our sympathy.

....We must run up to seven thousand subscribers. We know we can, if you, pastors especially, but any reader who will, cooperate with us. It will build up any community for Baptists, if the series of articles that we have arranged can be disseminated among its residents, no one is too poor to pay fifty cents for the RECORDER from January 9th to May 15th. Begin subscriptions with January 9th, as not one of the articles should be missed.

....While questions are going around, let us ask one: Why did the Baptist churches of the South organize a Southern Baptist Sunday school Board which supplies unexcelled Sunday-school literature, if they did not intend to patronize the Southern Board? Many have made the mistake of looking upon our Sunday-school Board as a personal business enterprise. It is decidedly a Southern Baptist enterprise, and Southern Baptists ought to resent reflections on it.

....Rev. K. C. Korner begins his new pastorate promisingly. He sends us some new subscribers, and writes: "I am delighted with my work at Siler City, Rives' Chapel and Cool Springs. These churches are all in a prosperous condition. Rev. C. J. F. Anderson, their former pastor, a young man of talent and promise, has done earnest, faithful work at all these churches. The young brother was loved by his congregations, and he accomplished much good for the Master. I love the RECORDER, and feel a greater interest in its success now than ever before." We are sure the Lord will bless Brother Horner's labors as he has heretofore.

....Rev. Walter M. Gilmore has accepted a call to the First Baptist church at Brunswick, Ga., a thriving city of the New South, having a population of ten thousand. The church building cost $40,000. Bro. Gilmore writes: "Our brethren are united and in very good working order. I am well pleased with the field, and have many reasons for encouragement. I have found a number of North Carolinians here. My heart still goes back to the 'Old North State.'" Bro. Gilmore is a graduate of Wake Forest College and our Louisville Seminary. He resided in this State several months after his graduation, and we had hoped to keep him in North Carolina. We are sure he will do good work and be a credit to his State in this large field that has been opened upon him.

Baptist Female University.

In the midst of the greatest financial depression our country has felt for many years, some may regard the undertaking to establish the Baptist Female University as unreasonable and hopeless. If it were a work of human origin, the Trustees would be among the first to postpone further efforts until "better times," but after most prayerful consideration of the work to be done, and the providential leadings connected with it, we find every avenue of retreat closed, and reasons multiplied for putting forth greater efforts. With an humble trust in God, to whose praise and glory the institution is to be established, we go forward with the work, relying upon Him, through his people, to furnish the means. We do not think it wise to bring a debt on the property we have paid for by allowing the buildings to be erected without our having the money to pay the contractor as the work goes on. We would be very grateful if the friends of this school would furnish the means to complete the buildings by September, that we might open the school to the large number of young women who express a desire to enter this fall. In the name of the Trustees, and in behalf of the noble womanhood of our State, I ask that you make every possible effort to send a contribution for the work at once.

Many ask, what grade of school are we trying to establish. The Trustees are well acquainted with the demands and necessities of our people, and will be only too glad to make the school of the greatest possible service to them. One thing is sure: this school will be run in the interest of our young women as to both grade and cost. What the exact cost will be depends upon the amount of money we can raise for its endowment. With one hundred thousand dollars as an endowment, and twenty five thousand dollars as a loan fund we could put the expenses within the reach of our people.

The great question with our people now is not whether they shall educate their daughters, but where? and how? And we confidently believe that this school will answer both questions. The fact that the college life enters into and becomes a part of the pupil's religious and social life, can be proved by the bitter experience of those who have patronized so called "non sectarian" schools or schools avowedly opposed to the doctrines held by the Baptist churches.

Every reason we have for teaching our young men applies to our young women, for they are "helpers to the truth," in church and denominational work, potent factors in society, and makers of the home, the hope of the nation.

Can the money needed to erect suitable buildings and endowment be secured? My brother, if you do your part, I have not the least doubt of it. The reasons for the establishment of this school, the cheerfulness with which our people make subscriptions to it, and the popularity of the enterprise among the best people in the State encourage us to believe that the Lord will provide for its establishment. With assurance of the co-operation of the brethren of the Convention, I am visiting the churches with confidence that they will put forth every effort to aid in the great work. Surely those whom I have visited have made the work very pleasant to me.

I appreciate the many kind letters I have received from the brethren expressing their great interest in the enterprise.

Faithfully,
Feb. 1, 1895. O. L. STRINGFIELD, Sec. Board Trustees.

Meeting at Albemarle.

Dear Recorder:—We closed the best and most successful meeting here last week that was ever held in this town. Bro. L. R. Pruett of Charlotte spent about ten days with us. His preaching was enjoyed by all except a few Methodist brethren who couldn't stand quite so much Bible as he used. Bro. Pruett came to us in fine time for work, and we had plenty of it for him to do. He not only preached while in the pulpit, but went from house to house preaching. We had forty-four conversions as a result of the meeting. There will be at least forty to join the Baptist church by the time we are ready to baptize.

When I came here one year ago, there were only twenty-seven members of the church; now, we number seventy nine. I am still trying to serve six churches.

Our church here in Albemarle is still in debt. We have made appeals to churches in different parts of the State for a little help. Some of them have responded, and we are hoping to hear from others at an early date.

The brethren of this Association have decided to build a parsonage here. The work on it will begin next month.

We are building two rooms and a baptistery in rear of our church building.

The Baptists of this county are moving forward in the Master's work, and one of the main causes is, Bro. Caddell came down to our Association and went away with his subscription list very much swollen. I wish every Baptist in the county would take and read the RECORDER; then the pastors would not have to devote so much time trying to get the members to do their duty.

I will begin a meeting at Kendall's church next Sunday. I think it better to hold our meetings here in winter than in summer. When people go to church through rain and mud, they go for the good of the meeting.

It costs nothing to investigate and may do you much good. For information write to Jno. W. Graham, Agt. Gould Bdg., Atlanta, Ga.

The Royall Chair.

Everything considered, we are making good progress. My own work, so far, has been mainly in the office and with the pen. Within a few days I hope to take the field and visit as many of the brethren and sisters as I can. I rejoice to know from a letter just received from Bro. Blanchard, that he is encouraged in his work. It is a great joy to me to be associated in this work with so vigorous and earnest and prudent a man.

There is ground for encouragement. Yes, but success is going to depend upon the cooperation of all our friends, everywhere, in doing what they can, be it much or little. One of the younger alumni sent me back some blank notes the day saying that he could not see his way at present to give more than a dollar a year; that he was ashamed to give so little, and therefore would promise nothing. Therein he was greatly mistaken. His dollar would have been, under the circumstances, a liberal gift. The truth is, while very many can and ought to give more, there are many thousands of Baptists in the State to whom it would be a real sacrifice to give a dollar a year to the College. But the sacrifice will enhance the value of each gift. The aggregate will be a noble endowment in itself.

You have not room to print even brief extracts from the numerous "Love Letters" which have come to me from every part of North Carolina. I shall only ask, therefore, to present this week some expressions from other States. They are all from Wake Forest Alumni.

Ohio. "I cannot resist my inclinations to do all within my power to assist you in your noble work. I shall never forget the assistance rendered me while at Wake Forest College. I shall consider it a pleasure to do more in the future, if I find it within my power." Three notes enclosed, $100.

California. "Unfortunately the blank notes were mutilated in opening the envelope. Please send me other blanks. It is easy to infer that the secondary object of the Chair is to commemorate the life and services of William Royall. That, of itself, ought to secure a hearty response, at least from all that knew him. Dr. Royall was one of the most lovable men as well as one of the best teachers that I have ever known."

Missouri. "I am glad that you remembered me in sending out the notes. I enclose $.... This amount, while it represents my ability to help, but feebly indicates my love for the College and my deep interest in your present undertaking."

Georgia. "I am delighted to receive your circular letter. I would be more delighted if I could accompany this reply with the cash in full, instead of the notes which I enclose. I shall do more if I can. Few things in life will ever give me greater pleasure than to contribute to the upbuilding of my Alma Mater."

Virginia. "I am glad of this movement and cheerfully take some part towards its success. I feel a deep and a growing interest for Wake Forest, and pray without ceasing for God's blessing on its work."

Kentucky. "Enclosed you will find my notes which I hope to meet as they fall due. My only regret is that I cannot make them ten times as much. This is but a meagre return for what the College has done for me. I bid you God speed in your undertaking. Rest assured that the sons of the dear old College have not forgotten whence they are, but their love for her and their appreciation of her benefits only increase with the flight of years."

Texas. "I return my notes with my best wishes for the success of the movement, and trust that you may reach the goal without any great difficulty."

New Jersey. "I am most happy to assist the College at any time that it is in my power to do so."

New England. "I enclose the notes filled out. I hope I shall be able to do more than the notes call for. The Lord go before and open the way for the College to an ever enlarging usefulness."

Tennessee. "I rejoice in the success of Wake Forest and contribute what I can to this end."

Alabama. "Next to my own work, there is nothing which so engages my interest and affection as Wake Forest College."

South Carolina. "I am glad that you sent me the blank notes. I will respond at an early day when I think that I can do better than it is possible for me to do right now. So give me a little time. The Lord prosper your work."

These letters and scores of others which lie before me, from which I might make extracts, tell their own story. Of course the South Carolina brother must take his own time. Many others doubtless are waiting for the same reason. In cases, however, where it is very clear that parties who have received blank notes will not be able to give anything, I hope that they will return to me the notes sent to them. Only a one cent stamp will be required for their return. This is important in order that we know how the land lies for our future work. Several parties who made pledges for the Royall Chair at the Alumni Banquet and at the Convention have not yet closed up their subscription notes. Perhaps they have not received the blank notes sent them. In that case, I wish they would let me know by postal card.

The Old Men and Women do Bless Him.

Thousands of people come or send every year to Dr. Bye for his Balmy Oil to cure them of cancer and other malignant diseases. Out of this number a great many very old people, whose ages range from seventy to one hundred years, on account of distance and infirmities of age, they send for home treatment. A free book is sent telling what they say of the treatment. Address Dr. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind. [If not afflicted, cut this out and send it to some suffering one.]

The Credit of the Home Mission Board.

Brother Vann has explained why it is necessary for the Board to have credit on the banks, and to borrow money.

The irregularity in the contributions of the churches make one of two things absolutely necessary either to curtail our work about one half, or to borrow money with which to tide over the dull season of the year.

Half of our receipts come in during the three months November March and April. We are compelled to anticipate these receipts just as farmers anticipate their crops of cotton or tobacco, and borrow money to feed and clothe our missionaries until they cause. Let us all resolve, we can and will pay out of debt and go to the Convention in May with rejoicing.

Dr. Broadus writes in the Florida Baptist Witness: "It will be a simple disgrace if we do not meet the debt before the Convention assembles. * * * I beseech you, brethren, let us make special contributions in the next three months for Foreign Missions. Try to convince your church, O pastor, that it is their duty to send the gospel far hence to the heathen. Many of them do not know that it is their duty. Prove it to them out of the Scriptures. They are not stingy. They are unacquainted with their duty in this respect, and you are the man to teach them their duty, and now is the time."

I add nothing more.

Fraternally,

Bro. Van Deventer on his New Field.

Dear Recorder:—I send you a few subscribers on the 50 cents offer. Send the three back numbers. I hope many more will before long welcome the paper in their homes.

I have been most cordially received in Burlington. The brethren and sisters have been unstinted in service in helping me to get settled. They have won my affection already, and I trust I shall be able to get into their lives and hearts. A recognition service on the first Sunday night in January, presided over by Bro. Turrentine, who has lived here perhaps longer than any other citizen, gave me a welcome on behalf of the pastors of the town, the citizens, the Association and the church.

The church is feeling the quickening impulse of a new administration. The old one has done well and deserves praise and honor. I trust the present one will be able to accomplish as much. The building is taxed to accommodate those who come. After the novelty wears off, we will then see what will be needed. I love the work in North Carolina, and am glad I came here. A great opportunity lies before me. I pray for wisdom and grace to improve it. A large door is open; I want to enter and honor God in so doing.

We are shaping the very well organized work a little, and will let you hear from us from time to time. A. Y. P. Union has come into existence already. It is not an entirely new thing, however. Bro. Hocutt had been training the young people. I think there were seventy-five present yesterday at the Y. P. Meeting.

Success to the RECORDER. I must express my interest in the articles now appearing in your columns on "Origin of Baptist Churches." They are needed. A pastor could do no better thing for his church and denomination than to get his people to read them. I told the congregation that each article was worth more than the price of all. My prayers and affection for our dear Bro. Bailey.

The Work of an Evangelist.

BY REV. N. S. JONES.

I believe there are possibilities that lie within easy reach of the pastors and laymen that will effect a wonderful revolution in mission work throughout the State. I would rejoice to see an evangelistic movement strictly on the Apostolic plan. I mean by this, to see a sending or going out, two and two, of men endued with power from on high, to preach the gospel, and to do it without money and without price.

Possibly we have done our work faithfully as pastors; but is there not a work of vital importance that we might do, besides ministering to our own people?

A number of our pastors are given from two to four weeks' vacation during the year, which is all right, and an evidence of the esteem in which they are held by their churches. If our congregations are willing to do this much for us, could we not well afford to give one or two weeks to special work in weak and destitute sections without asking or expecting any remuneration for such work? I have had this question under prayerful consideration for some time, and I believe there is a plan, which, if put in operation by the brethren and faithfully worked will bear glorious results.

Are there not at least fifty pastors and laymen in North Carolina who are willing to unite their hearts and energies in a movement of this kind with the purpose of carrying the gospel to every nook and corner of our State; and that without having it said that we preach for the hope of gain in mammon? Some of the strongest men in our State have never preached where they possibly might do the most good. It seems to be a fact that too many ministers accept the invitation that comes from the strongest points. When we read this sentence, let the question come into our minds, "Is it I?" I would be rejoiced to enter into an organized movement to do a work that is near my heart, and pledge myself to give a certain number of days during every year in strictly evangelistic work, without receiving one cent for such work. Now who will come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty? If fifty pastors and as many laymen will unite in this work, we can put in at least fifty weeks' work. Always have two brethren to go together. We could expect at least 700 or 1,000 conversions from any year's work.

I would like to see a meeting of the pastors and laymen for the consideration of this question.

I would that this work could find its way to the hearts of our brethren; then I should hope to see the return of the days like unto the days of the Apostles, when it could be truly said, "The deaf hear, the lame are healed, the blind receive their sight, the lepers are cleansed, the dead are raised, and the poor have the gospel preached to them."

"Revivals."

Sometimes I see accounts of revivals in the newspapers in which the statement is made that all the converts were grown people, some of them sixty or seventy years old. Such news is refreshing. It looks like the Lord has been at work there. In all the accounts of revivals and ingatherings we have in the New Testament there is no mention of any but men and women. We have accounts of some few households, but no mention of little boys and girls. And even now we occasionally have accounts of the conversion and baptism of households where all the parties were grown up people. As this is the case with New Testament churches now, it is not surprising that it was so with the churches mentioned in the New Testament. The wonder is that we have so few mentioned in the New Testament, when there was such a pervading power of the Spirit attending the preaching of the gospel in those early times.

I am not oblivious of the arguments used in favor of early conversions, as they are called, and am as much in favor of them as any one can be. I am in favor of and delight in conversions, true conversions, at any time the Lord in mercy may send converting grace to any sinful soul. What I am opposed to is counterfeit conversions and the use of means to bring them about. "By their fruits ye shall know them." This is as applicable to methods as it is to individual persons. Now, let us apply the test. Urgent appeals are made to boys and girls to come forward and give the hand or do some other act expressive of a desire for salvation. One goes forward, then another and another, until quite a large number may be counted. Then the invitation is given for any who can trust the Saviour to come forward, and forward they go, one after another. Let any one be present at one of these meetings, and if he is not able to see that a large majority of such professions, both of penitence and conversion, are only sympathetic childish emotions, then he has very poor discernment. Now watch the results as time passes on. The boys are getting large enough to pick the upper lip, and the devil begins to crop out, and some don't wait that long. The preacher and the older members now become concerned about them and run after them, and by all sorts of efforts try to hedge in their way. Trouble is now on hand. And if they are saved to the church, they are so many dead weights. As for the girls, they must behave themselves in a tolerably decent manner, religion or no religion, but it is to be feared they have no more religion than the boys.

And another thing. The way that some have of urging people who are manifesting a concern for salvation to make a profession of conversion, to come forward and confess Christ as it is often put, is calculated to mislead. At a revival meeting conducted by one of our pastors this was carried to such an excess that during intermission one of the brethren who was old enough to wear spectacles took the pastor aside during intermission and kindly said to him, "my dear brother, don't urge penitents so much to make a profession of conversion, for you may depend upon it, if they are ever converted they will find it out." I am glad that such brethren are not all dead. But if things go on at the present rate, in some places at least, it will not be very long before none of them will be left.

Now, put all these things together—the large number of children that make a profession under special appeals made to them, the urgent appeals made to people who show some concern about religion to make a profession of conversion, and the many methods used bearing upon these special ends—and no wonder thoughtful, godly brethren are lamenting the large number of unconverted people in the churches—I mean Baptist churches. Such a condition of things may suit others whose principles do not require conversion as a test for membership, but it will not do for Baptists; and the sooner they get rid of the manipulations which conduce to such a result, the better.

There is a lamentable complaint among the older brethren in some of our churches of the want of spirituality and real religious enjoyment in our public assemblies. And well there may be. Observe the demeanor of the congregation, church members included, before services commence. There is a chat and buzz all over some congregations as bad as at a theater or show before the performance begins. No reverence, no solemnity, no indication of prayer or serious thought, but rather a spirit of mirth or glee. When the services begin the singing is more artistic than devotional, and much of the preaching is more like the school boy delivering an oration committed to memory than preaching the solemn truths of the gospel. A speech twenty-five or thirty minutes long is rattled off, a hymn sung, the congregation dismissed, and the people feel more like they had been to an entertainment than to the house of God to worship in spirit and in truth. And a lamentable feature about the whole thing is that such preaching is greatly sought and enjoyed now a days; something to entertain. If such a man as the great and good Richard Fuller could turn up in some places and preach with tears running down his cheeks, beseeching men to be reconciled to God, it would be more novel than fiction; it would knock the starch out of some of the stiff, formal exercises, and cause us to see that spirituality is more essential in our religious gatherings than the mere social feature. We have some such men, but I fear they are few and far between. When the churches shall pray for preachers who will preach in the demonstration and power of the Holy Ghost, they will have them, and such a revival of genuine spiritual religion will ensue as the world has not seen for a hundred years. But the trouble is, the churches are just such as the preachers have made them. And so, what is to be done? I leave this question without attempting an answer just here. Let the reader pause. He may give a better answer than I can.

And yet one more thought before closing. It is the practice of taking a vote on some proposition; for example, "as many as feel that they are on the way to heaven, stand up"; or, "as many as will talk to some sinner and try to get him to seek the Lord, stand up"; and so on to the end of the list. I never felt good when these votes were taken; for often people stand up that cause remarks to be made by the unregenerate, because they have no confidence in their piety. My observation is that the voting method oftener than otherwise throws a damper over the services, or if an enlivening effect is produced, it is spasmodic, and soon passes off.

Now to conclude. Some things that I have written may seem rather harsh, but they have grown upon me as the years have passed, and I believe have been impressed upon me by the Spirit, and I regard it as a solemn duty to sound a note of alarm and warning. According to the course of nature I can't be in the flesh much longer, and if I can do any good by this kind of admonition, it seems to me the best service that I can render.

"Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, wherein is the good way, and walk therein," and don't say, as did the perverse Jews, "we will not walk therein." I fear that we are in some respects like the Jews. They had an overweening disposition to imitate surrounding nations, and I am afraid we have too much disposition to imitate surrounding sects and court popularity at the expense of truth.

This remarkable statement, to which we direct special attention, is from a Tennessee farmer: My age is 63. I suffered intensely from Catarrh 10 years. Had intense headache, took cold easily, had continual roaring and singing in my ears. My hearing began to fail, and for three years I was almost entirely deaf, and I continually grew worse. Everything I had tried, failed. In despair I commenced to use the Aerial Medication in 1888, and the effect of the first application was simply wonderful. In less than five minutes my hearing was fully restored, and has been perfect ever since, and in a few months was entirely cured of Catarrh. ELI BROWN, Jackson, Tenn.

Germans in the South.

My dear brethren, let me tell you of the work among the Germans. There are at least two millions of Germans in the Southern States. Among those the Home Mission Board has seventeen missionaries on the field, six of them in Missouri laboring among the 800,000 Germans in that State. One in Louisville, eight in Texas working in connection with the State Convention in co operation with the Home Mission Board, and one missionary lady at Baltimore and one in Oklahoma. On these seventeen of the Lord's messengers appointed directly and indirectly by the Home Mission Board, wait two millions of their countrymen for the bread of life. Shall they have it, or die without salvation in this broad Christian land? The question lies before us as Baptists of the South. Generally the people of this blessed country are always ready to answer all calls for help wherever it is necessary. A few days ago I saw in the paper that the people of the South collected food, corn, flour, etc., for the suffering in Nebraska. That is right: it shows the spirit of sympathy and brotherly love: surely the Lord will bless every giver.

Now brethren, let us show the same spirit in spreading out the bread of life to those millions of foreigners in the South who have become our neighbors, that they may rejoice with us in the salvation of their souls. This can be done when every Baptist in the South will send a contribution in proportion to his ability to the Home Board, Atlanta, Ga.

This great mission cannot be carried on by only a few churches of our Convention. No, it belongs to all the Baptist churches of the South, and every member in those various churches should contribute to the work of the Home Board. As soon as every member comes up to his duty, then the cry for money will not longer be heard. Money will be enough in the Treasury of the Board to send twice as many missionaries on the field as there are to day, and our dear brethren of the Board will not longer be burdened with anxiety for money to pay the missionaries.

The question before us is, will every Baptist of the South, poor and rich, stand by the Board with their money and prayers to help forward this blessed work through all the Southern land; that we may see the gospel victory as never before, and no room left where the spirit of anarchy and socialism can prevail against the gospel of Jesus Christ.

But if we keep our money back which belongs to the Lord, then our hearts also will have no interest and sympathy for those dying souls around us, and surely the evil spirit will work among them, and all of us will bear the consequences of his sins.

By visiting the people in their homes, I find often eight or ten German women in one small room playing cards, drinking beer and serving the flesh and the devil at pleasure. Oh, how necessary is it to break up such places and bring them out of darkness to light, furnish them tracts, and where there is a house without a Bible, to give one to them, and then try to get them to the house of God.

My dear brethren, if I could take you with me for only one week in the homes of the unsaved, surely you would be convinced of the work of the Home Mission Board as never before, and then you would know that it needs your money to so help in this work that it may be a blessing for this land of ours to the glory of God and the salvation of man.

The dear Lord has blessed our humble efforts in our work in Missouri, especially this fall, over fifty new converts have come into our churches, and the outlook for the future is as hopeful as it can be, but what are the small numbers of workers among the millions of unconverted?

There are a number of young men who would like to go as colporteur missionaries in the new settlements for the small salary of four hundred dollars a year. And there is need of such men, especially in Arkansas and Kentucky. Who is willing to send the four hundred dollars to the Home Board, Atlanta, for the appointment of a missionary? It will have a glorious reward ready in this life, and in the life to come.

"O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years," (Habakkuk 3: 2) is our prayer.

It's a Curious Woman who can't have confidence in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Here is a tonic for tired-out womanhood, a remedy for all its peculiar ills and ailments—and if it doesn't help you, there's nothing to pay.

What more can you ask for, in a medicine?

The "Prescription" will build up, strengthen, and invigorate the entire female system. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. In "female complaints" of every kind and in all chronic weaknesses and derangements, it's the only guaranteed remedy. If it does'nt benefit or cure, in the case of every tired out or suffering woman, she'll have her money back.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, piles, biliousness, indigestion and headaches.

A Lady's Reasons for not Dancing.

"1. Dancing would lead me into crowded rooms and late hours, which are injurious to health and usefulness.

2 Dancing would lead me into very close contact with very pernicious company; and evil communications corrupt good manners.

3 Dancing would require me to use and permit freedom with the other sex, of which I should be ashamed, and which I believe to be wrong.

4. Ministers, and good people in general disapprove of dancing, and I think it not safe to set myself against them; if a thing be even doubtful, I wish to be on the safe side.

5. Dancing has a bad name, and I mean to study things that are pure and lovely and of good report.

6. Dancing is usually accompanied by drinking, and drinking produces a great deal of evil.

7. I am told that dancing is a great temptation and snare to young men, and I do not wish to have anything to do with leading them astray.

8. Dancing unfits the mind for serious reflection and prayer, and I mean to do nothing that will estrange me from God and my Saviour.

9. There are plenty of graceful exercises and cheerful amusements which have none of the objections connected with them that lie against dancing.

10. As everything a Christian does should be done 'unto the Lord,' I feel that to indulge in dancing would be more of an insult than an honor to him. So I shall abstain from it altogether."—Ex.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

The Indians.

The work of the Board among these people has always been confined to the Indian Territory. This work has been so successful and so long continued that it has now closely approximated in its character and conditions our work among the white people of the frontier.

There are now in the Indian Tarritory: Associations, 16; churches, 301; church-members, 13,844.

The large and increasing white population of the Territory is demanding greater attention year by year. Shut out from the schools established for the education of Indian children, our brethren are exceedingly anxious for a good school located somewhere near the center of the Territory to which their children might be sent. The Board has been strongly urged to aid in establishing such an institution.

Colored People.

The demands or duty to these people become more and more urgent as the years go by. We must not suffer the need of our white population to absorb so largely our means and our interest as to exclude proper efforts in their behalf. We must give more to these millions who, though of alien blood, live with us on the same soil and share with us the weal or woe of that country which is the native land of both. The question, "How can we best help them?" is a grave one. The Board has given to it long and careful thought. The conclusion it has reached has been confirmed by years of experience. It has become a well-grounded conviction that our chief work for them must be the better fitting of their native ministry for the instruction and government of the churches placed under their care. Most effective work has been done in this direction during the past year. That done by Rev. J. M. Brittain in Georgia, and Rev. W. H. McAlpine in Alabama, has come nearer the true ideal of such work than has ever before been attained. The Board will be glad to unite with State Boards in other States in the promotion of this work.

Foreign Population.

The work in Baltimore is of peculiar interest. This port receives a larger foreign immigration than any other except New York. Fifty thousand emigrants from foreign lands here reach our shores every year. To these new comers special attention is given. While they are furnished with religious truth in every way in which it is possible to convey it to them, attention is also given to their physical needs. These strangers within our gates are shown such helpfulness in all things as become those who love the souls and bodies of men, and who seek by all proper methods to win them to the Saviour. These emigrants bear with them to their new homes, perchance in the far west, the remembrance of the faces and kindly words of those who helped them in the day of their perplexity or the time of their sorrow. Such attentions are bread cast upon the waters which will come back reduplicated in after days.

Our mission in Kansas City greatly needs a house of worship. We trust the efforts of the laborious pastor will at an early day be rewarded with the success they so richly merit.

The work among the Mexicans in Texas is of great promise. The brother who conducts it is a devoted servant of the Master, and ought to receive far more help than the Board could possibly give him the past year. A house of worship in El Paso should be built at the earliest day possible.

For Ten Cents A Day

The most wonderful work of the XIX Century.

"If all other books should be destroyed, the Bible excepted, the world would have lost but little of its information."

Without a Parallel

In the history of educational enterprise stands the offer of The Charlotte Observer to its thousands of friends and readers. Such an offer has never been made before, and should have your careful consideration.

The merits of this liberal and mammoth literary enterprise can only be judged by careful investigation.

Every reader is therefore earnestly solicited to give the attention to this offer that its importance and liberality deserve.

It Means That

The best and heretofore most expensive Encyclopædia is within easy reach of even the boys and girls.

Parents, encourage your children in habits of economy for the noblest of all purposes—economy for the sake of education. Just think of it! A saving of only 10 cents a day will secure you the great Encyclopædia Britannica, which covers every department of knowledge known to mankind. No man needs any other library; no man can have a better one.

Bear in Mind

That this new edition is complete in 23 volumes, and is the only Encyclopædia in the world revised to date, and is offered for sale at introductory rates to subscribers of The Observer only, for whom all freight charges will be prepaid to any railroad station in the United States.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

Just Three Months.

Dear Brethren of North Carolina:—According to an apportionment of the amount needed to pay off all obligations and support our missionaries in the field this year, we should look to your State from May 1st, 1894, to Feb. 1st, for $6 750 06 In that time we have received $4 454 58; W. Convention, $737 20. Total, $5.091 78.

We have only three months more, but we want these to show great contributions for the Master's work.

It will take twice as much to pay all of our obligations and go to the Convention free of debt as we gave in the same time last year. Will each lover of the Lord and each church see that their contribution is doubled.

This may be hard to do in some cases, but let us make sacrifices for the good of the are in hand.

Now let it be understood that neither of the Boards of the Southern Baptist Convention has any credit in the banks on its own account. They cannot borrow money on their own responsibility. There is not a dollar of debt of the Foreign Mission Board that is not secured by the endorsement of an individual who lends his credit to the Board. He has made the debt his own by placing his name upon the Board's obligations.

The Home Mission Board secures its credit in bank in a little different way. The members of the Board unite in a written statement addressed to the bank guaranteeing to the bank the indebtedness of the Board for the sum of $10 000. This gives the Board credit on the bank to that amount. If the Board requires more than this $10,000, it can be obtained only by the endorsement of some individual, who thus makes it his debt. The bank regards him as the party to whom the money is loaned, and his ability to borrow for himself is diminished by that amount.

In these times it is no small favor for men to pledge their credit to the Board when they may need it themselves in their own personal business. Yet members of the Home Mission Board have done, and are doing it for the Master's cause, and that the work may go on. When brethren are disposed to find fault with the Board, let them think of these things.

I. T. TICHENOR.

The steamship Elbe was sunk by collision near England the 28th ult.; 340 drowned.

From Bro. Britton of Soochow, China.

Dear Dr. Bailey:—I am sure that our friends in North Carolina will be glad and thank the Lord, when they learn that our sister State (S. C.) has given us a co-worker. Elder W. W. Lawton has been with us now nearly two weeks. For years we had prayed and hoped that our station would be reinforced, and great is our gratitude for his coming and presence with us. And the interest that he shows in the work and the eagerness with which he is taking hold of the language, promise with the blessings of the Master an efficient laborer at no distant day. But you must not imagine that we three are sufficient for this city of 500,000 souls, to say nothing of the vast destitute regions around; on the contrary, will not all of our people come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty, send forth those who are ready and anxious to come and others whom God shall call.

I had a good day with our church at Quinsan last Sunday. All the members in the city were present at the two services, and one had walked six miles from a county village, in spite of the fact that it snowed nearly all day.

Our work here is encouraging, in that we have pretty good congregations at the daily chapel preaching, and interest is shown by a few.

I hope, the Lord permitting, to begin the second day of the next Chinese year (Jan. 27, 1895) special efforts in chapel work, that is, preaching and personal conversation, and continue four or five weeks. I want to request all lovers of Jesus who see this to pray at least once that the Holy Spirit may be abundant with preacher and people that by all means some may be saved.

We hear very little definite news about the war either from the people here or through the Shanghai daily paper. In fact, the great majority of the Chinese in this section have scarcely been affected by all the war.

Our Christian greetings to the brotherhood. Fraternally,

T. C. BRITTON.

A Wonderful Cure for Cancer.

Mrs. Betty Powers, 304 W. Marshall Street, Richmond, Va., after visiting Baltimore, Md., for treatment, as well as having received treatment from her home physicians, was given up as hopeless. Dr. Scott Mason was called, and in twenty five days gave complete relief and removed the last vestige of cancer without using knife or burning plaster.

Dr. Mason claims to be able to cure a large per cent. of so called "incurable cases" readily, without pain, and permanently. Many cases can be cured at home at small cost. Those who are afflicted should write to Dr. Scott Mason, 700 Clay Street., Richmond Va., for information, testimonals, terms, &c.

Dangers of Boiler Inspecting.

SUDDEN CHANGES OF TEMPERATURE BRING ON PARALYSIS OF THE SPINE.

THE TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE OF A JERSEY CITY BOILER INSPECTOR, STRICKEN DOWN AND PRONOUNCED INCURABLE BY THE MOST EMINENT SPECIALISTS, YET HE RECOVERED.

(From The Newark Evening News.)

There are but few classes of men in the United States whose calling subjects them to sudden changes of temperature that at times will vary in degrees that reach into the hundreds. Boiler inspectors, probably have more of this to contend with than any other single class of men in the country and they, sooner or later, feel the effects of it and not a small number of them have died at an age when they should really begin to enjoy the fruits of their labor.

Paralysis of the spine is one of the fruits of an expert knowledge of steam boilers. In the coldest season of the year, the expert is required to go into a boiler room and inspect the boilers while the temperature is crowding the mercury up into the hundreds. When his work is done, he puts on his coat and goes out in the cold. The result is easily imagined.

For the past seventeen years, Mr. John Bird, one of the best known men of Jersey City, has been an inspector for the Hartford Steam Boiler Insurance Company. About two years ago he began to suffer with pains in the small of his back, but at first paid but little attention to it, thinking that it was nothing more than a severe cold, or at worst, an attack of rheumatism. He went about his work as usual and the pain became more intense. Finally he became so bad that he could scarcely use his limbs at all.

He called in Dr. Varick of Jersey City, who after a thorough examination refused point blank to attend him. He advised Mr. Bird to consult Prof. Corning of New York. Mr. Bird acted on the suggestion without delay and sought the renowned specialist. After going through a rigid examination, Prof. Corning told Mr. Bird that his spine was afflicted and that science could not help him.

The history of the case is a remarkable one and is best told in Mr. Bird's own language. To a reporter who called at his handsomely furnished home at 165 Whiton Street Jersey City, Mr. Bird said:

"When I first decided to doctor for my trouble I learned, that I had contracted paralysis of the spine. I called in my family physicians, Dr. Varick, who refused to treat me and advised me to go to the Professor and followed his advice for eight months, but it did no good at all. After this I went to Professor Thompson, who treated me with electricity and compressed air. Sometimes I took as much as fourteen pounds and a half in three hours. There are very few men that can stand the compressed air for more than a half hour.

"But for all that I did not improve much, and I began to lose all hope. A number of friends of mine in New York and Newark asked me repeatedly why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They kept at it so persistently that finally I decided to give them a trial."

"Well, sir, do you know that they have done me more good than all the Professors and Doctors in the world. I am a hundred per cent. better now than when I first began taking them. I am better in health and in spirits and there is no longer that old feeling of depression. I walk better now than I ever did while I was under the care of the physicians. I am gaining flesh now and have been ever since I took the Pink Pills. Another thing, the feeling has come back in my legs. It used to be so that I could pound them as hard as I was able and I could not feel it at all. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best thing I have ever heard of and I am always glad to tell anyone what they have done for me."

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills shows that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box or 6 boxes for $2 50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ontario.

DIED.

WILLIS—In Morehead City, January 22d, Alvin Willis died in his nineteenth year. He was the eldest son of Bro. Jordan Willis and wife. We commend the sorrowing parents and friends to the tender love and sympathy of our Heavenly Father. S. J. P.

WILLIAMS—Addie Bertha Williams was born May 1st, 1872, and died Dec. 18th, 1894. She leaves a devoted husband and a darling little infant seven days old. She was always bright and full of life; a good girl, an obedient child, and true wife. She was baptized into the fellowship of Waughtown church, September, 1887. Rest till Jesus comes.

HENRY SHEETS.

GLADON—Jane Gladon, our beloved sister, breathed her last Jan. 1st, 1895. She died trusting in her Saviour, and we are consoled by the thought that she is now at rest. She was about sixty years of age. She leaves one child and a number of grand-children all weeping with sorrow. She was a consistent and faithful member of Bridgewater Baptist church. J. C. SORRELS.

CATES—Death came into the home of Bro. J. W. Cates on Dec. 11th and claimed the pet of the home, who was sixteen months old. She was sick but a few days, but from the first it was evident that the enemy was struggling to break the tender tendrils of her infant life. To the bereaved parents we would say, "She is not dead, but sleepeth." The flower has been transplanted to a more congenial clime.

"In this world of care and pain,
Lord, thou wouldst no longer leave it;
To the sunny, heavenly plain,
Thou dost now with joy receive it;
Clothed in robes of spotless white,
Now it dwells with thee in light."

For the thoughtful attention of the good people of the town the parents are very grateful, and feel that in their kind ministrations they have been comforted. PASTOR.

MATTHEWS—Mrs. Martha H. Matthews, (nee Barnes) wife of Rev. J. R. Matthews, died of paralysis at Hexlena, Bertie county, N. C., in the forty-ninth year of her age. She professed faith in Christ and united with Connaritsa Baptist church in her fifteenth year.

Mother was faithful to her children, to her husband, and above all, to God. Her hands were always busy for her large family of children, eight of whom still live to mourn her departure, together with her husband and two brothers and a sister.

Her eyes are now closed and her hands are still in death. But the soul of mother is resting in that home which Jesus has prepared for those who love him.

It was hard for the writer not to have seen her face in death. She was laid in the narrow tomb before he could arrive at her home in North Carolina. She often prayed, I know, for her far away preacher boy. But one day the trumpet shall sound and mother shall be raised up and her body fashioned like unto the glorious body of Christ. In the dawn of that glorious day I shall see her and bid her a sweet good morning. Mother, this old world is not so bright now as before you left us, but heaven is brighter and nearer. May we follow thy Saviour, and at last when the battle is over wear the crown

"Sleep on, dear mother, sleep on and take thy rest,
And lean thy head upon thy Saviour's breast,
We loved thee well, but Jesus loved the best,
Good night, good night, good night."

C. W. M.

STEWART—In Clinton, January 8th, of lingering sickness, Mrs. Emily Stewart, the devoted wife of Rev. J. L. Stewart. The deceased was born May, 1834. She was the daughter of Dr. Cave, a noted physician at Chapel Hill, and grand-daughter of Wm. A. Barbee, one of the early founders of the University. She met Mr. Stewart while he was a student at this University, to whom she was married in 1857. The first years of their married life were spent at Chapel Hill, where he was engaged teaching. In 1864 Bro. Stewart, in conjunction with Isham Royall, for one year, assumed the control of Warsaw High School. Thence they permanently settled in Clinton. While faithfully sharing his early struggles and the many cares of seventeen years pastorate at Clinton, and thirty years service to surrounding churches, and truly worthy to participate in his popularity in the pulpit and at the bar, she was best known and loved in the quiet home circle. Of a gentle, retiring nature, never strong physically, and health especially declining in later years, her exalted service was the maintenance of a Christian home and rearing a noble family. One of her daughters became the wife of our well-known Henry W. Battle, D. D., now pastor at Petersburg, Va. Another married James Murphy, who for years past has held an honorable position in the U. S. Civil Service at Washington, D. C. Her son, W. B. Stewart, of the milling firm of Stewart & Hines, and our beloved Sunday-school superintendent, with two other fond daughters, remain at the home to share the father's bereavement.

Theirs is the consolation of the Holy Comforter and the sympathy of many friends.

Tributes of Respect.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted at a meeting of the First Baptist church, Fayetteville, Jan. 20th, 1895:

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father has seen fit, in his All-wise Providence, to call away our beloved brother, Wm. H. Atkinson, from the scene of his earthly labors to eternal rest; therefore Resolved 1. That while keenly feeling the loss of one so constant and faithful, we bow in humble submission to the will of God, who in his infinite wisdom and love, can make no mistakes.

2. That we recognize in our deceased brother the character of an honorable, pure-minded Christian gentleman.

3. That we gratefully commemorate his untiring devotion to the interests of this church, and his extraordinary fidelity to every trust that she committed to his hands. As Clerk of the church for nineteen years, he had not a superior, if indeed an equal. As Deacon for a series of years, "he purchased to himself a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." In every capacity in which at various times he served the church, whether as Financial Secretary, Superintendent of the Sunday school or Teacher of the Infant Class, the same zeal and faithfulness ever characterized him.

4. That we tender to his sorrowing mother, wife and children our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of their separation from the loved one gone before, and commend them to our Heavenly Father's care.

5. That this Memorial be inscribed upon the record book of the church, that it be published in the N. C. Baptist and the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and that a copy be given to the family of our deceased brother.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father, on Jan. 16, to remove from our midst by death our friend and sister, Ellen Arthur; therefore be it Resolved 1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who is too wise to err and too kind to be cruel.

2. That, though she passed away before reaching her eighteenth year, we believe that our loss is her eternal gain, because her life was consistent, and, in the time of affliction of death, she manifested a strong and unwavering faith in her Saviour.

3. That in her death our church loses a faithful member, our missionary society an active worker, our Sunday school a faithful teacher.

4. That we tender our deepest sympathy to the grief-stricken father and the tender little brother and sisters; and that these resolutions be sent for publication to the BIBLICAL RECORDER, Charity and Children, and the Beaufort Herald, and a copy also sent to the family of the deceased.

Correction.

Dear Recorder:—Many thanks to your printers for their painstaking work on my articles. There occurs but one error of any consequence, and that was in last issue on page 5th, near the middle of first column. I suspect that even this is attributable to my own carelessness. The line is "a no infernal chasm that genius can bridge." Of course, this is as clear as mud! The truth is, the words are all right, but they are out of order. By proper transposition, they would read, "A chasm that no infernal genius can bridge."

The only fault I find in your editorials on church history is their brevity. They are excellent, and should be read by all our people. Fraternally,

JNO T. ALBRITTON.

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

"Good Morning!"

"Good morning, world!" On the window seat
She balanced her two timid little feet.

She clung with her dimpled hands, and stood
Framed-in like a picture of babyhood.

The clambering vines hung low and green
Round the sunniest curls that e'er were seen,

As she stood with beauty and light impearled,
And bade "Good morning!" to all the world.

"Good morning, world!" and the great world heard;
Each rustling tree and each singing bird.

The dancing flowers and the fields of grass
Nodded and waved at the little lass;

And the far-off hills and the sky overhead
Listened and beamed as the word was said;

And the old sun lifted his head and smiled—
"Good morning, world!" "Good morning, child!"

How He Got His Place.

The boy who does just as little as possible for an employer sometimes wonders why he is not given a higher position in the business house in which he is employed, when a less brilliant companion who works for another establishment is advanced very rapidly. The reason probably is that the less brilliant companion is more faithful and works conscientiously, always seeking to do more than enough barely to secure his salary. Somebody sees and appreciates his work, and when opportunity comes, a better place is given him, which he fills with equal faithfulness. An illustration of this may be found in the following true incident:

A boy about sixteen years of age had been seeking employment in one of our large cities. He looked for work vainly for two weeks, and was well-nigh hopeless of getting any work to do, when one afternoon he entered a store kept by a gentleman whom we will call Mr. Stone.

The lad asked the usual question, "Can you give me anything to do?"

Mr. Stone, to whom he appealed, answered, "No; full now." Then, happening to notice an expression of despondency on the youth's face, he said: "If you want to work half an hour or so, go down stairs and pile up that kindling wood. Do it well, and I'll give you twenty-five cents."

All right, thank you, sir," answered the young man, and he went below. As the store was about closing for the afternoon, he came up stairs and went to Mr. Stone.

"Ah, yes," said that gentleman somewhat hastily. "Piled the wood? Well, here's your money."

"No, sir; I'm not quite through, and I should like to come and finish in the morning," said the young fellow, refusing the silver piece.

"All right," said Mr. Stone, and thought no more of the affair till the next morning, when he chanced to be in the basement, and, recollecting the wood-pile, glanced into the coal and wood-room. The wood was arranged in orderly tiers, the room was cleanly swept, and the young man was at the moment engaged in repairing the coal bin.

"Hullo!" said Mr. Stone, "I didn't engage you to do anything but pile up that wood."

"Yes, sir, I know it," answered the lad; "but I saw this needed to be done, and I had rather work than not. But I don't expect any pay but my quarter."

"Humph!" muttered Mr. Stone, and went up to his office without further comment. Half an hour later the young man presented himself, clean and well brushed, for his pay.

Mr. Stone passed him his quarter.

"Thank you," said the youth, and turned away.

"Stop a minute," said Mr. Stone. "Have you a place in view where you can find work?"

"No, sir."

"Well, I want you to work for me. Here," writing on a slip of paper, "take this to that gentleman standing by the counter there; he will tell you what to do. I'll give you six dollars a week to begin with. Do your work as well as you did that down-stairs, and—that's all," and Mr. Stone turned away before the young fellow recovered from his surprise sufficiently to speak.

This happened fifteen years ago. Mr. Stone's store is more than twice as large as it was then, and its superintendent is the young man who began by piling kindling-wood for twenty-five cents. Faithfulness has been his motto. By it he has advanced, step by step, and has not yet by any means reached the topmost round of success. He is sure to become a partner some day, either with his employer or in some other business house.—Anon.

Kathie's Victory.

It chanced one morning that Aunt Martha was suddenly called out to see a sick person, and was obliged to leave her room in need of dusting and with every bit of bed linen spread out to air.

The door stood open, and Luella, seeing the disorder which she knew auntie disliked, said to Kathie: "Let's fix up Aunt Martha's room for her." Kathie had just been helping mother in the kitchen and felt a little tired. Besides, she had some affairs of her own that she wished to attend to.

"I really can't," she said, and hurried away.

Luella began the work by herself, and, although it took her some time, she tidied up the room beautifully.

When, after a long absence, auntie toiled wearily up the stairs, thinking of the work before her, Kathie was just coming from the room, having been sent upon some errand by her mother.

On going in, Aunt Martha was happily surprised, and, thinking Kathie must have finished the task, she stepped out and called to her niece, who was at the bottom of the stairs by this time.

"You must have been the good fairy who did my work. It has made me feel rested already," she said. "Thank you, dear."

Then she shut the door.

Dear, dear! If only Aunt Martha had not said these words when there was no chance to answer at once, the temptation to let the matter pass without explaining would not have been so great. What a fight there was with love of praise, selfishness and deceit on one hand, and love of truth and right and love of Luella, too, on the other!

But love and truth and right fight under a Captain who always conquers when his commands are obeyed.

When, at dinner-time, auntie took her seat next to Kathie, with a peculiarly pleasant smile, Kathie said at once: "It was Luella who fixed up your room this morning." And then the praise given Luella sounded very sweet to Kathie, for such a victory over self is sure to bring unselfish joy.—Weekly Welcome.

Take a lemon. What is it good for? Here are a few of the uses: Squeezed into water and a little drunk every morning you have almost a specific for incipient dyspepsia. A lemon decoction applied to the scalp when your hair is falling out will tend to stop this difficulty. The juice added to milk and applied to the hands on retiring at night will whiten and soften those useful appendages. Applied to the face the effect will be the same. A little pure glycerine added will do no harm. Apply a few drops of the undiluted juice to the sting of a bee or hornet and a ready relief will be found.

ONE of the fiercest commercial battles of recent years terminated the other day with the appointment of a receiver for the abominable whiskey trust. The conclusion of a struggle of this kind could not be cause for rejoicing, howsoever; but it is reassuring that a trust has been beaten and ruined. == Pope Leo XIII., who is always dying, but never dead enough to be unaware of a good opportunity to ingratiate himself and increase the number of credulous contributors to his magnificent support, has sent out a long letter to Americans, fawning upon them with all the art of his long training. The fact that his American representative, Satolli, is received by State officials at the North with the same formality as representatives of a foreign court, has been the subject of deservedly severe comment. == Female advocates of woman's suffrage met recently in Atlanta, Ga. They went through the usual forms, made speeches and recited consolatory visions, and adjourned, having elected Susan B. Anthony as their president for another term. The North Carolina General Assembly was either good humoredly lax or seriously careless to grant permission to a suffragist to make an address in the Senate chamber. We believe in free speech, but we are not unmindful that some speakers ought not have leave to make a speech outside of asylums for the insane. == The President's special message to Congress recommends an issue of $500,000,000 in gold bonds, in order that all outstanding Treasury notes may be redeemed in gold and cancelled, thus destroying the lever by which the gold is raised out of the Treasury. It would be less expensive, more effective, because permanent, and more constitutional to put an end to the drain of Treasury gold by paying out silver to the next man that presents a Treasury note (all of which are "redeemable in lawful money of the United States.") The Gold Reserve has been reduced to nearly $40,000,000, but the government is not in need of anything—save gold, since it has on hand ample funds in silver and notes and inestimable credit. It is hoped that the bill to carry into effect the President's recommendations will not pass, although the expiring Congress is making heroic efforts to leave a positive financial record. == A Nicaragua canal bill, we fear, will pass the House. It is a dangerous step, though not devoid of commendable properties. If it is successful, the bold stroke will have proved fortunate; if it fails, it will be marked in history as an example of colossal folly. On general principles we are opposed to having the government lend its good credit to any private enterprise, and especially when the latter's stock is in a bad way.

THE North Carolina Railroad Commission lacks one attribute, authority, and lacking that lacks the chief essential of efficiency. It makes rules, hears complaints, takes evidence, gives opinions and prescribes penalties; but action for the enforcement of the penalties has to be brought in the Superior Court, where all the evidence is taken again. It seems to us that the Commission ought to have power to enforce its penalties, or ought not to exist at all. It is foolish to have preliminary proceedings, if they do not amount to anything.

The RECORDER is inclined to the belief that the government ought to keep out of private affairs. For instance, from our standpoint, the government has no more right to determine the rate of interest than it has to say what the butcher shall charge for mutton, no more right to determine tobacco-warehouse charges than it has to fix the rent of 113 Fayetteville street, no more right to determine what a railroad shall charge, than it has to put an arbitrary price on a farmer's cotton. But the railroads are general affairs, a great many people are dependent upon them Indeed, and so is cotton raising; and agriculture as a whole is clearly more generally essential than transportation. This is ideal. Laws are not necessary, save for evil doers.

There may be conditions which render railroad commissions and usury laws expedient and wise and just. Property-owners may demand such high rents that it is absolutely necessary to the good of the most that they be restrained. If farmers would combine and could hold for a short market and high prices, they might bring about such a distressing state of affairs, that it would be necessary to make laws limiting their power to hold and demand. If mechanics would combine and could sustain themselves while they refused to work for less than ten dollars a day, no one who defends railroad commissions or a limited rate of interest could consistently deny the right of employers to request the government to decree that mechanics shall not clog the wheels of industry with extortionate demands. If one admits that the government has the right to interfere with the business of his neighbor or his enemy, he must not deny its right to interfere with his own.

The public's faith in the generality of men cannot be said to be trustful. Would the farmer hold bread from the hungry of the cities, if he could thus raise prices from the wealthy while the poor hungered? Would the mechanic raise his wages to ten dollars a minute, as his millionaire employer, if he could do so, by making those who use his handiwork pinch and strain to get it? Judging by what has been done by those who could, or judging by the degree of covetousness you candidly feel within yourself, what say you? Happy is he who is not corrupted with love of gold; and happiness, alas, is not a characteristic of this stage of civilization!

Since the farmer and the mechanic are powerless to hold for prices, being without resources, and also lack adaptation to fine organization, and since the wealthy corporation, whether its business be transportation or manufacturing, represents the thorough organization of power equal to that of several thousand combined farmers or mechanics, and is of itself naturally organized and also has resources to sustain it long after wheels and bands have stopped, and since men are prone to take advantage of any power they may get,—since the conditions are such, it is necessary for the government to interfere in behalf of its millions of resourceless members, not only for their sake but for the general good.

To come back to the Railroad Commission, the current report of which we set out to write about. The Commission would be a desirable institution if it had more power. It has paid for itself hundred times over by properly appraising the value of railroad property. In 1890 the valuation was $12,424,540; in 1894, $24,565,614. None of the railroads, except the skulking North Carolina Railroad, is now exempt from taxation. It has formulated wholesome rules governing the transportation of passengers, pertaining to charges, schedules, etc., etc. Every one is familiar with the convenient bulletin boards at railway stations: they are fruits of this Commission. The rules and regulations in regard to freight charges and transportation are clear and, in the judgment of one who is not familiar with such matters, are equitable. The railroads are not permitted to refuse to carry any proper freight on the train for which it is offered, nor to blockade freights, nor to reduce rates secretly. The rates are fixed, according to the number of pounds carried and the distance.

Three systems operate in the State: the Atlantic Coast Line, with thirteen branches, the Southern, with seventeen branches, the Seaboard Air Line, with nine branches; there are nineteen other roads varying in length from two hundred and forty eight miles to three miles. The total miles of railroad in the State is 3,583. Twenty-nine miles of new railroad were constructed last year; taxable property was increased $336,656 89. Of all these systems and roads the condition, income, assets and liabilities are given in remarkable detail.

As a whole the report is a valuable work for reference. The digests of various cases, the classification of freights, adjustment of rates and general statistics, are both useful and instructive.

The relations of the Commission and the railroads are friendly, and the public attitude in respect to the roads is sounder than in years.

The RECORDER has been harboring a complaint against the railroads, which may as well be made here. It was not so very long ago that we saw two trains of different systems have a good opportunity to make convenient connection at Raleigh, but instead, one train pulled out just as the other came to a standstill. That was abominably mean and pusillanimously little. The people on the incoming train had to remain in Raleigh at extra expense over night, when it could have been prevented by the loss of a minute by the out going train.

The Commission will earn a title to the loyalty of all the people, if it will make a business of compelling the railroads to make decent connections.

Believers' Baptism a Privilege and Duty: Baby-Sprinkling a Delusion and Sin.

BY REV. JOHN ROBERTSON, PRESBYTERIAN PREACHER, IN GLASGOW, SCOTLAND.

Acts viii. 26-40.

The higher criticism has come and played havoc with our historical conceptions—if you're fool enough to follow it. Either the thing was never done by those historical heroes, or it wasn't worth doing—anybody could have done it, even the critics themselves. Moses never went up the mount. Isaiah was never sawn asunder.

This Queen's Chamberlain of Ethiopia had got anxious about his soul. He had tried to get relief from the idol worship of the country, and somehow he had heard that the Jews had among them a revelation as to how the unseen God in which all lived and moved and had their being was to be worshipped, and he went up to Jerusalem specially on this errand "for to worship." When a man is anxious about his soul, a journey to London is nothing. And this chamberlain harnessed his horses, and took his official chariot, and went to Jerusalem in search of light. "Licht, mehr licht."

This eunuch goes a way back with the Word in his hand. Thank God he has that still. Some of you have given up your Bible because you have given up your minister. That is not logical. Some of you have given up the profession of Jesus Christ because a servant of his deceived you with his religious twaddle, and took you in with his hypocritical humbug. That is not logical. I am glad that this man of business kept in his hand the very Word that these priests handled, and yet mishandled. Do not let the mistake of the servant be attributed to his Master, nor the character of a minister be assigned to his Lord. God forgive us for adding to the offence of the Cross so much of our own offensiveness. And this eunuch goes past the holy priest in cool headedness, and is reading the Word that is theirs, yet theirs not a jot or tittle of it. A man that is reading the Word—I know there is some Philip to be told by the Spirit to run and join himself to the chariot of him. I know that if you open this book myriads of angels are commissioned for your enlightenment.

The Holy Ghost Himself has come to bring you to the truth. If you honestly bend back the boards of this Book, it is a signal to Almighty God to come personally to your help! So the man is opening the Book, and God sees it, and he tells Philip to go and join himself to the chariot. He is reading the Word. He had read it before, but God seems to bring conviction now.

Thank God we have the Word. Clasp it to your hearts. Dr. Merle D'Aubigne, the Swiss Historian of the Reformation, was discussing with Monsieur Grebert, who became a Roman Catholic archbishop and who said, "Our church has such an advantage in possessing the bones of St. Paul," but D'Aubigne said, "The Protestant church is beyond your church; we have several relics of St. Paul." "What are they?" "We have got a collection of his letters!" So we have, and we prize them more than we would his bones! The relics of the Apostle are with us, and the full inspiration of God is in them, and the eunuch finds Jesus where not a higher critic in their ecclesiastical heathen chairs will find him, in the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. Beginning at the same Scriptures, he preached unto him Jesus.

Philip told him about the Atonement, I am certain—about its specialty and completeness and substitution. I know that Philip who said, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" drew attention to this best of the Lord's speeches, "It is finished!" and to the fact that the Lord Jesus Christ had paid the bill run up in the hostelry of an unregenerate heart; to the truth that on Calvary he paid all the demands of the law of God. He satisfied divine justice, and on him the Lord hath caused to meet the iniquities of us all. To the ears and soul of the poor convicted sinner in the chariot that was the best speech he ever heard, and he embraced the Lord Jesus Christ freely offered to him in the gospel.

In addition to the Blood, Philip must have brought out something else in his full statement of the full gospel. He must have suddenly changed from the Blood to another subject, and that was for the eunuch said, "See, here it is." What is? The water you were speaking about. "See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" "But this eunuch," you say, "was a heathen!" Blessed Hindoo! Blessed Hottentot! not hindered from baptism! Will you tell me that because I was sprinkled as an unconscious infant, the pool of "planting together in the likeness of his death" is to be closed for me! Oh, horrid act! Oh, sinful deed, that would hinder me from being baptized! Shall I plead to be born a heathen! Heathen! Am I not a thousand times worse a heathen than this poor eunuch! The first time he heard of Jesus he believed in him to the saving of his soul. I had heard of him thousands of times before I believed, am I not a worse heathen than he! In an idolatrous country he; in a Christian land I; an unbeliever through wilful enmity to God I; a heathen without God he, because born so, a heathen without God I, because loving my sin, and rejecting my Saviour. I tell you the heathenism of my unconverted days is worse than this eunuch's; darker, deadlier, more of damnation in it than in his. Is he the less heathen, to get this glorious privilege of being buried with Christ in baptism, and I, the infinitely greater heathen, to be hindered from it? The heathen only to be baptized? Then I tell you, ye baby sprinkled but unbaptized believers in the "visible church," in the dear church of Scotland, Established, and Free, and U. P., ye have the bigger claim to the baptismal font in the holy ordinance, for if ye have had an unconverted past at all, if ye are conscious of having been once out of Christ, unconverted, unregenerate and unsaved, ye are bigger heathen than this man that's asking believer's baptism at the hands of this preacher. Unregenerate nature, and the heathenism of baby-sprinkled unregenerate nature is the most heathenish of heathenism, and unconverted were the most heathen of the heathen. "Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the wills of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others" (Eph. 2:3). Only one who can say before God, "I have never been where Paul was, and am an exception to his 'we all,' having been regenerate since the first breath I drew on this earth," can look upon himself as other than a heathen, and can claim exemption from baptism, even if it's true that "heathen only" are to be baptized. Are you such an one? Stand up and let us see you. There is none, "for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God," and to be a sinner is to be a heathen. Dean Stanley says, "The legitimate reason and permanent principle on which infant baptism is founded is "a recognition of the good which is in every human soul." But that is anti-Christian blasphemy, and has to be flung from him by every believer in the Word of God as he would fling from him in horror the slime and venom of a serpent. Is it, then, on the ground of this anti-Christian conception you are to sprinkle your babies? Surely, no. The Holy Ghost reveals the innate depravity and "original sin" of mankind, the inborn heathenism of the fallen human heart, and says through Paul that "in our flesh dwelleth no good thing." Poor fool you, if you think a few drops of water sprinkled in your baby face make other of you than what the Word of God says you are, a natural heathen, and flesh born of flesh." "Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again."

Oh, like other Presbyterian ministers, God forgive me for ever leading my flock round the pool of baptism. But "the water" is in the way, the star of truth has to be followed, and the straight guiding is into the crystal baptistery. "What doth hinder me to be baptized?" Do you say baby sprinkling? Traditional custom! Never! I am not to lead you astray any more. "But I obtained mercy because I did it ignorantly in unbelief." "Through ignorance I did it." The darkness of night was so dense, but the star of God's truth has risen on the horizon clear and bright, and by it I must go. As I am to deliver my soul at the judgment seat of Christ, I say this is the way. This converted man took it. Let me take it. Do you take it? Infant sprinkling, like spoiled vaccination, it didn't take with us! We had an unconverted past. How could it take? This baby-sprinkling is a sinful addition to and reversal of the Word of God.

I have now come to confession by believers' baptism, immersion. I did not invent it, but it is here. You may like it or dislike it, baby sprinkling, as a simple addendum to the Word of God, and as such inheriting the curse in the nineteenth verse of the twenty second of Revelation on all such human or diabolical addends, is an infernal lie. By this devil's door of baby sprinkling the great heresy of the church, the ex opere operato delusion, the Roman and the Anglican semi Roman error of errors,

BAPTISMAL REGENERATION,

stalked in to tread its grim march of death over the graves of the multitudes of souls it has slain and damned forever! Baby-sprinkling is historically as well as Scripturally false. Dean Stanley, just before his death, wrote an essay on baptism for the nineteenth century, October, 1879, and in it he says, "Baptism by immersion had, no doubt, the sanction of the Apostles and their Master, but speaking generally, the Christian civilized world has decided against it." This he styles—this church history expert—"a striking example of the triumph of common sense and convenience over the bondage of form and custom." This baby-sprinkling minister of the Church of England goes on to say, for like every honest and capable church historian he has to say it: "The substitution of sprinkling for immersion is a greater change even than that which the Roman Catholic church has made in administering the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in the bread without the wine. For that was a change which did not affect the thing signified, whereas the change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of the Apostolic language regarding baptism, and must to many at the time have seemed the GREATEST AND MOST DANGEROUS INNOVATION."

While admitting that this change "altered the very meaning of the word"—for all Greek New Testament scholars are agreed on this, as our own Dr. Thomas Chalmers said, "The original meaning of the word baptism is immersion"—Dean Stanley glories in the change! He says it shows "how the spirit which lives and moves in human society can override even the most sacred ordinances." It is blasphemy. This "spirit of the age," this modern zeitgeist that is worshipped by the churchly church before Christ, is simply the sin of sacrificing to devils. Overriding the revealed will of God, disobeying the plain command of Christ and the injunction of the Holy Ghost, and rejoicing in it. Daring blasphemy! Spurgeon said about this point, "I say to the servant, 'Mary, please bring me a cup of coffee at eight o'clock to-morrow morning.' Eight o'clock comes. So does Mary with her cup of coffee! No, a glass of water! 'Hallo, Mary, what is this?' 'A glass of water, sir.' 'But I said a cup of coffee!' 'Yes, but I thought a glass of water would be better for you.' 'Thought! But it is for me to do the thinking, it is for you to do the obeying.'" Christ has thought and left his command. Dean Stanley, and such as he, claims to do the thinking and improving on the Master's command, reversing it, and disobeying it. Override it for "convenience and common sense!" It is high treason and damnable blasphemy against God and his Word. Calvin said—I have it jotted down here—"Because Christ began preaching before baptizing, and we have believers only admitted to baptism, baptism does not seem to be rightly administered except faith precede." Well done, Calvin! And here is Luther. God help us! What have we been following all this time! Devil's delusions! Luther says—"It cannot be proved by the sacred Scriptures that infant baptism was instituted by Christ, or begun by the first Christians after the apostles." And Professor Lange, the German authority on the early ages of Christianity—he is German too, and you mighty higher critics go in, you know, for German sausages!—Lange says: "It must now be granted by every unprejudiced reader of Holy Scripture and Christian antiquity that the baptism of newborn infants was altogether unknown to primitive Christianity." And Neander, the very giant of church history, says, "Infant baptism cannot be proved for the first two centuries." O, traditional lie! Man's addition and devil's delusion of baby sprinkling, will thou dare to bar me from the example of Jesus Christ! "What doth hinder me?" Is it in a lie? Never, my God! It is in thy Word. I will confess thee in thine own way. "See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Baby-sprinkled believer, as was said to Paul, I now say in the name of God to you, "Why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." It is not a church matter, this act of obedience, it is entirely personal. You don't need to leave your church, surely to be obedient to the Lord. You don't become "a Baptist." I am not a "Baptist." I am a Presbyterian, believing and baptized—only I now put (for the present) my Presbytery beneath my hat when I put it on, thank God! I am in the "historical and apostolic succession" of Scotland's anti prelate and anti-liturgic Kirk. I am in the church of my fathers. The Covenanters to me nearer than ever, the Covenants to me dearer than ever. And what is even better, I am in the church of my grandfathers, the apostles of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, baptized as they, baptized as he! The Church of Scotland was led by the Holy Spirit to the truth of Christ's Crown and Covenant to his Headship over the church, this in the gone by, and the same Church of Scotland, I believe, is now led by the same Holy Spirit to the truth of, and to the contending for, believer's baptism. Be a covenanter now, you Scotch Presbyterian. Do you know that Immersion was historically within a hairsbreadth of being embodied in the Westminster Confession of Faith and the standards of our Kirk of Scotland! It was the chairman's casting vote in the Westminster Assembly of Divines (93 to 94), on August 7th, 1644, that substituted unscriptural sprinkling for scriptural immersion! That chairman has a lot to answer for—when I meet him in heaven I'll feel more inclined to pull his nose than shake hands with him! How historically insecure and mistaken is this whole wretched affair of water sprinkling, and baby sprinkling is the worst form of it. But now, you Scotch Presbyterian, sword in hand and Bible in heart, like your martyr sires, "to the law and to the testimony." The Covenanters would do it, this obedience to the truth of the Holy Ghost, special to the times, if they were here to day. The Baptist Presbyterians will yet be the Auld Kirk of Scotland! And the scripturalness of believers' baptism is the Presbyterian ministers and "professors" of Scotland to prove it wrong, and baby-sprinkling right and other than a delusion of sin! Baby-sprinkling is no more baptism than eating a grape in a railway train is partaking of the Lord's Supper!

Can you tell me if he passed this way? I can, I can. "Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan, unto John to be baptized of him." "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and lo, the heavens were opened unto him; and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: and lo, a voice from heaven saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." This settles it for me. It is all I care to hear. His foot fall! His foot fall!

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

BAPTISTS ought not spend money on costly decorations for their churches until the debts of our Boards have been paid.

WHEN we accept Christ as Saviour, we must also accept him as King, says the F. M. Journal. High-pressure, high-speed evangelists ought to consider this, and more of their converts will be mission workers.

WE know a North Carolina pastor who has declined three calls to good pulpits, with an increase of salary at, at least, one; but he has kept it from the papers. We admire that. Accepted calls ought to be made known as soon as possible; unaccepted, it is another matter.

WHOEVER he is spoke a truth when he remarked: "If Christians have got to go round cleaning up after vice, they have the right to clean it out before its gets started;" which is to say we had better interfere with secular affairs in order to keep vice from them, rather than wait until they become so viceful that we have to interfere or be interfered with.

IT IS interesting to observe the efforts of some of our contemporaries to become the Southern Baptist paper. That some paper will become to the South what the Watchman is to New England, the Examiner to the Middle and the Standard to the Western States, is more than probable; and the Southern field is several times bigger than any of the others in numbers and in extent. We have always preferred the Western Recorder as a general paper, mostly because we can trust it. The Religious Herald has been ambitious to spread North and South and West for several years; the Christian Index has been growing into requisite dignity and ability very promisingly of late, the Texas Standard has "spread-eagled" the field by judicious use of Dr. Carroll's sermons, but a series of sermons will not make a paper what will be required of the Southern Baptist paper; our neighbor, the Baptist Courier would win the prize if there were virtue in high strung philosophy or co-education; and we were about to forget that the Baptist and Reflector has been showing decided evidences of desire for more territory the last two years. Two brethren suggested that the RECORDER employ correspondents in the various States and make its bid. We have the correspondents, if they would only write oftener; but our ambition is to make the best State Baptist paper in the land. There is greater need for good State organs than there ever will be for a general paper. Certainly the RECORDER can never become too good or too great for North Carolina Baptists.

THERE are reports of two Orphans' Homes on our table, and to those who, angel-like, "love to linger where God's poor are found," a brief review of them will be welcome. There is no more appealing object than a homeless widow and her children or motherless and fatherless little ones.

Buckner Orphans' Home, Texas, is one of the largest institutions of its kind. There are three hundred and fifty children under its roof now, and although it is not an old institution, seven hundred orphans have been trained there. The Home was started in a small cabin, with three children, in 1880; but so great has it grown that there are now several handsome buildings, and its condition is prosperous. At first the manager had to mortgage his own house to maintain the Home. Last year $21,505.17 was collected. The average cost of each child in this Home is forty-seven dollars a year.

The Oxford Orphan Asylum report is addressed to the Masons. It is being run at large expense. Twenty-two persons are employed, in addition to the common laborers. The total income last year was $24,237.04, $10,000 from the State, $3,500 from the Grand Lodge, $10,305 from other sources. Only $30,601.26 was expended. The treasurer states that contributions have been larger than for a number of years past. The average cost of each inmate was about one hundred dollars. Only fifteen boys work on the farm, four in the shoe shop, four in the printing office. The girls sew and wash clothes. The Asylum is in a very prosperous condition, and $10,000 will be expended for new buildings this year. There are about two hundred children at this Orphanage. Their support costs nearly as much as the support of three hundred and fifty costs in the Buckner Orphans' Home.

THE RISE OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—NO. 2.

The underlying principle of Romanism is hoary with age, having its origin, as the priesthood so proudly claim, in the age of the Apostles. Indeed, we should not be unduly concerned to refute even the dogma of Apostolical Succession, when we note the marked similarity between the treachery of the Romish clergy and that of Judas Iscariot. The cardinal fact of Popery may be stated in the proposition, The church is the kingdom of the priests. Sacerdotalism is its chief distinguishing feature. Christ says, "My kingdom is not of this world." Popery is not only of this world, but of the basest part of it. Christ says, "The kingdom of heaven is within you." Popery places the kingdom on the outside, relating to the body instead of the soul. Jesus says, "One is your Master, even Christ." Rome says, One is your master, even the Pope.

The rise, progress, and fall of the Papacy are clearly described in the Scriptures. Thus Paul speaks: "I know this, that after my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock." Again: "But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve, through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." Again: "Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. . . . For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; . . . . then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming; even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders; and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth."

Even in the days of the Apostles the "mystery of iniquity" had already begun to work, and antichrists had already come. The development of this mystery of iniquity, starting up under the very ministry of Paul himself, is the history of Romanism; it is also a history of Judaism. The Jews, as a class, never understood the teaching of Jesus. Though converted to Christianity, they never fully comprehended it; and while aiming to follow Christ, they adhered to Moses: while accepting the Gospel, they exalted the ceremonial law. It was a phase of this very question which the first general conference, composed of Apostles, disciples and delegates, had to meet in the case of circumcision in its relation to Christianity, as reported from the church at Antioch. A decision was reached that produced a temporary lull, soon, however, to be broken by the roar of doctrinal storms and the crash of defiant error. "We have Abraham to our father" was the motto of the Judaizers; and to the Abrahamic covenant they clung with the tenacity of death. In course of time Christianity came to mean but little more than Judaism transferred with Christ at the head of it. In a rebuke of fire Paul expresses his abhorrence of this apostasy from the Gospel to the ceremonial law in the judgment, "Ye are fallen from grace." This expression, so strangely distorted to mean the loss of religion in the soul, teaches the Judaising attempt to abandon the system of grace in the New Testament for the system of law in the Old Testament. In other words it declares, not the surrender of personal religion, but the surrender of the Christian system. As the voice of inspired men died away, the Jewish conception of the priesthood, a national church, works, elaborate rituals, and the temple, became deeply rooted in the minds of the Gentile Christians. There was now no leader to cry in the indignant glow of inspiration, "O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth?" History but too plainly shows that as the Jewish element grew stronger, the sorcery of Judea threw its magic spell over the churches; which, though having begun in the Spirit sought now to be made perfect by the flesh. The churches for the first three centuries were tolerably pure. For it must be borne in mind that whilst legalistic tendencies were waxing worse and worse, there were many brave souls that protested against the rising errors of the times, denouncing them in the severest terms. These were the first Protestants, and they were Baptists. It must be remembered, moreover, that the hierarchy of Rome, clad in the black robes of spiritual death, wearing a double crown of Judaism and paganism, crimsoned by the blood of martyrs, grew out of the corruption of the early Baptist churches. Thus as an angel of light became a devil, the Gospel of Christ became a heathen ritual.

By what steps was this great and radical change effected? We have space but to hint at some of the most important.

1. The Judaizers had promulgated with tremendous energy their strongest dogma, "Except ye be circumcised and keep the law, ye cannot be saved." No matter that Paul declared, "In Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth anything nor uncircumcision, but faith, which worketh by love;" for they practically evaded the inspired decisions on this subject by saying, that although that rite had been swept away as to the letter, yet it was retained as to the spirit, since "baptism had come in its place, a seal of the same covenant, designed to answer the very same ends!" So the transition was easy from the Jewish tenet, "Except ye be circumcised ye cannot be saved," to the Catholic dogma, "Except ye be baptized ye cannot be saved." Thus was the error of Baptismal Regeneration born into Christendom of decaying Jewish parentage, the most relentless curse that ever cast its blighting shadow over Christianity.

2. If baptism takes the place of circumcision, of course infants are proper subjects of that rite. So reasoned decaying churches in the third century; and since baptism is a saving ordinance, as they now began to hold, the infant must be baptized or lost, in case of death. Thus Infant Baptism was born, an heir of darkness.

3. "Baptism or death" was the strange condition of favor offered by a Catholic potentate. Baptism or damnation said the Catholic priests. But there is a sick man who cannot be baptized. He is about to die. Water or fire, say the priests. But water for baptism is out of the question—then have water in any form; if the sick man cannot be applied to the water, apply the water to him. Thus, under the shadow of doom, the rite of baptism was displaced, in case of serious sickness, by the absurd and meaningless innovation of Pouring and Sprinkling.

We shall further trace the rise and expansion of Romanism in the next issue.

OUR readers will do us a service if they will let us know if they have any reason to question the reliability of our advertisers. We try to keep out frauds; and we do keep out a good many that get in other Baptist papers.

ANOTHER Mexico church, Toluca, has become self-supporting, and a Mexico Association has decided to support a missionary within its bounds. This has the ring of true progress. An orphanage has been opened also at Toluca.

THERE may be people who do not know that most of the forms and distinguishing tenets of Pedobaptist churches are branches of one stock—the Roman Catholic church. To these it is necessary to say that a sketch of the origin and development of the Roman Catholic church is the one means of showing the origin and development of these unscriptural doctrines. That is a pungent treatment of the subject from a scholarly pen in another column on this page.

THE following from the Orphans' Friend, Feb. 8th, is enough to create overwhelming opposition to the annual State appropriation of $10,000 to that institution. It not only admits that the Asylum is not controlled by the State and is controlled by the Masons, but also declares that it is denominational:

"But the point at issue seems to be chiefly that the Oxford Orphan Asylum is not controlled by the State, is denominational, and has as its supporters the strong order of Masons. Suppose the facts are true—and they are, what material effect should this have? The State has no Orphan Asylum of its own, which is an unfortunate thing, and so it must necessarily care for its orphans."

The efforts of the editor of the RECORDER to prevent denominational direction of this Asylum are well known. In despair and disgust he severed his connection with it.

State-aid ought to be withdrawn from the Asylum or the Masons and Methodists ought not be permitted to run it.

We never dreamed that the organ of the Asylum would confess that it is denominational, and we rather think it will deny its own statement before the Assembly adjourns.

It would be far more sensible if the State will spend its money for an orphan's home owned and controlled by the State, as our Raleigh and Morganton Asylums are, than to spend it on reformatories for criminals or to give it to fallen women.

WE wonder how the brethren are getting on with the anti-saloon petitions. A great deal depends on getting a great number of petitions. Rev. D. H. Tuttle said to us last week: "If every church-member in the Assembly votes for the law, we will win!" If every church-member who has an opportunity to sign a petition, will sign it, we will win. There is yet time for those who have not made an effort in this direction to make one.

The proposed law is a local option law with the presumption against liquor; heretofore it has been for liquor. Thus, whereas under the present law, saloons are run until the citizens vote them closed; under the proposed law the saloons will be closed until the citizens of a community sign a petition and vote them opened. It is a poor rule that will not work both ways.

It will be a great pity, if we come so near gaining this step on the saloons and then fail to gain it. But we cannot win unless the Christian people of North Carolina make themselves felt. Send in petitions. If you do not think it wise to send them to your representatives, send them to Hon. Geo. H. Burnham, Raleigh, N. C.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

An abundance of hail and snow put rubber shoes at a premium in Oxford last week. It was court-week, too, but few people were present. Court crowds are growing smaller everywhere, and this is a good sign: it is one of the blessings that has come out of "hard times." Many men would litigate if they only had the money, and in most instances would be no better off than if they had remained out of law. One of the heaviest taxes the people have to bear is the expense of our courts. The cost of trying and punishing petty thieves and other habitual law breakers is probably more than is paid for tariffs.

The business of Oxford is better than it has been for the last five years. There are few, if any, vacant stores, and no unoccupied dwellings. The tobacco trade has been abundant, and where the quality is good the prices have been high. The warehousemen were somewhat exercised over some legislation in regard to the selling of tobacco.

Bro. Frank Handcock, Cashier of the Bank of Granville, says the new church will be completed during the present year.

The next thing, then, will be for the Convention of '96 to meet in Oxford. If this does not happen, the Oxford brethren will be disappointed.

Bro. Hobgood is in fine spirits in reference to his school. This is his best session for several years. Some of the business men of the town are showing new interest in the school, and we hope soon to be able to tell the public some interesting facts in relation to it.

Bro. Marsh looks as though he had been taking the "elixir of youth." His health is fine, and he talks with his usual interest about all of our denominational affairs. Two years ago he told me he had stopped the use of tobacco. I, of course, thought before this I should be called on to divide tobacco with him as heretofore, but not so; he has quit, sure enough, and is thoroughly master of himself in this particular. A man who can govern himself is prepared to influence and direct others.

Bro. Stradley is full of work, and seems to be really encouraged in the progress his churches are making. He has recently been called to Mt. Zion, one of the best country churches in that section.

WILSON.

I felt when I reached Wilson the other day like taking off my hat to Bro. Mundy and his little band of brethren and sisters. When I was there just twelve months ago, they had an old church somewhere in the town, I do not know where, for I did not see it. A member of another denomination said to me then, "The Baptists cannot hope to do much till they get a better house." I do not think any one out of Wilson could better appreciate the change I found than myself. On one of the nicest lots, in the most desirable portion of the town, stands a handsome brick church which I judge will seat comfortably about five hundred people. The construction of the building is in accordance with the best and most improved plans of architecture—pulpit and baptistery just as they want them, handsome stained glass windows, walls now ready for paper, or the last coat of plaster as they may choose. At present they are using the old seats, but they hope to get others soon. If they only had nice circular benches, such as they could get cheap from Kramer Bros. & Co. of Elizabeth City, there would be no handsomer little church in North Carolina. It is really interesting to hear the brethren discuss how this house was built. The brethren say Dr. Mundy did it. On the streets Bro. Mundy will say the brethren did it. But if you will get the Doctor in doors and get the truth out of him, he will say the sisters, the best in the world, built the church, and without them it could never have been done. Any way, it is there, and will be a monument to the industry and good business sense of the pastor and the brethren, as well as show what a few people who are willing to sacrifice can do for the sake of the Master.

NOTES.

Bro. J. H. Edwards of Fayetteville: "My work is getting on well. The congregations are larger than ever before. My young people's meeting is making progress in the right direction. I have no patience with any national organization for our young people. I want local organization for the benefit it will be to the church and our State Convention."

Bro. Pulliam has just entered on his work at Smithfield. He is an intelligent, sprightly brother, and the Association is fortunate in securing him. He did mission work successfully in the West for several years. I have not talked with any one who has a larger store of interesting knowledge about the great West than Bro. Pulliam. He told me enough about elk, mouse, deer, fish and bear to make a good sized book. He ought to write this for the Youth's Companion, or for the "home circle" of the RECORDER.

Bro. W. B. Shaw, whom the Governor appointed Solicitor in the Third district, is sustaining his reputation as a first-class lawyer in his new relations.

Early Friday morning I started out for some calls on the brethren in Rocky Mount. The ice was at its best, and soon I found I was measuring off the town in six-feet lengths. I left for home at once. A skinless elbow and a sprained wrist reminds me that I didn't get away quite soon enough.

....There are 126 children at our Orphanage and none sick. Do not forget them this trying season.

....Rev. W. B. Harrell has accepted a call to Baptist Chapel, Sampson county, says the N. C. Baptist.

....We regret to announce the death of the father of Rev. J. F. Love, which occurred at Elizabeth City.

....Mr. J. N. Tolar succeeds Mr. Snider as marshal at Wake Forest anniversary, the latter having gone home.

....Col. J. S. Carr has recently given $10,000 to the proposed American Methodist University at Washington, D. C.

....Rev. Jno. R. Respass, at one time very prominent in our denomination, died recently at his home in Butler, Ga.

....Rev. J. L. White writes from Macon, Ga.: "Our reception has been very cordial. Great church with great possibilities."

....Rev. N. R. Pittman, a well known North Carolinian, of Patee Park Baptist church, St. Joseph, Md., has resigned.

....Rev. J. H. Vernon is now out of danger. Rev. A. H. Porter has been called to Bro. Vernon's former pastorate, Pollocksville.

....Rev. J. K. Fant of Littleton has filled out his North Carolina field and, much to their content, will not return to South Carolina.

....Rev. J. A. McKaughan writes from Enfield: "My work is progressing well. Have good congregations. The RECORDER gets better and better."

....A new church has been organized with sixty-eight members at Kwang Si, China. It is the first Christian church organized in that province.

....The Biltmore church will be supplied three months by Rev. J. T. Betts of the Asheville French Broad church, which he continues to serve acceptably.

....We are glad to announce that Prof. Meserve of Shaw University has decided not to accept the position of Special Agent of the Indian Rights Association.

....Certain Tennessee Methodists have organized an American Methodist church. Their polity is more like ours. They have an organ, the American Methodist.

....Rev. W. B. Crumpton has retired from the Alabama Baptist. Rev. O. L. Hailey has accepted a position as associate editor of the Baptist Flag of St. Louis.

....There are four Baptist churches in Raleigh, four in Durham, three in Wilmington (Rev. J. B. Harrell being pastor of the new church), three in Asheville, two in Winston, and two in Charlotte.

....Davidson College has recently come into a large addition to its endowment. Davidson is not surpassed by any institution in this State, and it deserves hearty support at the hands of the Presbyterians.

....The condition of Mrs. J. Q. Adams, whose serious illness we noted last week, is very much improved, we are glad to be able to state. She is now convalescent.—Wadesboro Messenger and Intelligencer.

....Missionaries W. B. Bagby and J. J. Taylor, and a business man, Brother L. C. Irvine, have invested $10,000 in a good house of worship in Rio, Brazil. The money was given especially for this purpose.

....Rev. C. V. Brooks lectured for us Hector's Creek church, Jan. 26th, at night, on Foreign Missions. Dr. Taylor has been invited to lecture for us at the Academy, Feb. 15th. New students continue to enter.—J. A. Campbell.

....Miss Alberta Newton, the faithful young Christian who faces the hardest and most dangerous of mission fields, in order to serve her Master whom her parents died serving, is living with "the Pinnocks at Awyaw," says the F. M. Journal.

....It will be to our mutual advantage if the pastors will urge their people to take advantage of our offer of the RECORDER from Jan. 9th to May 10th for fifty cents; this is less than three cents a week. Who cannot afford that! One cent extra, and we send an Almanac, a copy of which every Baptist ought to hang by his fireside.

....Rev. J. B. Solomon, A. M., D. D., has our thanks for an admirable treatise of about one hundred pages on Divine Inspiration. It is published by the Baptist Book Concern. Single copy, 25 cents.

....When any defender of State aid pleads that "the Baptists are trying to tear down the University," ask him for arguments. If it were possible to defend State-aid fairly, it would have been done long ago.

....Mr. Rowland F. Beasley of the Wake Forest 1894 Class, editor of the Journal at Monroe, and Miss Ellie, daughter of Mr. J. M. Stewart of Monroe, were recently united in marriage by Pastor Moore. We wish them well.

....Secretary O. L. Stringfield gets more and more in earnest with his work. When the people realize that the Woman's College is chiefly a work of God, as Bro. Stringfield realizes it, it will not be hard to equip and endow it as it ought to be.

....We thank the following brethren for new subscribers: J. J. McLendon, T. R. Walker, C. W. Blanchard, N. S. Jones, O. C. Horton, C. S. Caswell, J. I. Lennon, W. C. Coffey, and Sister Sarah Haywood, who also remits for Foreign Missions.

....The West Raleigh Baptist church is expecting to begin protracted services on next Sunday night. Rev. J. F. Love is expected on the 18th. I desire to ask the prayerful interest of God's people in this special work.—A. D. Hunter, Pastor.

....Bro C. L. Haywood, who graduated at Wake Forest College in 1892, afterwards assisting in the Raleigh Male Academy and also in the RECORDER office, has received license to practice pharmacy. We wish him the success that his diligence deserves.

... Bro. Jno. I. Lennon of Lyons, Ga., sends us three subscribers from Georgia, and informs us that Elder J. A. Smith of Fair Bluff, N. C., has just closed a series of interesting and profitable sermons at Lyons, and has gone on a similar mission to Rose, Florida.

....Bro. J. B. Bostic, agent of the Gospel Mission, reports having handled $1,465 63 in 1894 for the following missionaries: D. W. Herring, T. L. Blalock, G. P. Bostic and wife, and W. E. Crocker. Other money has been sent direct, especially that for the support of Sister Fannie S. Knight.

....Rev. T. U. Faucett died at his home in Oxford, N. C., a few days ago of paralysis. He was at the time of his death principal of the Presbyterian Seminary, in which he has had many years of successful work. He was a man of strong character, conservative, and a most devout and zealous Christian.

....With the RECORDER at fifty cents for nineteen weeks, running a series of articles especially designed to indoctrinate, there can be no excuse for weak memberships any longer. Remember we have an extra supply of last issue and this issue, in order that new subscribers may get the benefit of the entire series. If the money is not convenient, we will send the paper on any pastor's security.

....Rev. O. C. Horton writes: "Had a good prayer meeting and ordination service last night. Rev. J. F. McDuffie aided me in ordaining brethren J. W. Cameron and W. O. Stone to fill the office of deacon in East Durham Baptist church. Snow began to fall here about the hour for church going, but it did not keep all our people away from the house of the Lord."

....Rev. J. C. Hiden, pastor of Grove Avenue Baptist church, Richmond, Va., has been elected by the Faculty of Furman University, Greenville, S. C., to preach the commencement sermon next June. Bro. Hiden was, for some six years, a resident of Greenville, where he was pastor of the First Baptist church, and where he also taught Homiletics in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

....Rev. C. J. F. Anderson of Carthage writes: "Rev. C. V. Brooks of Jonesboro spent last Sunday in Carthage and favored my people with an interesting talk on Missions at our evening service. Bro. Brooks is a consecrated young worker. He expects to attend the Seminary next fall. The RECORDER continues to improve. Your articles on 'Origin of Baptist Churches' are excellent. They should be read by every Baptist in the State."

....The Wake Forest Student for January is just out, the editors having been delayed by examinations. It is a good number. "The Science of Language" by Prof. Gorrell is valuable. Rev. S. J. Porter writes of "Life in Brazil" from interesting experience. There is also some dialect, a reverie, an article of literary research, a narrative and more verse than we have ever seen in one number of the Student. The various departments by Messrs. Beasley, Buxton, Moore, Cornwell and Briggs are creditably edited.

....If the General Assembly will take steps toward having executed our present laws pertaining to public institutions, several investigation bills may be tabled and valuable time saved. Chap. 424, sec. 1, of the Public Laws of North Carolina reads: "That the Governor and other State officers, the superintendents of the various State institutions . . . that receive funds from the State . . . shall furnish to this General Assembly, and to each succeeding General Assembly a full and complete list of the names of superintendents or heads of their respective departments, assistants, secretaries, clerks, laborers and employees of whatever kind, together with the annual or monthly salaries of each." Section 2 provides that superintendents failing to so report within ten days after the assembling of the Legislature, shall forfeit and pay twenty-five dollars for each day of delay in excess of ten days. The law ought to be amended so as to require specific enumeration of the inmates and beneficiaries of these institutions.

....Rev. J. M. Carroll has resigned his position of Texas Superintendent of Missions, and has been succeeded by Rev. M. D. Early.

....Rev. A. Cree, Jr., recently held a meeting in Orange county near Chapel Hill, which was the occasion of thirty-two conversions.

....We have endured the "My First Sermon" symposium with all patience. Now comes the Baptist and Reflector more practically with a symposium of "How I Prepare my Sermons." Some of the writers are very mechanical; most, however, rely on God, saying that their sermons grow, instead of being made or prepared.

....Brown University professors and graduate students wear caps and gowns. The caps of Doctors of Divinity are lined with white, those of Doctors of Laws are all brown. We grant that it is time Doctors of Divinity were doing something to distinguish them from ordinary folk. However, from our standpoint, it is highly idiotic for Doctors of Divinity, of Laws, graduates or freshmen to wear either caps or gowns.

....We are pained to announce the death of Dr. L. C. Smith of Durham, N. C. Bro. Smith has been a great sufferer for many years. And while death is sad under all circumstances, we feel that in our brother's case it has been the exchanging of a life of pain and suffering for the rest which is promised to the faithful. Bro. Smith was the father of Prof. C. L. Smith whom many of our readers will remember as once connected with the RECORDER.

....We must run up to seven thousand subscribers. We know we can, if you, pastors especially, but any reader who will, cooperate with us. It will build up any community for Baptists, if the series of articles that we have arranged can be disseminated among its residents, no one is too poor to pay fifty cents for the RECORDER from January 9th to May 15th. Begin subscriptions with January 9th, as not one of the articles should be missed.

....The Caucasian prints more than a column of statements by way of rejoinder to our last week remarks. Here is a sample of them that makes a reply from anybody superfluous: "We might say that Dr. Taylor's articles have been answered several times." One who makes this statement is capable of saying anything and sticking to it. Like all the other statements in the editorial, no attempt to produce fact or evidence or logic is made to prove it.

....The farcical "boys' brigades" have been organized in one thousand Baptist churches in the United States. They propose now to organize the W. B. B. A.—United Boys' Brigade of America—and publish a paper, the Knapsack. Headquarters, Chicago, of course. Now let them get up a Bible Reader's Calendar and exchange it for advertising. First, it was organize all the young people, then all the Baptist young people, then all the Southern Baptist young people, and now all the Baptist young people who are boys,—and we might add, whose parents and pastors are wanting of common sense.

....Rev. Dr. Robert Ryland, who will be ninety years old on the fourteenth of March, has been delivering a course of lectures before the students of the Bible and Normal Institute, under the care of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, at Memphis, Tenn., and now Principal Traver proposes that, in honor of a man of such mark and so much beloved by them, Southern Baptists endow a lectureship in the same school to be called by his name. A worthier subject could not be proposed. Dr. Ryland is the nestor of Southern Baptists; there have been but few Baptists that can be compared to him.

....In Professors Sledd and Gorrell Wake Forest College has representatives who are going to command recognition as leaders in their branches. Under them, study of the English, French and German languages at Wake Forest has been so stimulated that we are becoming accustomed to hear the students express more interest in these branches than ever before. In a recent News and Observer letter from Wake Forest, it was stated that these professors are editing a work for a leading school-book publisher. Professor Sledd has frequently been offered work of this and like nature, and we are glad to know that the addition of Professor Gorrell to the faculty enables him to partly engage in such pursuits.

....A preliminary meeting of the "Southern Association of Charities for Children," was held at Clinton, S. C., January 23rd. Rev. J. L. Vass, of the Connie Maxwell Orphanage, was elected President, J. H. Mills, of the Thomasville, N. C. (Baptist) Orphanage, Secretary, and W. H. Jacobs, of the Thornwell, Clinton (Presbyterian), chairman of Committee of Arrangements. The meeting of the Association will be held June 4–6, next. Orphanages, reformatories, industrial schools, children's hospitals, and other charitable institutions will be represented. Four sessions a day will be held, and interesting topics discussed. This organization will co-operate with the National Conference of Charities.—Baptist Courier.

The Orphans' Friend of last week gives its readers to understand that none but children of Baptist parents are received at our Thomasville Orphanage. This is by no means correct. There are children in our Orphanage to-day whose parents were not members of Baptist churches, and who are themselves too young to belong to any church. But even if this were not so, the plea that discontinuance of the State appropriation would turn out one hundred children upon an "unfeeling world," will not hold: 1st, the Methodists would begin to take care of their own; 2nd, the Asylum would use its $3,345 surplus; 3rd, the Masons would enlarge their gifts, and cut expenses from $100 per orphan to sixty dollars per orphan (which is reasonable); 4th, the State would run an asylum of its own or add an annex to the asylums for children which it now has.

....Very recently Father Chiniquy, who has spent the last forty years of his life denouncing Romanism, was very ill, and there seemed to be little prospect of recovery. When breath was thought to be leaving his body a woman appeared at his bedside with a paper ready for signature which ran as follows: "To answer a desire of my friends which have at heart my good and that of my family, I authorize Mrs. —— to bring a Jesuit here. These gentlemen offer to help me through interest for me and mine. Let them come and I will receive them." Father Chiniquy was strong enough to resist the plotters and baffled their attempt to secure a recantation of his Protestantism. He replied that what he wanted now was "Jesus not Jesuits." Though eighty-five years old he has recovered and is very indignant at thus being attacked.—Exchange.

....We are glad to note evidences of the high esteem in which our Wilson brethren and sisters hold their admirable pastor, Dr. Mundy. That Dr. Mundy loves Wilson is witnessed by his refusal to be tempted away. The following is taken from the Wilson Mirror: "The newspapers have had it—the tongue or gossip repeated and our people were concerned—that Dr. Mundy had been called from Wilson to the pastorate of the Baptist church at Henderson. A spontaneous meeting was held in the Baptist church Monday night, in which not only the members of the Baptist church, but citizens of other religious belief participated, and after expressions of love and respect for the Doctor, and much regret at anything looking like taking him from our midst, a strong protest against his leaving was passed by a rising vote, and a committee was appointed to wait on the Doctor and invite him to come before the meeting. He did so, and in response to the protest said he should write to his Henderson brethren that he could not leave Wilson. He stated that what he wanted was the cordial co-operation of the church in the work for the cause of Christ, and appreciation of his work by the people—this having been assured him, he could not turn away from a people whom he had learned to love. Dr. Mundy has done a grand work already in Wilson. He came December, 1893, and began the work of building up the church and a new house of worship. With six hundred dollars in sight, a new house has been built, which could not be built under contract for $3,500. For courteous, gentlemanly bearing, deep learning and undoubted piety and consecration, Dr. Mundy has few equals and no superior in the State, and the people of Wilson, to say nothing of his church, are to be congratulated on retaining him—and it is to be hoped the promise of co operation and cordial support will be accorded him in his work amongst us."

Seminary Letter.

Dear Recorder:—We still have plenty of snow in these parts, but we are glad to say that examinations for this time are well nigh past, but whether we have all "passed" or not remains to be seen. Only the Old Testament examination remains, and that will take place next Tuesday, the 5th inst. Four North Carolina men are in the Old Testament, and they are striving manfully to be ready for the contest next Tuesday. If we are not mistaken, we have heard some of them make mention of a chronological chart or so which furnishes a very savory (?) mental pabulum indeed. We tender our sympathy. We have "been there."

Yesterday, February 1st, was "Missionary Day." The usual report from the various missions in the city were made. The Seminary students do work in six mission schools, and reach about a thousand children every Sunday. All of them are in fine condition at present—the greatest need being more money to enlarge the work.

Correspondence is also kept up between the students and the missionaries on the mission fields. Yesterday very encouraging and soul-stirring letters were read from brethren Bagby of Brazil, Simmons of China, and Smith of Africa. The central thought in all these letters is that "the field is already white unto the harvest," and upon this they make an earnest appeal for reinforcements.

Let every Baptist in North Carolina who reads these lines think of this. Let them remember also that more than sixty men and women are asking our Board to send them, and then let them consider their responsibility in the matter. Verily may it be said of all Christians now what Mordecai said to Esther: "And who knoweth whether thou art not come into the kingdom for such a time as this."

The regular monthly essay was read yesterday by Bro. E. W. Marshall of Georgia—his subject, "Work among the Negroes of the South." Suffice it to say that it was a strong and conservative presentation of the facts as to what has been and is being done for this race by both the North and the South. He closed by an appeal to us to do yet more toward the amelioration of the condition of the Negro, with some valuable suggestions as to how this can perhaps best be done. The essay called forth responses from both professors and students.

News has just reached us that Bro. W. M. Gilmore has been called to Brunswick, Ga., and has accepted. We are sorry some North Carolina church did not capture him during his sojourn in North Carolina last fall. However, we wish him abundant success in his new field.

The Sunday-school workers of Kentucky will hold a conference Feb. 5, 6 and 7, in Warren Memorial Presbyterian church of this city, and a number of distinguished Sunday-school workers are expected to be present. Our Dr. Dargan is on the program. We notice, also, the name of B. F. Jacobs of Chicago, who is a Baptist and perhaps the greatest Sunday-school worker in our country. He is to address the Conference Thursday evening next on "This City's Unreached, and How We can Help Them." More at another time. Very truly,

R. G. KENDRICK, JR.

Mecklenburg and Cabarrus.

Dear Recorder:—Please allow me a short space in your valuable paper, which I enjoy reading more than all others. I am a young Baptist, and a member at Independence Hill church, which is in quite a flourishing condition under the able and zealous pastorate of Rev. D. W. Thomasson, who has been called back for another year.

The Union Meeting of Mecklenburg and Cabarrus Association which was to held at our church Friday before the fifth Sunday in December, was a complete failure owing to tha extremely inclement weather.

Rev. Dr. Pritchard and Rev. Mr. Pruett from Charlotte came up Friday morning, but left for home Saturday correctly anticipating severe weather.

The few delegates present concluded to postpone the meeting until Friday before the fifth Sunday in March. We hope to have the pleasure or seeing all the delegates, and also of hearing Dr. Pritchard preach as we anticipated. To all others who may wish to be present then, we extend a hearty welcome.

Best wishes for the RECORDER.

Your friend,

BESSIE S. ABERNETHY.

Croft, Feb. 4, 1895.

Bro. Jones Endorsed.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Allow me a word on the line which Bro. N. S. Jones mentioned in the last RECORDER in regard to evangelistic work.

The time has not, nor ever will come, when the people need anything more simple and plain than the pure Word of God. But the time has come when the people, yea, even some churches, are calling for a gospel that will please the ears of the masses, and with results that are painful to see. I do believe this work of preaching and carrying the gospel to the destitute parts of our own State could best be done by the pastors, and they should be men who are willing to work for the salvation of souls and not for money nor public fame.

If we could have a meeting of pastors and laymen of certain sections, and discuss the matter and pray over it, I believe a great good would be accomplished. I venture to suggest that the pastors and laymen of the middle section of our State meet at Winston in the early summer—say June, and see if we can't arrange to do a great deal of missionary or evangelistic work without calling for pay. Some of us may have one vacant Sunday in each month, which might be well spent in this work. I would like to join in this work. J. E. GREENE.

Seaside Chautauqua.

A movement is on foot to organize a summer school for our Baptist Sunday-school teachers and others who may wish to have a week of profit and pleasure.

Most of us are so far away that it is too expensive to go to Mt. Vernon Springs to our State Chautauqua, and, therefore, we purpose holding a Chautauqua at Smyrna about the last of June or the first of July—probably just after the Teachers' Assembly at Morehead City.

Smyrna is a little village on Core Sound fifteen miles by water from Beaufort. It is on the mainland, just north of Cape Lookout.

During the session of the Chautauqua a sailboat will meet the afternoon train at Morehead City to take passengers to Smyrna.

As there is no hotel there, board and lodging will be obtained in private families.

Some of the features of the occasion will be fish, clams, etc., in abundance; sailing on Jarrett's Bay or Core Sound; fishing; a trip every afternoon to the beach; an excursion to Cape Lookout Lighthouse and Life Saving Station; a peep at the big ocean fisheries at Cape Lookout; plenty of wild banker ponies on the banks opposite Smyrna; we will take a look at them and maybe see a regular pony penning which comes off about that time, which item alone would be worth a trip from Raleigh to see; and best of all a rich spiritual feast with instruction in the best methods of Bible study and teaching.

The number that can be entertained is limited. Some have already spoken for entertainment. The people of Smyrna agree to entertain us for the actual cost of the entertainment. The railroad fare will be announced later, as will also the program. The table fare and lodging will not be hotel fare nor hotel price. The people give us their homes and their sailboats at cost.

The whole cost from Morehead to Smyrna and return, with a week spent there, two trips to the ocean, an hour's sail on three afternoons, and a trip to the lighthouse, all included, will be only $3.50. Here are some of the items: Morehead to Smyrna and return, 50c.; board and lodging, per day, 40c.; to the ocean and return, 10c.; to lighthouse and return, 25c.; sailing, per hour, 5c.; fishing for two hours or more, 4c. per hour. The boats used will be sharpies, like those used at Morehead, many of which are owned by our Baptist brethren in eastern Carteret. If you wish to attend, please drop me a postal. More later. B. W. SPILMAN.

A Good Book.

The Argument for Christianity. By Rev. Geo. C. Lorimer, D. D. 12mo, 480 pp. Price $2.00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

So long as Christianity is a thing of growth, so long as

> The thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns, and the ground of those who doubt or oppose is constantly shifting, so long will there be a demand for apologetics in the line of its defense. To put into a popular form, and yet with due accuracy of statement, such an apologetic has been the aim of the eloquent author of this volume. There have been too, in the recent completion of a century of missions, a summing up of results, and in the larger knowledge of the ethnic faiths, a wider opportunity for the comparison of the religion of Jesus Christ therewith. In both of these directions Dr. Lorimer has made full use of his opportunities, and amid much that is old has introduced much which both as to matter and method is new.

The contents of the chapters will give some idea as to the scope of the book: Christianity and its Argument; The Argument from History; The Argument from Christ; from Testimony; from Miracles; from Prophecy; from Humanity; from Achievement; from Concession, and Comparison—these are the headings of the chapters in which the discussion is embodied. With a fullness of treatment, a fairness of view, a wealth of illustration, and copiousness of reference to requisite authorities, at once admirable and convincing, Dr. Lorimer proceeds under these heads to marshall all his forces for the exposition and defense of the Faith whose disciple he is.

One who has read the MS. said of the Argument:

"It is conservative, strong and well founded on all points vital to the Christian system, and at the same time is fair and even generous in its treatment of opposing views. This is well illustrated in its treatment of Evolution and of historic criticism.

"It presents a method of treatment at once clear, exhaustive, and discriminating, which gives a view of the whole field covered as correct as it is broad.

"It is characterized by marked breadth of reading, as will be seen in the number and appositeness of its citations, which makes the volume remarkably rich in the literature of the subjects discussed.

"It is marked by a vivacity and eloquence of style which makes the book as readable and enjoyable as it is profitable."

We believe the general verdict will corroborate this reader's opinion, and decide in addition that not for a long time have the publishers issued a book of greater credit to themselves or one likely to be of greater worth to the Christian public.

The form of the book is excellent, with good paper, binding, and press work. Copious indexes put one at once in command of its contents, and will render it as valuable for a book of reference as otherwise it will be for perusal. Anything short of a very large circulation will be less than its worth deserves.

God's Remedy for Hard Times.

Here it is. Look at it. Study it for yourself. This passage refers primarily to temporal things, and not to spiritual things.

God challenges His people who had neglected His worship to "prove Him" by returning to their duty and paying their tithes in full, and see if He would not give them abundant prosperity.

He is the same yesterday, to day and forever. He is the same to His people in all ages. This is His remedy for hard times. Are you a Baptist and doubt this? Try it honestly and see if He is not true to His word.

Malachi 3: 10—"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of host, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that in there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of host. And all nations shall call you blessed, for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of host."

"Follow, follow, I would follow Jesus, Anywhere, everywhere, I would follow on,"

and follow him into Jordan. Yes, I should like when the "day dawns and the shadows fled away," to be found with my footsteps planted as closely to his blessed footsteps as I can. Oh, believing soul, do not let any ecclesiastical invention, any church's addition, fashion or form, any speculative doctrine or false teaching, interfere with your following the footsteps of your Lord and Saviour, and as plainly as the footsteps of Lucy Gray in Wordsworth, were tracked across the moor as she that snowy night had "crossed the wild," as plainly are to be discerned the footsteps of Christ on Jordan's banks into Jordan's bed, there to be baptized. Put your footprints into his, and you must go right for you cannot go wrong. On soul and conscience I frankly tell you I would not like to meet him without having followed his injunction and example and been baptized into the Blessed Tureefold Name!

Obedience is blessing to baptizer and baptized. Come, you converted heathen, churchly or non-churchly, white or black, sprinkled or non-sprinkled, command your chariot this night to stand still, and step down with me "both into the water," and sing as we sang last Wednesday and Thursday nights, when twenty five "men and women" were buried with Christ in the water grave:

"Help me, dear Saviour, Thee to own,
And ever follow Thee,
And when Thou sittest on Thy throne,
Do Thou remember me."

The Immigration Movement.

BY REV. J. B. SOLOMON, D. D.

I see a good deal in the secular papers in regard to the promotion of immigration into the Southern States, and the best means to effect it. In regard to this movement I wish to offer a few thoughts.

1. That there are thousands, nay hundreds of thousands of acres of land in the Sunny South which are entirely unproductive now, but which might be made productive, and thus enhance to an indefinite extent the pecuniary wealth of the Southern country, is readily granted. To allow these lands to lie uncultivated, and therefore unproductive, does seem unwise, especially when we consider the overcrowded condition of the old States of Europe and of Asia. These lands seem to demand something on the part of people to introduce the labor necessary to their cultivation.

Then, again, the minerals embedded in the soil—iron, coal, copper, silver, gold—need the hand of the skilful miner to bring into market and make them profitable.

Again: the rich swamp lands found in nearly if not all the Southern States need the skilful ditcher to drain off the waters which now render them useless, but which by proper drainage and culture would yield millions of dollars annually, and thereby enrich the country.

I need not add the immense pecuniary benefit that would arise from the establishment and operation of manufacturing industries which could be put into successful and profitable existence all through the South country.

All these considerations favor and strongly appeal to the people for labor, and for such labor as the South, in its present state seems unprepared, if not unable, to furnish. Hence, it must be imported from abroad. And I freely concede that, if we can procure the right kind of laborers, it would be, perhaps, wise to get them. But that is a serious and important question. Judging from the facts prevalent in the Northern and Western States, where there are millions of these imported laborers, it will be a hazardous undertaking, to say the least of it. While these foreign laborers have developed the mineral wealth of those sections in which we find them, and have added to its mechanical values inconceivable wealth, they have, at the same time, rendered that wealth uncertain. It is in their power, as the experience of the last ten or fifteen years has proved, to make the fortunes they have helped to amass of a very uncertain character. Nor is there any certainty what the morrow may develop in the same direction.

I am not now saying whether they have or have not just cause. The question is simply one of fact, and the adage is as true as it is old that "facts are stubborn things." Besides rendering values uncertain, and thereby deranging all commercial interests, the moral effects of such laborers as fill nearly every branch of industry in the sections of our country named above are sad. Moral barriers are broken down which otherwise restrain our citizens, and whatever may promise success to their purposes, whether rapine, murder, incendiarism, or what not, becomes proper and commendable in their esteem. No social or legal restraints avail anything to curb their passions. Honesty, virtue, integrity, philanthropy, patriotism, or whatever else tends to regulate civil or social life, is thrown to the winds, and madness worse than barbarism rules the hour. So far as I am informed, all the strikes and riots, and murders growing out of them, are concocted, planned and led by foreigners, and guided or controlled by a certain, so called religious (?) element of which nearly all these immigrant laborers are a part.

Another fact to be considered is, that our laws are so unwise that any of these foreigners are invested with the right of franchise within a short time after landing upon our shores. Hence, although they may not be able to read a word of English, and may have no more knowledge of the genius of our civil polity than a child twelve years of age, one of their votes can offset the vote of the wisest man in the nation, though he be the grandson of a Revolutionary soldier. I say emphatically and after years of attention, under circumstances that gave me an opportunity to judge, these immigrant laborers are a most alarming menace to our institutions, civil and religious. In presence of this, Protection and Free Trade dwindle into insignificance.

In addition to all this, but few of the immigrant laborers are farmers, nearly all are miners or low-class mechanics. And it is a notable fact that during the terrible strife of last year, growing out of the Pulman trouble, there was hardly any disturbance in the South except at Birmingham, Ala., and foreign laborers were the disturbing element there. Practically, as far at least as my observation has extended, these foreign laborers are exceedingly illiterate, and completely under the control of the Jesuit priesthood.

Another fact worthy of serious thought is that it will prove a dangerous policy to undertake to amalgamate these ignorant foreigners with the Negroes of the South. Should they be placed on the same social or industrial scale, jointly they would constitute an element that will dominate the Southern States politically and industrially, and, hence, financially. Combined, they will have entire control of all your elective interests, legislative and judicial. Are the Southern people prepared for such a state of things? I hope not. Then they must avoid the course that leads to it. "Oppose evil in the beginnings" is a wise maxim.

On the other hand, should the colored people of the South and the foreign laborers refuse to work together, the results will be equally disastrous and in a shorter time. The foreigner will be to the colored man an intruder, and the intrusion is likely to be resented in a variety of ways. The colored man, whose father and grandfather cultivated these lands as slaves of a former generation, will hold, and justly too, the land owners responsible for the presence of these foreigners. What the influence of such a conclusion may be upon the Negro can be easily conceived. Certainly it will not cause him to have a more kindly feeling towards the children and grandchildren of the masters of his parents.

We may add to all this, that these laborers are largely of the anarchic stamp, and, as anarchists, are prepared to enter into any plot to disrupt society with a view to robbing the men who by industry and economy have accumulated more than they have by idleness and dissipation.

While I lived in Sharon, Pa., where there were a great many foreign laborers of a far higher type than the average, I learned one truth that to me is quite significant, viz., those laborers would not teach any boy or young man their trade except the sons of their fellow laborers or their own. No others could get a place as apprentice. But enough.

I would rather see the South financially poor, as it has been for thirty years, than to see it under the dominion of foreign laborers. For they are generally profoundly ignorant of American institutions, but know how to obey Leo XIII, through his vassals, the priests.

I suppose we may safely assert that seventy five per cent. of the whiskey distillers, the beer brewers and saloon keepers in our country are foreigners or their immediate descendants. In our great wisdom we sell the moral and social virtues, the happiness and life, the peace and dignity and prosperity of our land, by legislative enactment, State and National, to this foreign element of our population for money. Like Esau of old, we are selling our God given birthright for a "mess of pottage," and preparing the way for our children, like those of Esau, to be wanderers in the desert, not of sand and thistle, but of hopes, of prospects—in a word, of all that makes civil society prosperous, and home and home comforts possible.

Now put all these things together with all they necessarily involve, and then, in the presence of God and the bright and happy children at our hearthstone, what is our duty?

Thus far, the descendants of the joint blood of the old Cavaliers and Roundheads, who won our national freedom, have controlled the Southland. Will they now surrender that control into others' hands. And, if so into whose? Examine, think, pray, then act.

There could be no fitter nor more interesting commemoration of the death of Robert Louis Stevenson than that made in McClure's Magazine for February. With pictures of Stevenson's South Sea life and home, and portraits of Stevenson extending from his babyhood to within a year of his death, and including a reproduction of the beautiful photograph by Sir Percy Shelley, is given, first, an account by a friend who saw him off from San Francisco, of his sailing to the South Sea and establishing himself in Samoa, and then tributes from his fellow-Scotchmen, and in some sort disciples, J. M. Barrie, S. R. Crockett, and Ian Maclaren. Intimately allied with him as these three writers were by nationality, vocation, and affectionate regard, their word on his death has an especial appositeness and value.

The Rev. William Bayard Hale, whose articles in The Forum on the religious condition of Middleboro and Fall River, Mass., attracted so much attention, has written for the February Forum an article on the religious condition of Westerly, R. I., entitled "A Religious Study of a Baptist Town." The article is of the common sensational order, and is not worth reading. Otherwise the magazine is above reproach.

Home Treatment for Cancer.

DR. BYE'S Balmy Oils, for cancer, is a positive and painless cure. Most cases are treated at home, without the services of a physician. Send for book telling what wonderful things are being done by simply anointing with oils. The combination is a secret; gives instant relief from pain, destroys the cancer microbes and restores the patient to health. Thousands of cancers, tumors, catarrh, ulcers, piles and malignant diseases cured in the last three years. If not afflicted, cut this out and send it to some suffering one. Address DR BYE, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Endowment.

Doubtless by this time many are anxious to know of the prospects for increasing the endowment of Wake Forest College are good. We give a bit of experience for their benefit.

The times were never closer in money matters for such an undertaking. From that standpoint it is discouraging. But the people are willing and ready to help beyond their ability. Sympathy with the call for increase of endowment is universal among our Baptist friends. More boys are preparing to go to Wake Forest in the territory we have canvassed than ever before. The people are praying and talking for the Institution. Some of them are really sacrificing for its claims. They are learning to speak of it as "our College." That in itself has a potency for good.

Will they give the needed endowment? Judge from their own language what they mean. A man who once gave one thousand dollars to the endowment of Wake Forest College, when he had filled out his pledges, handing them to me with tears in his eyes, said: "I grieve not for the sacrifice I have made, but because I cannot increase it a hundredfold. May God bless you with abundant success."

Another man who never had the advantage of regular College training, but is one of North Carolina's most successful business men, said: "I believe Wake Forest College has done more for the people of North Carolina than any other institution in its borders. To help supply it with what it needs is one of the first claims on the Baptists of the State."

Listen to this witness who gave out of a full heart: "I am a poor man and live on rented land. I put this amount of cash ($....) in the endowment freely, and pray that I may be able to duplicate it every year of my life." He has several boys at home. May they all enjoy the fruits of this sacrifice.

When a father was trying to decide how much he would pledge, two daughters, his only help to make it, spoke out with womanly courage, and said: "Make it .... dollars per year, father, and we will help you to work it out."

One cannot fail to be encouraged with such testimony, and we might continue to add to it till we filled the columns of the RECORDER; but, friends of the College, it will take something more than sympathy alone to do the work that is before us. The gifts are generally small of necessity. It will, therefore, take the united effort of all the Baptists of the State, giving according to their ability, to reach the goal of our undertaking. This alone will secure success in raising the endowment, and give us access to the largest patronage possible for the College.

The pastors and old students so far have rendered invaluable aid in giving us easy access to the people. Upon their assistance will continue to rest the certainty of our success.

C. W. BLANCHARD.

Cary, Jan. 31, 1895.

Literary.

In Scribner's Magazine for March, Prest. Andrews will begin a history of the last thirty years in the United States.

Harper's for February is every bit delightful—sketches, articles, stories long and short, and illustrations.

Dr. Parkhurst has coined a new word, and its aptness and clever construction are quite likely to make it famous. The eminent reformer's word is "Andromania," and of it he says: "There is an element in the feminine world that is suffering from what I shall venture to call 'Andromania.' The word is not an English one, for the reason, I suppose, that the English language makers never supposed that we should need such a term. It is constructed on the same principle as the word 'Anglomania,' which means a passionate aping of everything that is English. 'Andromania' means similarly a passionate aping of everything that is mannish." Dr. Parkhurst makes his new word serve as the title for his first article in the January issue of the The Ladies' Home Journal, and uses it for a vigorous treatment of the type of women for whom he invented it.

Important historical and biographical works, such as The Century's War Papers and its Life of Lincoln, are the result of capital as well as foresight. Upon the War Papers more than $100.000 was expended and the authors of the Lincoln life were paid $50,000 for the serial rights. Joseph Jefferson received $1,000 a month for his Autobiography, and the pictures which accompanied it cost even more. The leading authors like to have their best work appear in the leading magazines, and hence such periodicals as Harper's and The Century and Scribner's have their pick of ten thousand manuscripts a year. Their publishers are able to organize and send out costly expeditions, the results of which are often of world-wide importance and interest. The Century now has expeditions in various parts of the world pursuing investigations, the results of which, it is expected, will be no less important than were those of Mr. Kennan's famous journey through Siberia.—"The Lounger" in the Critic.

Donald Grant's Development. By J. Macdonald Oxley. 12mo. 256 pp. Price, $1. Philadelphia: Am. Bap. Pub. Society.

In this story the author has shown an evidence of the fact that out of the humblest surroundings rise some of our noblest men. Donald Grant was a poor boy, bright and ambitious, fond of books and study, and the narrative of his career both at school and university is very interesting. By his own efforts he obtained sufficient money to take him through the university. His success in the university debating society, skill in the college sports, and his interest in the formation of the young people's society in the church he attended, are all described in a real and telling way. His career shows how it is possible for a young man to enjoy the pleasures of college life without stepping aside from the path of uprightness, as is so often the case with the student of to day.

The North American Review for February opens with three timely articles on the currency question, which are bracketed together under the title of "The Financial Muddle." They are written by Secretary of Agriculture J. Sterling Morton, Representative William M. Springer, Chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, and Henry W. Cannon, President of the Chase National Bank of New York, and formerly Comptroller of the Currency. This important symposium is followed by a trenchant article on "Literature and the English Book Trade," from the pen of Ouida. A paper on "Politics and the Farmer," by the Hon. B. P. Clayton, President of the Farmers' National Congress, next claims our attention.

Circulation of Money.

As in the human body, so in the body politic and in the body ecclesiastical, health depends upon the circulation. A stagnation of giving will produce spiritual numbness and torpor. But a constant flow of benevolence brings untold blessing. Is not the following, by Rev. Arthur Edwards, admirable?

"Beneficence is a running stream. If cash flows out of a Christian man's pocket, it will almost miraculously flow in again, just as water rushes into a channel whose waters have to gush out. Many a good man's purse is like a siphon, the very emptying of which insures its refilling."—Home Field.

SUBJECT FOR FEBRUARY: MISSIONS IN SOUTHERN STATES.

"Enlarge the place of thy tent." Number of missionaries, 357. Laboring throughout the entire South in all destitute places: among Indians, Colored People, Foreign Population, the poor of large cities, the mountain regions, and out on the frontier.

STUDY TOPICS.—The many new industrial enterprises in the South attracting emigration—many people of many kinds. Let us not neglect the needs of their souls. The obligation resting on the highly favored to establish Sunday schools and churches in less favored localities. The publications of the Sunday-school Board of the S. B. C. important factors in the work.

The Week of Prayer.

The Week of Prayer for Missions, Jan. 6th to 12th, was a time of great spiritual enjoyment not only to the Baptist ladies of Raleigh, but also to many of the other denominations who joined with them and aided in the meetings. A number of highly interesting papers were presented during the week, and it will give us much pleasure to be able to give several of them in this column.—ED.

Encouraging Signs in Mexico.

An encouraging sign is the attitude of many prominent Mexicans toward Protestantism. They recognize it as the ally of liberty, the foe to tyranny, and teacher of the soundest morality. It is significant that a prominent literary man like Altamirano favors Protestantism; that a governor like General Arce wishes to see Protestant churches all over the State; that state and municipal officers attend examinations of our mission schools; the great reformer Juarez defended our faith, and President Diaz has accorded us interviews and given us always the full protection of the law. Such men know the history of our church in other lands and act accordingly.

To the Christian, the most hopeful sign in Mexico is the reception that has been accorded the Bible, tracts, and mission papers, even in parts where the minister has not gone. The writer has just returned from a four weeks' trip on horseback, which took him through a region into which no minister or missionary had yet penetrated; but the Scriptures and our leaflets had prepared the way, and in many places congregations had already been gathered, and we were besought to send ministers to carry on and perfect work thus marvelously begun.

The printed Gospel has again proved itself the very power of God, pulling down the strongholds of error and building on new foundations the everlasting walls of truth. This to me has been a most inspiring sign. As I talked for the first time with those Bible converts, it was inspiration—it was hope. This is God's work, not man's, and he will do it as and when he wills; but signs of promise are visible everywhere, and there is enough to urge us on to our best endeavor.—Rev. Hbbert W. Brown.

Mexican Patriots and Catholicism.

Mexican patriots have, by bitter experience, discovered the true inwardness of Rome. They now distinguish between Christianity and Roman Catholicism. President Diaz warns the nation to beware of the priesthood. Senor Mateos, in a speech recently delivered in the Senate, after sketching the growth of the nation during the last twenty years, said: "In the midst of this universal gladness there is one black spot—the Catholic priest." He spoke of "their iniquitous farming of tithes, alms, baptisms, and burials; the orgies of priests in their houses;" and of "other still more abominable vices," and declared that history shows that "all Catholic priests are enemies of our free institutions." These words were applauded, more or less enthusiastically, all over the Republic.—Hugh P. McCormick, Zacatecas, Mexico.

The Cities.

In Baltimore, New Orleans, Washington and St. Louis, the four largest cities in the bounds of the Convention, the Baptists constitute a small minority of the population. Louisville is the only city of the first class in the South where the Baptists are equal to other denominations. In cities of the next class, as Nashville, Memphis, Charleston, Savannah, Atlanta and Galveston, the numerical inferiority of our Baptist churches is in many of them painfully manifest. There are more than a hundred cities in the South where we ought, the coming year, were it possible to do so, to organize one or more churches and help them build places of worship.

Advice To Boys

Russell Sage

The great financier, gives the following good advice to boys, which parents might also read with profit:

"Boys, go to school as long as you can, and remember every hour spent in study in your youth will be worth money to you in after life. Read good books; make yourself acquainted with history; study the progress of nations and the careers of men who have made nations great.

"Study religion, science, statecraft and history. Learn to read intelligently, so that you can turn to practical use in after life the reading of your youth. Be sure you begin right. Do not waste time in reading trashy books."

Mr. Sage further says:

"The boy who is wanted in the business world of today must be educated. If his parents cannot afford to give him a college or a high school education he must learn to study without the aid of a teacher, in the early mornings before business begins, and in the evenings after business hours. It can no longer be truthfully said that an education is out of any one's reach."

This is the advice of a man who is one of the most conspicuous business successes of our time, and who has amassed one of the largest fortunes in America. It cannot possibly be charged that he is in the pay of THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER, and yet these words given as the conviction of a life of unusual observation and experience advises as strongly as words can that you hasten to accept the offer of The Observer and secure this greatest of popular educators, The Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The edition offered by The Observer fills every requirement of Mr. Sage's recipe for success. It is the only edition that is up to date. Who will be without these books now, when Ten Cents a day will secure them?

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

NEWS SUMMARY.

North Carolina.

A negro child burned to death at Mooresville the 4th.——The Supreme Court granted licenses to twenty-one law candidates last week. Most of them were prepared by Dr. Jno. Manning.——Gen. Rufus Barringer died at Charlotte the 3rd inst.——The Newbern Fair occurs the 20th inst.——Commissioner of Agriculture Jno. Robinson has resigned.——The Atlanta Exposition committee, consisting of several distinguished gentlemen, presented the claims of their enterprise before the State last week. They want $20,000.——Tryon St. Methodist church, Charlotte, has adopted the individual communion cups.——A destructive fire occured at Asheville the 8th inst., burning half a block.——A negro having been arrested at Durham for grossly insulting several ladies, was threatened with lynching the 8th.

In General.

One of the most general and severe of winter storms came upon this country from the Northwest last week, and swept across the Atlantic, delaying many vessels, some of which have not yet reported, and damaging early growths in Ireland and France. The mercury registered zero at Raleigh. In Georgia and Florida early fruits and plants were killed, but they can be replaced. In the North the suffering was extreme; in the West thousands of cattle perished. The loss of human life has not been fully reported.——The National Farmer's Alliance met in Raleigh last week. It revised its constitution with a view to preventing disintegration. It approved the usual platform. The attendance from other States was meagre, being less than fifty. A goodly number of North Carolinians were here. The corner-stone of a monument to the beloved Col. L. L. Polk was laid with fitting ceremony, the Masons participating. Mr. M. Page delivered the eulogy. The following officers were elected: President, J. F. Willetts, Kansas; Vice-Pres't, H. C. Snavely, Penn.; Sec. and Treas., D. P. Duncan, South Carolina.——A $100,000,000 bond issue will be put on the market before this paper reaches its readers. Financial legislation by the present Congress is improbable.——The ex Queen of Hawaii will probably be banished, and several American allies executed, as a result of a recent insidious effort to restore royalty.

General Assembly.

FEBRUARY 4.

SENATE.—Grant introduced a bill to repeal Oxford Orphan Asylum $10,000 yearly appropriation. Numerous local bills introduced, among them several to prohibit sale of liquor in certain communities. Bill to establish graded schools at Kinston passed third reading. The remainder of the session was consumed with discussion of the size of fees paid county court clerks and registers; the fee for registration of crop lien bonds at fifty cents was agreed to, and the probate fee ten cents.

HOUSE.—Williams introduced a resolution to investigate the Fish Commission. Lusk introduced bill to create the office of stenographer of Superior Court; Young, to increase by $5,000 the negro A. & M. College appropriation; Cheek, to forbid public officers using railroad passes; Hunter, to incorporate the Socley for Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Several minor bills passed third reading. The contested election case from Wayne, of Person vs. Monroe, was decided in favor of the latter. Bills to abolish capital punishment and to establish Oyer and Terminer courts were tabled. Partisan debate of a campaign incident followed.

FEBRUARY 5.

SENATE.—Bill to improve public roads by taxation and convict labor passed, after bitter partisan debate, but was defeated later.

HOUSE.—Burnham's anti-liquor bill was reported unfavorably. Winborne introduced bill to enforce our anti-trust laws. Crews, to increase appropriation to negro Orphanage at Oxford. Turner, to provide for local assessments for support of public schools. The partisan debate of the previous day was resumed.

FEBRUARY 6.

SENATE.—Candler introduced bill to regulate sale of liquor in the State. Bill to let public printing to lowest responsible bidder passed third reading. Bill to work public roads with State convicts was defeated, but it will come up again.

HOUSE.—Hileman introduced resolution to find out how much, and for what, money has been expended by the Agricultural department. State Treasurer's report of appropriations to the University was laid before the House. Crawford introduced bill to prevent the marriage of first cousins; Phillips, to incorporate Western North Carolina Christian Conference. Bill to permit shipment of game from State was tabled. The bill to appropriate $2,500 to a training school for fallen women was tabled.

FEBRUARY 7.

SENATE.—To reduce salaries of Railroad Commissioners from $3,000 to $1,500 a year passed third reading. House Bill to let public printing to lowest bidder passed third reading. House and Senate adjourned to attend laying of corner-stone of the monument to the memory of the late Col. L. L. Polk by the National Alliance.

FEBRUARY 8.

SENATE.—Grant offered memorial of W. N. C. Methodist Conference relative to higher education. Cook, to investigate and prohibit combinations. The financial plank of the Ocala platform was endorsed. Bill to require all public school teachers to undergo examinations and to abolish county institutes, taking away special privileges of State Normal and Industrial students, passed second reading.

HOUSE.—Numerous petitions of local nature and minor bills were presented. The contested election case from Greene county, of Dixon vs. Mewborne, was decided in favor of the former.

FEBRUARY 9.

SENATE.—To require examination of teachers in public schools and repealing Normal and Industrial privileges, passed third reading. Westmoreland, by unanimous consent, offered a resolution to investigate charges of drunkenness against a Senator. Bill to take all appropriations from the University tabled; as was also a bill raising age of young men to work on roads from eighteen to twenty-one years. Bill to prohibit sale of liquors to minors passed third reading.

HOUSE.—Many miscellaneous bills introduced. Most of the day taken up by members denouncing an editorial in a daily paper, they having been unjustly accused. Ray introduced a bill to protect fish. Bill relating to registration of mortgages, deeds, etc., passed third reading.

A Late Breakfast

is often caused by a late milkman. No cream for the coffee or oatmeal has delayed many a morning meal. Keep a supply of Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream in the house, and avoid such anoyances.

From Rev. M. V. McDuffie.

Dear Recorder:—The Clarendon St. Baptist church of Boston was the scene yesterday of a great funeral. It was more like a triumphant entrance of some victorious warrior into the capitol of his king than a funeral,—so much was said in his honor, and so numerous were evidences of the victories achieved by him in the service of his king on the field of battle. His field had indeed been the world—and as was said by Rev. Dr. Mabie of the American Baptist Missionary Union, who had the funeral services in charge, "Dr. Gordon was a denizen of the planet"; the sphere of his influence was the inhabited world, and his interest in missions was integral and not something put on as an ornament, or something said in a perfunctory way, because, perchance, it was his duty to say or do something for missions. The church was crowded long before the hour appointed for service, and it was indeed a representative gathering. The ministers of Boston and vicinity, together with scores from other sections, were there in large numbers. Men and women engaged in many kinds of missionary service, and representatives of nearly every reform movement and philanthropic movement in the land, together with hundreds of others were present to show their respect to the lamented dead.

Do you ask me how I like my new field of labor, Portsmouth and the New England people? One word will express it, delighted. I have a good, old, substantial church that has been ministered to for sixty years by men of national reputation, who served as pastors. The leaders, therefore, are men well indoctrinated and established in the faith. The younger generation need looking after, as New England is full of isms. But "the best of all is, God is with us." My congregations have grown considerably, and all departments of the church work seem to be flourishing, and I am doing my best to give the people the unadulterated gospel of Christ.

Through my more than eight years' labor in New Brunswick, New Jersey, I succeeded in getting for the Baptists there the handsomest church in the city—on the leading avenue. It cost, the church and lot together $51,000, and all was paid for with the exception of $7,000, when I made the dedicatory payer.

While pastor there, I received more than two hundred people into the church, had the church to adopt free-seats instead of the rented-pew system, and also to take a decided stand against raising money for the Lord's work by means of church fairs and entertainments, believing all such methods of work to be a belittleing of the gospel methods of church-work and preventive of the development of the spirit of benevolence in church members.

When I thought my work was done, I resigned to accept the call to Portsmouth, and I feel that God in his providence has rewarded me for past services and called me up higher. My one desire is to live for God and do good unto men.

The RECORDER will always be welcome in my New England home, and I wish for it continued success.

The thermometer registered to day ten degrees below zero, and with the keen, penetrating winds, it is said to be equal to twenty degrees below zero in a quiet day. You will know by this that we have cold weather in New England. But our homes are well built, built with a view to keeping out cold, and well heated, and therefore comfortable. And we are happy.

Faithfully yours,
M. V. McDUFFIE.

A Wonderful Cure for Cancer.

Mrs. Betty Powers, 304 W. Marshall Street, Richmond, Va., after visiting Baltimore, Md., for treatment, as well as having received treatment from her home physicians, was given up as hopeless. Dr. Scott Mason was called, and in twenty five days gave complete relief and removed the last vestige of cancer without using knife or burning plaster.

Dr. Mason claims to be able to cure a large per cent. of so-called "incurable cases" readily, without pain, and permanently. Many cases can be cured at home at small cost. Those who are afflicted should write to Dr. Scott Mason, 700 Clay Street, Richmond Va., for information, testimonials, terms, &c.

The electric thrill of health is never felt by those who are run down—out of sorts—poor in blood—badly nourished—dyspeptic. That would be impossible, and so the delight of living is lost!

Brown's Iron Bitters

brings weak people up to the standard of health—feeds the blood—acts on the nerves—strengthens the muscles. It brings the blush of youth to weary women's cheeks—is a boon to the invalid—refreshes and renews life in the aged—nourishes the weak, puny child—briefly said, it gives strength, and strength cannot exist without perfect health. It is a necessity in evety family. It does not injure the teeth or cause constipation.

From Wilmington, Mr. Reynolds will go to the Florida State Sunday school Convention. COM.

"An Offer of $200.00 in Gold."

No book is selling so rapidly as "Talks to Children about Jesus." The publishers, R. H. Woodard Company, Baltimore, Md., are making a most liberal offer of $200 in gold to agents who sell within the next three months two hundred copies. The book is sold very low and is beautifully illustrated. Freight is paid and credit given. Send at once thirty-five cents for canvassing outfit and full information. They also publish other popular books.

The Floral Guide.

The Floral Guide published by James Vick's Sons, of Rochester, N. Y., is again at hand, and as usual is a costly and handsome publication of great interest to all who love flowers or are interested in gardening. The annual catalogue is invariably the largest and the most expensive publication of the kind in this country. This year it offers several novelties, among which are the Vick Branching Asters in several colors and rivaling chrysanthemums in size and beauty. Then there is the "Sunset" Hibiscus and a Hypericum of great beauty. The Vicks have a new Sweet Pea, which is distinctly a double flower, and they are taking votes upon a selection of a name from half a dozen which have been suggested. The voters get a chance of winning several prizes in cash for the best guesses at the number of votes the favorite will get. The Guide cost ten cents by mail, but this price is deducted from the first order for seeds.

General Lord Wolseley makes a most important contribution to the literature of the China Japan war. In an article for the February Cosmopolitan,, he discusses the situation and does not mince matters in saying what China must do in this emergency. Two other noted foreign authors contribute interesting articles to this number. Ollivier tells the story of the fall of Louis Philippe. From every part of the world, drawings and photographs have been obtained of the instruments used to torture poor humanity, and appear as illustrations for a clever article, by Julian Hawthorne, entitled, "Salvation via the Rack." Mrs. Reginald de Koven, Anatole France, W. Clark Russell, Albion W. Tourgee, and William Dean Howells are among the story tellers for the February number of The Cosmopolitan.

Among the annual Almanacs which are put into print at this season of the year, The New York Tribune Almanac must be rated as easily the first. The New York Sun (Dem.) praises it as an exceedingly valuable and accurate book of reference, and, on the other hand calls its principal rival a "book of popular *mis*information." Although emanating from the office of the most aggressive Republican newspaper of the United States, The Tribune Almanac is absolutely devoid of partisanship. The Tribune's "arithmetic man" who figures up majorities the night after election, lays aside his political affiliations when he comes to work upon the Almanac. Accuracy, fairness and completeness are the watchwords then, and the result is seen in the wide distribution of The Tribune Almanac all over the United States, and its use by Democrats, Populists and Republicans alike. The number for 1895, which has just come to us, has brought its election returns, statistics and general information up to date, and is the largest and most complete number ever issued. The price is only twenty-five cents a copy, although now a volume of 380 pages. It was 25 cents a copy, even in the early Forties, when it began its career as a little document of 60 pages.

"To dwell with God, to feel his love
Is the full heaven enjoyed above;
And the sweet expectation now
Is the young dawn of heaven below.

By nature's laws, immutable and just, enjoyment stops where indolence begins.—Pollock.

Mr. Jas. D. McNeil's Experience With The Electropoise.

FAYETTEVILLE N. C., Aug. 16, 1893.

My Dear Sir:—I gladly give you my opinion of the Electropoise. I consider it Science's Best Gift to Man. It has been of such wonderful benefit to me that I feel as if I could not say too much in its favor. A very severe attack of Grippe in the winter of 1890 left me with a shattered nervous system and almost no digestive power at all, and for eighteen months people in Hades had as much fun and as good a time as I did. I tried Allopathic, Homeopathic and "jam of the fence" remedies all to no good. The Electropoise has made me almost myself again, and I believe will eventually make me a better man. It has been used on every member of my household of seven from the youngest up to their mother (who is also a convert) with marked beneficial results; so much so, that I have not paid one penny for drugs since it entered my house, the first of last March. I have recommended it to many who have taken my advice and I have never known of any to regret having done so. It is the most economical physician on earth. I would not be without one under any circumstances. Yours truly,

JAS. D. MCNEILL.

WHAT N. B. BROUGHTON SAYS.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 26, 1894.

J. D. BOUSHALL, ESQ.,
Manager Ætna Life Ins. Co.,
Raleigh, N. C.

My Dear Sir:—I am to day in receipt of the Company's check on the First National Bank of New York for one thousand dollars ($1.000) in full settlement of Policy No. 213,127 on the life of the late Lewis O. Lougee, Treasurer of Wake county.

Please accept the thanks of the family for this prompt and satisfactory settlement. Mr. Lougee died on the 10th Nov., 1894. The proofs were filed with you on the 17th. The check is dated Nov. 24th.

I take great pleasure in commending your excellent Company to those looking for safe and reliable insurance.

Yours truly, N. B. BROUGHTON,
Administrator, L. O. Lougee.

The man who would climb the ladder of fame must not linger too long on each round of applause.

MARRIED.

YATES—THAGARD—On Feb. 6th, 1895, at the residence of Mrs. Lucy Thagard, by Rev. C. J. F. Anderson, Mr. C. C. Yates and Miss Lizzie Thagard.

ROBASON—BURTON—On Jan. 30th, 1895, at the residence of the bride's father, by W. H. Case, J. P., James A. Robason and Miss Lillie R. Burton, all of Guilford county.

RICH—WALLACE—On Jan. 22d, 1895, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. A. J. Bordeaux, Mr. W. M. Richmond of Sampson county and Miss E. J. Wallace of Bladen county.

KELLY—WOODCOCK—On January 24th, 1895, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. A. J. Bordeaux, Mr. John D. Kelly of Bladen county and Miss Mary L. Woodcock of Pender county.

DIED.

TAPP—Little Julia, infant daughter of Bro. and Sister Peyton Tapp, left papa and mamma on Jan. 24th to be with God. She was just two and one half years old at her death. Like the modest daisy, she bloomed to bless the world but for a span, and then passed away. Well did she perform her mission on earth, and now she is reaping her reward. God comfort the loved ones. G. T. W.

BLEDSOE—Mr. J. A. Bledsoe was born Sept. 26th, 1815, and died Jan. 22d, 1895, aged eighty years. As a citizen, neighbor, and Christian, he was highly esteemed. During the forty five years of his Christian life he was never censured by his church for disorderly conduct.

A kind husband, loving father, faithful member is at rest. "All is well." M.

SNIDER.—Albert Pinkney Snider fell on sleep Dec. 12th, 1894,. He was sick but nine days. He was fifteen years, two months and two days old. He was baptized by the writer Oct. 27th, 1892, in New Friendship church. Just blooming into manhood, his young life was beautifully consistent. His Sunday-school lessons were studied carefully. Living four miles from church, yet his desire was to not miss a single prayer-meeting service.

HENRY SHEETS.

MITCHELL—Mrs. Jane Mitchell died Jan. 24th, 1895, at Clayton. She was sixty-eight years of age, and had been an active member of some Baptist church for fifty years. The loss of such a worker to the Clayton church cannot be estimated. Her death was but a fitting and to a godly life. On her last night she attended prayer-meeting, and upon returning home, she lay down and quietly died. Thus she passed from a prayer-meeting into the other world. The membership of the church extend hearty sympathy to the bereaved husband and children.

PASTOR.

ALFORD—W. D. Alford was born in Wake county, N. C., Sept. 13th, 1844, and died at his home in East Durham, N. C., Jan. 24th, 1895, aged fifty-one years, four months and eleven days. Bro. Alford was a member of East Durham Baptist church, and expressed himself to his family, and others as willing to die—his only regret being to leave his family. He leaves a widow and eight children to mourn their loss. His body was taken to the old family burial ground, near Cary, Jan. 26th, and interred in the presence of several who accompanied his remains from East Durham, and a number of old friends and relatives from in and around Cary. O. C. HORTON.

East Durham, Jan. 31, 1895.

BROCK—Mr. Barney Brock passed calmly to his reward on Nov. 19th, 1894, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. Bro. Brock was a consistent member of the Baptist church at Oregon Mills. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." The funeral was conducted by the writer. W. S. K.

REAMS—On Jan. 24th we laid to rest the mortal remains of Bro. Charlie Reams. He was called in the bloom of manhood—at the age of thirty-six—to his eternal reward. A good man has passed away from things terestial to things celestial. Antioch church has lost one of her jewels and Christianity one of its supporters. God bless the bereaved ones. G. T. W.

TAYLOR—Bro. Jesse F. Taylor was born in Nash county, N. C., August 9th, 1825, and died near Raleigh September 19th, 1894. In his early manhood he professed faith in Christ, and was a consistent Christian until the day of his death. For many years he was a respected and beloved member of the First Baptist church in Raleigh. His piety, though entirely unaffected, elevated his character, and gave direction to his every-day life. In all earthly relations he was exemplary and highly esteemed. In the management of his business he was honest, diligent and successful. Those who knew him testify that he was an excellent citizen, a faithful husband, an affectionate father, a true friend, an obliging and a truth-speaking, God-fearing man. He met death calmly and trustfully, and left one son, three daughters, and a host of friends to mourn his departure. J. W. C.

EATON—Mrs. Emma Belle Eaton, daughter of J. O. Tatum, deceased, and widow of Thomas F. Eaton, deceased, of Davie county, and sister of Elder Frank Eaton of China, went, Oct. 11th, 1894, to be with Jesus and the spirits of the just made perfect in heaven; and Farmington church, of which she was a member, and Eaton's, into whose fellowship she was baptized by Elder J. B. Marsh in May, 1868, join her bereaved family, neighbors and friends in mourning her absence, because she is greatly missed by her church, which she faithfully served, and by her neighbors, especially the sick and needy, whose wants she ever promptly supplied. All sorrow not as those that have no hope, knowing that she is with the Lord.

Sister Eaton was at her death thirty-nine years, eight months and twenty-six days old. She left surviving her, her mother, three children, three brothers, and one sister, all the adults of whom are on their way to meet her in heaven. May dear little Phoebe and Timmie be led early in life to their mother's Saviour! The Lord comfort all. PASTOR.

ATKINSON—On Dec. 22d, 1894, the sweet and gentle spirit of little Bessie McDuffie Atkinson winged its way to the realms of the blest. She was but five and a half years old, the youngest in the large family circle of Bro. James W. Atkinson of Fayetteville, and the darling of the household. Full of happiness she had gone the previous evening to the house of a neighbor, and there, by the sudden explosion of an oil lamp, she was wreathed in flames and fearfully burned. God in his mercy did not let her suffer long before he took her home to himself. She was a very pretty child, and, withal, so winning that she was beloved by all who knew her.

She was a remarkably pious child, delighting in the Sunday-school and the church services, which she very rarely failed to attend. She knew a number of hymns and sang them in a clear, sweet voice. "Jesus lover of my soul" was her favorite, and she would often say, "Mamma, isn't that the sweetest thing you ever heard?"

The home is very sad now without the bright presence of the beloved child, but Jesus is there with his precious consolations, and comforts the sorrowing parents and children as he alone can. May he ever be their refuge and strength. J. HARTWELL EDWARDS.

TYSOR—Bro. Jordan Tysor, Sr., died at his home in Chatham county, N. C., Tuesday, Jan. 29th, 1895. He was ninety-seven years, eight months and twenty-eight days old and had been a professor of religion upward of sixty years. He first joined the Methodists, remaining with them a while, and then joined May's Chapel Baptist church, of which he died a member. Bro. Tysor was a benevolent man and did much toward building up the "waste places" within the bounds of the Sandy Creek Association. He loved his church very much, and, it is said, never missed one of his meetings unless providentially hindered. The writer preached the funeral at the residence, Jan. 31st, and the remains were buried near by, on Feb. 1st, 1895. May the Lord bless his children and his wife who watched over him so tenderly during his affliction.

The Home Circle.

"Not As I Will."

Blindfolded and alone I stand,
With unknown thresholds on each hand;
The darkness deepens as I grope,
Afraid to fear, afraid to hope
Yet this one thing I learn to know,
Each day more surely as I go,
That doors are opened, ways are made,
Burdens are lifted or are laid,
By some great law unseen and still
Unfathomed purpose to fulfil.

Blindfolded and alone I wait;
Loss seems too bitter, gain too late:
Too heavy burdens in the load,
And too few helpers on the road;
And joy is weak and grief is strong,
And years and days so long, so long,
Yet this one thing I learn to know,
Each day more surely as I go,
That I am glad the good and ill,
By changeless laws are ordered still.

The sound grows sweet
Each time my lips the words repeat,
Not as I will, the darkness feels
More safe than light when this thought steals
Like whispered voice to calm and bless,
All unrest and all loneliness,
"Not as I will," because the one
Who loved us first and best has gone
Before us on the road, and still
For us must all his love fulfil,
"Not as I will."

Our Country—What is It?

2,970,000 square miles of territory between the Atlantic and the Pacific.

Add Alaska, one fifth of the whole in extent.

Its seven grandest rivers have no equal in the world.

What do these mean for us?

Fertile valleys, commerce, etc.

These grand chains of mountain—its backbone and its breastbone.

What do these mean for us?

A vast treasury filled with wealth.

Our mines have only begun to produce their precious ores; our rivers and lakes have only begun their usefulness to man.

The wonderful railroads threading it in every direction.

What do these mean for us?

Easy communications, growth, prosperity, etc.

65,000 000 people live in this country.

21,000,000 are foreigners, or the children of foreigners.

1,164 languages or dialects are spoken here.

New York was once the "West," Ohio the "Far West."

Now Dakota calls Chicago an Eastern city, and Washington speaks of going East to Dakota.

These immense Western States! How shall we realize their size?

Lay Texas on the face of Eurobe, and this giant, with his head resting on the mountains of Norway (directly east of the Orkney Islands,) with one plain covering London, the other Warsaw, would stretch himself down across the kingdom of Denmark, across the empires of Germany and Austria, across Northern Italy, and have his feet in the Mediterranean.

You may place twenty kingdoms of Europe in our United States, and have room to spare.

Connecticut will fit into Michigan twelve times; Kansas, eighteen; Oregon twenty; California, forty; Texas, sixty; and it takes one hundred and twenty Connecticuts to make one Alaska.

Tear Dakota into strips of one mile in width, and you make a belt that will encircle the earth three times.

Put all the people of the earth into the United States, and each person would have two acres of land.

Put all the people of the United States (65,000,000,) into Texas and the population would not be as dense as that of Germany. —Selected.

It Sharpens

the appetite, improves digestion, and restores health and vigor; all the organs of the body are aroused to healthy action by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. More than all, the liver—and that's the key to the whole system. You have pure blood or poisonous blood, just as your liver chooses. The blood controls the health, the liver controls the blood, the "Discovery" controls the liver.

You can escape just about half the ills that flesh is heir to, by being ready for them. Brace the system up with this medicine, which prevents as well as cures. For all diseases caused by a disordered liver or impure blood—dyspepsia, biliousness, the most stubborn skin, scalp scrofulous affections, the "Discovery" is the only remedy so certain and effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

You pay only for the good you get.

The Crooked Tree.

"Such a cross old woman is Mrs. Barnes! I never would send her jelly or anything else again," said Mollie Clapp, setting her basket down hard on the table. "She never even said, 'Thank you!' but, 'Set the cup on the table, child, and don't knock over the bottles.' Why don't your mother come herself instead of sending you! I'll be dead one of these days, and then she'll wish she had been a little more neighborly.' I never want to go there again, and I should not think you would."

"Molly! Molly! come quick and see Mr. Daws straighten the old cherry tree," called Tom through the window; and old Mrs. Barnes was forgotten, as Mollie flew out over the green to the next yard.

Her mother watched with a great deal of interest the efforts of two stout men as, with strong ropes, they strove to pull the crooked tree this way and that. But it was of no use.

"'Tis as crooked as the letter S, and has been for twenty years. You are just twenty years too late, Mr. Daws," said Joe, as he dropped the rope and wiped the sweat from his face.

"Are you sure you have not begun twenty years too late on tobacco and rum, Joe?" asked Mr. Daws.

"That is a true word, master; and it is as hard to break off with them as to make this old tree straight. But I signed the pledge last night, and, with God's help, I mean to keep it."

"With God's help, you may hope to keep it, Joe," responded his master. "Our religion gives every man a chance to reform. No one need despair so long as we have such promises of grace to help."

"That is my comfort, sir," said the man, humbly; "but I shall tell the boys to try and not get crooked at the beginning."

"Mother," said Molly, as she stood by the window again at her mother's side, "I know now what is the matter with Mrs. Barnes. She need not try to be pleasant and kind now; for she is like the old tree—it is twenty years too late."

"It is never to late, with God's help, to try to do better; but my little girl must begin now to to keep back harsh words and unkind thoughts. Then she will never have to say, as Joe said about the tree, 'It is twenty years to late.'"

She Should Marry a Minister.

"If I were a minister's wife," said a lady in the car, who was talking too loud not to be overheard, "you may rest assured I should take an interest—an active interest—in my husband's work. I should say to him, 'Richard, if you want to do well next Sunday, preach short! If you want your congregation to grow larger and larger, preach short! If you want to draw them to this church, that church, and the other, preach short! Always preach short! But, Richard, have something to say, always! Condense, condense, and condense, and then have an air about you as if time were worth something and you could not afford to lose a minute of it.' If on a Sunday morning he seemed to be in an extra amiable mood, I would venture to say, 'Richard, dear, don't be all day in giving out your notices! Don't blink over them and clear your throat, and go poking along through them as if you had never seen them before and were pondering them in your mind as you call attention to them! Don't, I beg of you, Richard, read them straightforward and then say them all over again backwards! There is nothing so tiresome!' I am not sure but some Sunday I should say, 'Richard, if you get the least tedious to day I shall fuss with my bonnet strings as a warning! And when you say 'In conclusion,' don't, for pity's sake, go on until you reach a 'Finally,' and after that 'One word more,' or 'Just another thought!' I do think it is such a mistake to try to tell all one knows in one sermon."

Just then the auditor was obliged to leave the car, but he could not help exclaiming to himself, "What a sensible woman!" It is to be hoped that some day this sensible one will marry a minister.—Selected.

A Good Interpretation.

A Scotchman, fond of drink, on awakening one morning told his wife of a curious dream that he had during the night. He dreamed that he saw a big fat rat coming towards him followed by two lean ones, and in the rear one blind one. He was greatly worried over it, and declared that some great evil was about to fall upon him. He had heard that to dream of rats foreboded some dire calamity. In vain did he appeal to his wife, but she could not relieve him. His son, who, by the way, was a bright temperance lad, hearing the dream told, volunteered to interpet it, and he did it with all the wisdom of a Joseph. Said he: "The fat rat is the man who keeps the public house where ye gang sae often, and the twa lean ones are me and mither, and the blind one is yersel', father."—Frank Leslie's Weekly.

Wanted.

The other day I saw in a newspaper a notice which I think should be read with care, and then tucked away in the memory. Here it is:

"Wanted—In one hundred thousand households in America, a willing, sunshiny daughter who will not fret when asked to wipe the dishes, or sigh when requested to take care of the baby; a daughter whose chief delight it is to smooth away her mother's wrinkles, and who is quite as willing to lighten her father's cares as his pocket; a girl who thinks her brother quite as fine a fellow as some other girl's brother. Constant love, high esteem, and more honored place in the home guaranteed. Employment assured to all qualified applicants. Address Mother, Home Office."—Sel.

THE ONWARD MARCH

of Consumption is stopped short by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If you haven't waited beyond reason, there's complete recovery and cure. In those scrofulous conditions of the blood which invite Consumption; in severe, lingering Coughs, and Weak Lungs, this medicine is a proved remedy.

Miss M. H. Sneed.

Mrs. Sarah S. Sneed, of Clio, Iredell Co., N. C., writes: "My daughter was first attacked with pneumonia and pleurisy in very bad form and was then taken with a very bad cough, which kept growing worse and worse, until finally it seemed as though she had consumption very bad. The physicians prescribed Cod liver oil, but to no benefit. I procured two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and she grew better. She hasn't felt any return of lung disease in over twelve months. She was nothing but a skeleton when she took the first dose, and to-day she weighs 135 pounds."

CAN A State Penitentiary be made self-supporting? Can it be self supporting without harassing citizen laborers? Every State is concerned with these questions; but, so far as we know, not one has settled them satisfactorily.

Convicts are usually sentenced to hard labor. There must be object for their labor, if they are not to be entirely supported at great expense by citizens. If they engage in manufacturing, factory workers take offense; and rightfully. It is not difficult to perceive that convicts, not having families to feed nor roofs to keep whole, nor temptation to buy furniture or Sunday suits, can work for less than citizens. It is not right to bring the shoe making or brick making citizen of family into competition with convicts; nor is it right to bring the miner into competition with them. A State-backed gang of felons has no right to run down the price of unbacked citizen labor. But there must be hard labor. The citizen, shoemaker, miner or whoever he is, will cry out, if he has to contribute to the support of idle felons. The felons themselves demand occupation, for forced inactivity is intolerably cruel. There is no avenue of remunerative industry that is not occupied by citizens; and so it is evident that, if the convict does useful hard labor, he must compete with citizen laborers. It is expedient to have him support himself as far as possible; it is humane to permit him to work. How can he be usefully employed with a minimum of friction? North Carolina has answered the question by putting her convicts to farming on a large scale, and there is little or no complaint of her policy. So great and diverse are the products of agriculture that the introduction of a few State farms has no appreciable effect, although in principle the farmer's complaint would be as just as the miner's.

The Penitentiary is yet a burden to the State. In the last two years $25,000 was taken by it from the Treasury, and the present General Assembly has been asked to appropriate $15,000 to pay a debt now due, and $35,000 to maintain the convicts until a crop can be harvested, after which, if all is favorable, the 1894 report states, the institution will be self-supporting. This is reasonable; the last crops sold for about $30,000 less than usual on account of the general fall of prices; and, moreover, the institution has $40,000 in live-stock, utensils, and general assets convertible into money, besides having greatly improved the farms by clearing forests and reclaiming low-lands. It is stated also that one-third more can be made on the farms than was made last year.

There are 1,265 convicts in the Penitentiary; about 200 of them are old or decrepid, and remain at the central institution making bricks, shoes for the convicts and doing domestic work; the others were employed on the four State farms. They cultivated 3,500 acres last year, and, as they strengthened the dikes last winter, their abundant harvests escaped the fall floods.

The harvest was as follows: Cotton, 905,213 pounds; corn, 100,323 bushels; forage, 2,266,750 pounds; pease, 4,000 bushels; peanuts, 7,200 bushels; oats, 4,150 bushels; wheat, 11,601 bushels; sorghum, 7,650 gallons; meat, 95,000 pounds. $40,309 37 worth of these was consumed during the year by the convicts and employees; $107,775 58 was earned during the year, mostly by sale of farm products, and there is about $30,000 worth of products on hand. The cost of running the institution in 1894 was $219,078 16. The Superintendent is to be congratulated that only $40,000 of this falls on taxpayers.

Fifty-three convicts died in the year. There were many hundreds of cases of fevers and chills. The number of cases of sickness is distressing, and we hope better drainage in the future will result in a brighter sanitary report.

The value of everything owned by the institution, from cooking utensils to the price of a man's labor a day (forty-eight cents), with the salary paid every employee, the number of prisoners received since the Penitentiary was opened in 1870, which is 10,789, when they were received, the native States of the present inmates, the counties that they represent, how many from each, the number of those who cannot read nor write (640), their previous occupations, their ages, race and sex (there being 224 white males, 6 females, 966 negro males, 64 females), how long they will remain in prison and for what crimes they were sentenced.

We studied the report with interest. It is creditable. If any one is disposed to complain of the debt and the need for $35,000 besides, let him reflect that the regular appropriation to the institution used to be more than $100,000 a year.

The present management has done more to solve the Penitentiary problem and set the institution on a satisfactory basis than any of its predecessors, self support in 1896 being probable.

There has been no little suspicion of each successive management of the institution. We have never been satisfied with the leasing of farms and going to great expense to improve them. In our opinion, their owners, in addition to getting handsome rents, will get a big price when the State takes up its purchase option. This is not the fault of the present management, with which, so far as we can see, there is no fault to be found.

There is effort to have the farm system of convict employment abandoned, and to put them to working county roads.

Good roads are greatly needed; but it will be unfortunate, if the State has to lose the permanent improvements it has made on the farm lands, and this, too, when self support by farming is in sight! The counties using convicts to work roads should be made to support them not only while they are at work, but also to contribute to their support in winter, when there is but little remunerative work to be had. Even this will be impracticable. It is a sound proposition that one county should not be made to pay for the support of road-makers of another county.

Moreover, most of the convicts are adapted to farm work: it is an occupation that requires less money than any other, since most of the supplies are "home made"; and lands have been cleared, dikes made, lowlands reclaimed, horses and mules and implements bought, and houses and stables erected, which it will be unwise and inexpedient to abandon.

AT THE risk of shocking its Northern contemporaries and in disregard of what they and others may vaguely term the 'genius of our institutions,' the RECORDER has no hesitation in saying that it is opposed to any system of county or city or town government that will place negroes in authority over white people.

The subject is old and worn; and we would not mention it but for the fact that probable legislative action is liable to expose certain counties, if not cities, to negro domination.

We do not set out to defend the present system of county government. We believe such a system was necessary to protect several counties from the rule of ignorant negroes and the impositions of carpet baggers; it worthily served a good purpose. If it was abused, it is a pity; but it is no cause for counter-abuse. If the law is changed, it will be a great wrong, if some other means of preventing negro domination is not devised. It is determined that it will be changed; so the question is, How can its purpose be served by a new system which will be approved by the present law makers?

The negro must not be cheated; and yet in counties where the population is largely African, it would be cruel to the whites and dangerous in every respect to give him the power and responsibility of governing. The negro is not yet fit to rule his own race; left in his own hands to-day, he would go backwards more quickly than he has come forward. To give him control over counties would place them at the mercy of designing whites and ambitious blacks.

There is a way out: The qualifications of voters can be increased. A premium can be placed on intelligence, as should have been long ago. It is a sound proposition that no one should be allowed to influence public affairs until he can read and write, and comprehend our Constitution and laws. If ability to do these were made a qualification of full citizenship, it would enable us to leave county government to direct vote of the people, would insure white supremacy, would encourage the negro to mental development, and would develop a sturdier patriotism. It would be a wholesome measure, were there no negroes in the State; for the negro is not so much to be objected to, as is his ignorance, his prejudice against Southern whites and disposition to be led by strangers.

Negroes will some day be capable of governing; but any one who contends that they are now, or will likely be in half a century, will be deservedly spurned by the intelligent whites. We do not disapprove negro representation, but this and domination are far apart.

The Interbiblical Period and the Rise and Characteristics of the Jewish Sects.

PART I.

The history of the Jews during the seven centuries preceding the coming of our Saviour is one full of sadness. No longer, as an undivided people, did they offer up their sacrifices in Jerusalem to the God of their fathers, as in the time of David. The division of the kingdom in the days of Rehoboam was the beginning of the end. The kingdom of Israel in the latter part of the eighth century fell a prey to the armies of Sargon, king of Assyria, and the Ten Tribes are henceforth lost to history. A hundred and thirty six years longer lasted the rival kingdom of Judah, till it similarly passed into the grasping hand of Nebuchadnezzer, and the people were carried away into a foreign country, where "by the rivers of Babylon there we sat down; yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion." After seventy years of captivity the people joyfully returned under Zerubbabel to their native land, which was henceforth a province of the king of Persia. The temple of Jerusalem was rebuilt and the worship of the true God was established under the wise direction of prophets and rulers, such as Haggai, Zechariah, Ezra, and Nehemiah. There was, however, a visible decline in the religious spirit of the people; long residence among, and environment by, the heathen nations had not been without its pernicious influences upon the chosen people. Marriages with the surrounding nations were no longer shunned; the priesthood had fallen into corruption; the temple services were frequently neglected; scepticism had introduced itself among the people; immorality, sorcery, perjury, idolatry, and their attendant vices, spread far and wide throughout the land. At this juncture appeared the last of the prophets, who, in words which pierce into the very soul, vents the fiery indignation of the Righteous God upon the sins of the people and predicts the day of the coming of the Lord, which shall burn like fire, destroying the wicked like stubble. This last outburst of prophetic revelation is like those glowing northern sunsets, whose last ruddy beams have not vanished from the western heavens till the rosy fingers of dawn appear above the eastern hills; for, upon the rejection of the fallen Israel, Malachi opens to us the proclamation of a universal gospel, which had its perfect culmination in the Christian dispensation: "from the rising of the sun till the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles, saith the Lord of Hosts."

From this point then we proceed upon our examination into Jewish history. The four hundred years from the time of Malachi till the birth of Christ are filled with most momentous events in the world's history. The powers of Athens, of Sparta, and of Thebes went down before that of Macedonia; Alexander led his conquering hosts into Asia, and the mighty powers of Persia, Egypt, aye, of the Eastern world, crumbled into dust before him. After his death the empires of the Selencidae and of the Ptolemais exercised their power for good or evil for generations, till they were in turn absorbed into the growing dominion of Rome. Rome itself spread from the narrow confines of Latium, till it included the world, from the territory of Parthia on the east to far west Britannia. The renowned Republic passed into the more glorious Empire under Augustus Cæsar. In the meantime the Jews in quiet obscurity lay hid within their native valleys. They escaped the ravages of Alexander, but, at the partition of his dominions, Judea lay as a weak province between the two great rival monarchies of Egypt under the Ptolemais and of the Syro-Grecian kingdom of Seleucus; possessed now by one, now by the other, and suffering under the misrule of native governors, many of whom were of the priestly order, the Jewish nation led a pitiable existence of servile humiliation. This era of suffering culminated in the persecutions inaugurated by Antiochus Epiphanes, King of Syria, who in 170 B. C. brought Egypt under his domination. Determined to suppress every element of independence among the Jews, he destroyed tens of thousands of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, pillaged the treasury, seized the sacred vessels, profaned the holy place, took away the women as captives, dismantled and set on fire the city, threw down the walls and established a strong fortress on Mount Sion, forced the people to profane the Sabbath and to eat swine's flesh, introduced the rites and ceremonies of the Grecian religion, and dedicated the temple of Jehovah to Jupiter Olympius.

This disgrace was, however, not unavenged. Out of the depths of these humiliations rose the Jewish spirit of liberty and the mighty line of the Asmoneans, who restored Judea for some generations to its independent sovereignty. Mattathias, an aged priest of the town of Modin, not only refused to acquiesce in the profane rites enjoined by Antiochus, but with his own hand slew some of his renegade countrymen and inaugurated the revolution against the tyrant. This war for independence was carried on against immense odds, but for the most part successfully by his son, Judas Maccabeus. Uniting the valor and strategy of a patriot and a general, he with his little band of loyal followers defeated the armies of the Syrians, gaining at Emmaus with 3,000 men his glorious victory over the 47,000 of the Syrian host and, in the next year, with only 10,000 followers defeated Lysias's army of 65,000 men. Having regained Jerusalem, Judas proved himself equally powerful as a reformer, fortified the citadel, repaired the temple, and introduced the old ceremonial worship. He however struggled against a remorseless fate and, under the successors of Antiochus, he fell as he had lived, a martyr to his country's liberty. "Among those lofty spirits, who have asserted the freedom of their native land against wanton and cruel oppression, none have surpassed Judas Maccabeus in accomplishing a great end with inadequate means; none ever united a more generous valor with a better cause." [Milman]. The struggle was still carried on by Jonathan and Simon, brothers of the fallen Judas, and, during the priesthood of John Hyrcanus, the son of Simon, victory perched upon the banners of the Jewish patriots, the hated yoke of Syria was thrown off, and the Jewish kingdom resumed its independence, [B. C. 130]. From this time on, under the able leadership of the Asmonean princes, the Jewish people extended their power, developed their exclusive spirit, and destroyed their troublesome neighbors, the Samaritans; they were, however, sorely troubled by internal dissensions and petty jealousies among the members of the reigning family and by the perpetual antagonism of the two great parties—the Pharisees and the Sadducees. In 63 B. C. the victorious Roman armies under Pompey invaded Syria, and the Jewish ruler, Hyrcanus II., disturbed as he was by the rival faction, received the conqueror into Jerusalem. Pompey treated the people with surprising magnanimity, and restored Hyrcanus to the supreme power, but deprived him of the royal prerogative, Judea becoming a province of the Roman Empire. These same privileges were afterwards granted by Julius Cæsar.

Just as the powerful Carolingian dynasty of France grew out of the majors domus of the Merovingian kings, so the Herodian family reckoned its beginning from Antipater, the prime minister of the weak Hyrcanus; in all but name Antipater was sovereign, and, by his wily intrigues, he succeeded in winning the favor of the Roman power and placed his sons in authority, among whom Herod was entrusted with the government of Galilee. The natural ability of Herod's character soon asserted itself and, by a dexterous adherence to the ruling party in Rome, he was appointed king of Judea by Augustus and Antony. He destroyed the last ruler of the old dynasty, but craftily allied himself with the old regime by marrying the beautiful Mariamne of the Asmonean race. The reign of Herod the Great forms an important era in Jewish history. To remove the adherents of the Asmonean family, he resorted to the practices of a tyrant—slew many of the heads of families in Jerusalem, and with one exception destroyed the entire Sanhedrin. But on the other hand he was disturbed by troubles in his own household; Alexandra, mother of Mariamne, proved to be his implacable enemy, and his sister Salome was ever fomenting trouble by reason of her jealousy of the sons of Mariamne. Twice did Herod have to go to Rome to secure his alliances there against the misrepresentations of his enemies; each time his jealous love for Mariamne caused him to entrust her to a faithful friend with the command of her execution in case he did not return. This jealous passion led him to the murder of his uncle Joseph, and at last of his own wife. Still troubled by the quarrels of the members of his family Herod was induced to slay his two sons by Mariamne, and almost the last act of his life was to give orders for the execution of another son, Antipater; so that Augustus rightly spoke when he said that he had rather be Herod's swine than one of Herod's sons. Nevertheless, Herod always retained the friendship of Rome and ruled the kingdom with a powerful hand; he rebuilt a great part of the city of Jerusalem and repaired the fallen walls; fortified the magnificent tower of Antonia; built himself a splendid palace at a short distance from the city, and, to win the affections of the Jews, inaugurated on a more magnificent scale than ever before the building of the great temple, which even at the time of our Saviour had been in building forty and seven years. He refounded Samaria with great strength and grandeur; to provide himself with a seaport, he established the wonderful city of Cæsarea, spending twelve years in its building, glorifying it with superb amphitheatres and sumptuous palaces. In a time of famine he is said to have supported 50,000 persons at his own expense. But all this time he was gradually introducing the civilization of Rome among his subjects. Dark plots were laid against him, and he terrorized the people by his sanguinary methods of vengeance; the slaughter of the innocents about this time is too well known to be described here. Feeling death approaching, he commanded some of all the chief families of Judea to be seized and shut up in the Hippodrome with the injunction that upon his death they should all be slain, in order that some lamentation might arise in the land at his death. The sons of Maltbace, one of Herod's ten wives, were appointed his heirs; to Herod Antipas were assigned Galilee and Perea, and Archilaus was made Ethnarch of Judea and Samaria. After a reign of injustice for nine years Archilaus was deposed and banished into Gaul, and Judea henceforth was again reduced to a Roman province. This takes us to the birth of Christ, and here our historical sketch must end.

A Good Conscience.

It is a happy thing to have a good conscience. Conscience is a faculty within man which decides on the lawfulness or unlawfulness of his actions or impulses. No argument is needed to prove its existence; it does exist; and to admit that it does exist, proves that there is a God. For where there is law there must be a law-giver. Look at a child who has been naughty, how it shrinks from its mother. At other times it will run to her first in every trouble, and hide its little head in her lap, and sob forth its sorrows, sure of comfort and help. But now it keeps away; it does not come; it cannot meet the mother as usual; it has not a good conscience.

An evil conscience towards God shows itself in like manner, unless conscience be so blunted by sin that it has left off doing its work. It is one thing to get a good conscience and another to keep it. This is done by going to the blood of Christ by which at first the conscience was cleansed, and by constant watchfulness and prayer. Even the Apostle Paul found it hard to get. He said, "And herein do I exercise myself to have always a conscience void of offence toward God and toward man." Carelessness or negligence of prayer quickly tells upon the conscience. Uneasy thoughts return, the old guilty feeling comes again, comfort goes, peace is disturbed; and all because the conscience is wounded. Neglect makes conscience dull; every time its voice is slighted its power grows less, and if this goes on, it will not speak at all at last. It is no good sign when you can sin and feel no twinge. This shows that you have grown hard; and the worst state of a man is when God says "Let him alone." For then the Holy Spirit, who used to strive with him by conscience, leaves him to himself, to his own evil heart, his own sinful inclinations. Do not quench the Spirit then by turning a deaf ear to conscience.

With a dead conscience a man himself may die, and perhaps often does die, his soul as stupified as the senses of the lost traveller who lies down to sleep his last sleep on the fields of snow. The voice of your conscience is the voice of your God. Obey it, and you will find peace and holiness; disobey it, and you will loose the light of God's countenance until you repent and learn to obey once more. Christ alone can wake the sleeping conscience and call it into life again when it is dead. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

Is your conscience against you with reference to any great question of the day, such as temperance, education, missions? Fly to the mercy of God. Is the past against you, flee from it now to the yet innocent present, which he still allows us; to the happy future which he may yet enable us to attain; to the glorious eternity whereof the golden gates are yet unbarred and flung as widely open to the penitents as to the saints.

What the people of North Carolina need, while missionary enterprises and the great question of intemperance are being discussed, is a good conscience, void of offence toward God and toward man.

When John Bunyan was apprehended he would have been discharged if he had simply promised not to speak any more in the name of Jesus. "But," said Bunyan, "I told him (the judge) as to this matter I was at a point with him; for if I was out of prison to day I would preach the gospel tomorrow by the help of God." The result was on one hand twelve years in Bedford jail, and on the other "The Pilgrim's Progress" with its immeasurable honor to the writer and blessing to the world. Bunyan was striving after a good conscience.

It is said that the hour of the day can be told between the tropics by the motion of the magnetic needle as well as by the oscillations of the mercury in the barometer, the mysterious march of the needle being equally influenced by the course of the sun and change of place upon the earth's surface. There are regions of the earth where the seaman, enveloped for days in fog, without light of the sun or stars, without all other means of ascertaining the time, can still accurately determine the hour by the variation of the dip of the needle, and know whether he be to the north or south of the port towards which he would steer his course. And does not every enlightened man carry with him an inward monitor which in like manner enables him rightly to steer his course amid all the conflicting experiencies and raging tempests of his daily life?

Whether it be called conscience it matters not. We are not concerned about the name when we are conscious of the power. That power we know exists, and is our safe regulator and unfailing guide.

The Spirit's Approach.—John 16: 13.

Oftentimes, when walking in a wood near sunset, though the sun himself be hid by the height and bushiness of the trees around, yet we know that he is still above the horizon, from seeing his beams in the open glades before us, illumining a thousand leaves, the several brightnesses of which are so many evidences of his presence. Thus it is with the Holy Spirit, he works in secret, but his work is manifest in the lives of all true Christians. Lamps, so heavenly, have been lit from on high.—Julius ...

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE next time any one calls on you for a subscription to the new church organ, new seats, new bell, or anything of the kind, remind them of the debts of our Boards. Churches in China and Africa and Mexico have neither pastors nor houses; and millions of heathen have no Saviour. Let us complete the house before we put on the extras.

THE Raleigh State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, which has had more of the public funds these last two years than any institution in the State, is now grasping for $30,000 more. Give it that, and it will call for $50,000. The rule is that the more protection infant industries and State colleges receive the more they ask for. The A. & M. College's income last year was $32,250.

CHURCHES are pledging to double their offerings for missions. North Carolina should come up nobly. Let every pastor see to it that every Baptist church member in the State gives something with a willing heart to missions before the Convention meets in May.

Is it unreasonable to ask every Missionary Baptist to give to missions?

If this question is answered by affirmative action, it will not be North Carolina's fault if the Boards do not report "balances on hand" at Washington. God grant it.

IT IS poor economy to appropriate ten thousand dollars a year to an institution that had a surplus of $3,345 last year—the hardest year financially in half a century; and, poorer still, when the institution is paying $100 a year for keeping its orphans when other institutions, larger or smaller, keep theirs at the rate of $50 each,—and keep them well; and poorer still when the official organ of that institution announces that it is denominational, and declares that its control is not in the hands of the State; and poorer still when that denomination is able—and many of its members are willing, too,—to take care of its orphans.

DR. DURHAM has printed an article in the secular papers exposing several misrepresentations in the recent five column series of statements published by University authorities. In the same article he shows by figures taken from the University's books and facts taken from the approved history of the University that gradual discontinuance of State-aid will not affect the institution. He might take the history of education and show further that in addition to helping the common schools, discontinuance of State-aid to higher education will stimulate all worthy higher education.

The University article is palpably weak. Dr. Durham's treatment of it has left nothing to be said.

THERE is a disposition in some quarters to attribute the debt of the Boards to bad methods. The foreign mission debt is due, as the RECORDER, which disapproved the effort, feared, to the Centennial Year extra pressure. No one could anticipate the financial troubles, and the Board sent out workers without apprehension of such hard times. The debt will have proved a great blessing if it awakens Southern Baptists to their duty to Go or Send. Those who use other than Board methods have failed to raise the amounts expected. As well attribute decrease of business in a grocery store to bad methods as to attribute the decreased incomes of our Boards to anything but decrease of the incomes of the Baptists of the South.

Now is the time to prove our zeal: Rally to the work, when to rally means something. Let every pastor awaken his people.

THE General Assembly cannot avoid going on record on the liquor question.

To adjourn without doing anything is to go on record as giving liquor-sellers special privileges.

To pass the proposed law is to go on record as giving every community the opportunity of saying whether liquor shall be sold in it. Could less be asked?

They who fear the liquor vote are unworthy of a Christian's support. They who vote against giving every community in the State the opportunity to decide the question of liquor selling for itself, are confessedly well-disposed toward liquor selling or afraid of the liquor vote. In either case, the plain duty of Christians is to turn them down as in duty of representing Christians.

Send in petitions; every one helps.

THE RISE OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—NO. 3.

4. In our last article we pointed out some fatal errors, growing out of a perversion of of the rite of baptism, which paved the way for the Roman hierarchy. It is a fact worthy of notice that history affords no instance of a church holding wrong views of baptism and at the same time holding, in all other respects, right views of the Christian system. Vitiate baptism and you vitiate the Church. The heretical churches of the early centuries were no exception. When that rite had mysteriously assumed the power of transmitting salvation to those who received it, the Lord's Supper followed in its wake as a saving sacrament, while the ordinances gradually increased from two to seven. A reception of the consecrated bread from priestly hands was supposed to have the magical effect of cleansing from sins committed after baptism; and the bread, soaked in wine, was believed, when placed between an infant's lips, to accomplish its salvation! We are not surprised, then, that Infant Communion was practiced by the Roman Apostasy for six centuries; and we make bold to say also, that infant communion is not more absurd than infant baptism—both of them the childish vagaries of a superstitious age. The communion was given, moreover, by proxy to dead persons; while "people," says a converted Catholic priest, "going on long journeys were accustomed to take the wafer with them in their pockets to preserve them from fire and water, and ward off evil spirits." It was in this way supposed to act as a charm!

5. These corrupted ordinances point back to the corrupted clergy that administered them. A ministry that is not sound in the doctrines is not sound in the life of Christianity. If some say that doctrine is but the shell of religion, we reply that when the shell is rotten no good fruit will be found within. So the saddest tale of woe we have to tell is that which records the shameful apostasy of the ministry in the early centuries. The rise of the Pope as the head of a vicious priest-hood is a genuine instance of evolution, though like much other evolution, a progress backwards. This change seems to have begun in the first century, and involved a radical reconstruction of the Christian ministry after the three fold priesthood of the Jews. By this arrangement, the bishops filled the office of the high priests, the elders that of the priests, and the deacons that of the Levites. In the apostolic church there were but two orders in the ministry, namely, bishop, called also elder, pastor, or preacher, and deacon. Even before the death of Paul some churches had a plurality of pastors, as now some Baptist churches have assistant pastors. One from among these equal pastors was put forward as a leader among his fellow elders, under the title of bishop or president. Since the bishop indicates oversight more clearly than pastor or elder, it naturally was chosen to designate the officer bearing the chief responsibilities. This officer long retained with his title of bishop also that of elder. He was indeed the presiding officer of the college of pastors. The power of the bishop gradually increased, inasmuch as the city was the stronghold of Christianity, and he was looked up to by neighboring country pastors for advice and help. In this way the surrounding country churches were taken, in some degree, under the watchcare of the city pastor. The larger the city, the more powerful the bishop. Just so now; when abroad, the city preacher is called on for all acts of public worship, while the little town pastor is not allowed to say grace. "In this way, the bishops of the city churches kept extending their jurisdiction beyond the bounds of a single church and the congregations assembling in one city, until, at length, they were converted, by this process and that which is about to be mentioned, into metropolitan or diocesan bishops, corresponding in all important particulars to the diocesan bishops of the present day. Thus was laid the first stone of the foundation of episcopal domination in nearly every land in which Christianity had yet been propagated."

As the influence of the bishops increased, their pride and greed of power likewise increased; especially is this true of the bishop of Rome. He exchanged the office of bishop for that of archbishop or metropolitan; then he grew into a patriarch; and in the year 606 he became pope. Of course so great a transition was the outgrowth of errors both Jewish and pagan, which long before had begun to work as the "mystery of iniquity" recorded in sacred writ.

The Romish priests had been becoming more and more corrupt through the ages. When Constantine ascended the throne in 306, he became the patron of Christianity, and welded together in unholy alliance Church and State with the hammer of uncompromising despotism. This was a sad time for Christianity, but a gala day for the priests. They now became openly profane and licentious; they were grasping and ambitious; and withal were a reproach even to paganism itself. This fact caused Proetextatus, the heathen prefect of the city, to exclaim, "Make me Bishop of Rome, and I'll be a Christian too!"

6. The old adage, "like priest like people," finds a striking verification in the history of Romanism. A changed ministry produced a changed church. The transformation of the church, as that of the clergy, was gradual. The church at first was spiritual; it began to grow carnal, and was largely affected by the Jewish idea of the temple. But the temple was a national affair; so the church in the reign of Constantine became a State institution. The temple had an elaborate ritual; so the dying church introduced imposing ceremonies and fascinating liturgies. Christianity addressed itself to the heart, Romanism to the eye and ear. Christianity exalted God, Popery exalted man—and him a bad man. The Apostolic churches taught salvation by grace, the Papacy taught redemption by works. The Gospel taught that the Deity alone has power to forgive sins; Rome taught that the priests can absolve from sin. Thus developed the man of sin, "the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God."

Having now given a brief outline of the rise of the Papacy, we shall show later the fruits of their tremendous scheme of idolatry; and as we have portrayed the Jewish side of Romanism, we shall state the pagan side.

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

Dear Recorder:—Will you kindly mention Scripture references as to the baptism of Christ's disciples who were with him at the institution of the Lord's Supper, and oblige

A SUBSCRIBER.

ANSWER.—None but the Apostles were present with Jesus at the Supper. Two of these had certainly been John the Baptist's disciples as thus stated: "The two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus." John 1: 37. These were Andrew, and no doubt, John, who was too modest to mention his own name. John, the Forerunner, baptized his disciples and thus prepared them for the ministry of Jesus. It is safe to conclude that all the Apostles had been his disciples and had received his baptism. Acts 1: 22 bears on this subject—"Beginning with the baptism of John, unto that same day that He was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection." If the Apostle who was to take Judas' place was required to be familiar with the life of Christ from the time of his baptism by John, why should not it have been necessary for all the Apostles to be acquainted with John's baptism. That Christ should have sent out men to baptize others, when, though they had every opportunity, were themselves unbaptized is incapable of explanation. When the Master asked his disciples if they were able to be baptized with the baptism that he was baptized with, he surely implied that they had followed him in water baptism.

If it should be urged that no specific record has been kept of the time and place of the baptism in each case, we answer that there is no such record as to their saying their prayers; and it would be as reasonable to suppose that Jesus sent men to preach who did not pray, as to conjecture that he commissioned them to baptize when they were themselves unbaptized.

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY AT WAKE FOREST.

This occasion, which is always anticipated with great pleasure by the students, was greatly interfered with by the bad weather Friday. The ground was covered with snow, and more came about 9 o'clock Friday night. Notwithstanding, a fair audience appeared, to take part in the exercises. The debate, which came off at 7 o'clock in the evening, was presided over by William Royall, Jr. It was only a few years ago—at least that is the way it appears now—the members of the same Greek Class had the unusual luck one day to be excused from recitation, it was the birth-day of the boy who was to-day President at the sixtieth anniversary. We must be allowed to say he did it well, mixing just enough of embarrassment and timidity in his brief administration to show he is on the way his "fathers trod."

The query, "Should the House of Lords be abolished?" was discussed by Messrs. Boyles and Meekins for the affirmative, and Messrs. Kerr and Rozier for the negative. Each of these gentlemen have a twenty minutes speech which is written and supposed to be committed to memory, and then at the close each one had a rejoinder of ten minutes.

Mr. Meekins added interest to his first speech—which, by the way, was good—by declining in his second to enter the arena of joke making, or rather of reciting some which had been made long ago. Few men can afford to be funny—none can afford to try.

The affirmative had greatly the advantage in sides of the question, discussed before an American audience.

Mr. Boyles claimed that the political, social, religious and domestic troubles, the suffering, sickness, and most of the deaths of the English people were directly traceable to the existence of the House of Lords.

Mr. Meekins, his colleague on the affirmative, dwelt with effect on the evils of one-man power and the injustice of hereditary authority.

The negative was on the defensive from the first. Mr. Kerr, the first speaker, broke in the middle of his speech, and his friends thought he was hopelessly gone, and if he had not shown more real grit than is usual on such occasions, this would have been the case. But after the most persistent unbuttoning of his vest, adjusting his collar and cravat, which were just perfect, walking the rostrum and using much water, he got "back to the facts," and his speech was, I doubt not, the better for his wanderings and return.

Mr. Rozier, the second speaker on the negative, was evidently in love with his side of the question, and put in some good work to begin with. But his memory proved treacherous, and so he had to cancel the last half of his first speech. This is sometimes fortunate for a young speaker. It is one thing to know a speech well enough to repeat it when alone, but quite another thing to speak it out aloud. Mr. Rozier is a bright student, and quite young, and has plenty of time to make all needed amends.

The orations before the Literary Societies were delivered by Mr. W. C. Newton of the Philomathesian, and Mr. R. T. Daniel of the Euzelian. These orations compared favorably with any ever delivered here on a similar occasion. Mr. Newton had for his subject, "The Pound of Flesh." He discussed in a vigorous and practical manner the evils of the present credit system.

Mr. Daniel had for his theme, "The Iron Prince." In beautiful language, arranged into sentences with rare skill, he discussed the life of Bismarck and his influence on the German empire.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....The decision taxing the property of the Louisville Seminary has been reversed.

....The last census declares that there are one million habitual drinkers in the United States.

....The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools will meet in Missions Rooms on Tuesday, Feb. 26th, at 7:30 p. m.

....The Jenkins meetings with Brother Pruett at Charlotte were well attended considering the state of the weather.

....One hundred and fifty persons joined the Baptist church at Fredericksburg, Va., during a meeting conducted by Rev. W. P. Hines.

....Rev. T. J. Frisbee has been preaching in Madison county with good results. In four meetings there have been more than one hundred conversions.

....Secretary Willingham hopes to raise $25,000 from the cities and $50,000 in the towns and counties, before the Convention. Let's help him for Jesus' sake.

....The last census declares that about twenty-two million four hundred thousand youths are in attendance upon our institutions of learning in the United States.

....We regret to learn that Rev. G. O. Wilhoit has been suffering from a malarial attack and inflamatory sore throat. We trust that he has gotten much better.

....We regret to learn that Hon. Elijah Shaw of Massachusetts, the chief benefactor of the Raleigh Shaw University, is suffering painful injuries from a fall received the other day.

... Rev. D. J. Harris has begun the publication of a monthly medium of communication for the Beulah Association—the Pen Stroke. The first number is a good one, containing an able sermon.

... Rev. J. H. Vernon's recovery after twenty days of dangerous illness with pneumonia is reason for great gratitude to God. He was in the hands of kind friends near Roxboro throughout his illness.

....Rev. S. S. May writes: "Rev. N. S. Jones's suggestion is a good one. Most of the churches of the Yadkin Association started up that way. The RECORDER gets better. Sandy Springs church has received thirty by baptism since October last."

....Our rule is to "help the most needy." We never ask the poor little orphans if they are Baptists. Baptists control the Orphanage, but they are not selfish enough to confine the benefits of the Orphanage to their own children.—Charity and Children.

....E. K. Proctor, Jr., of Lumberton, a solid Baptist, and a lawyer who has the confidence of all who have come in contact with him, was a pleasant visitor to this office last week. Of course the Lumberton brethren and sisters are starting out well with their new pastor, Bro. Johnson.

....It will be to our mutual advantage if the pastors will urge their people to take advantage of our offer of the RECORDER from Jan. 9th to May 10th for fifty cents; this is less than three cents a week. Who cannot afford that? One cent extra, and we send an Almanac, a copy of which every Baptist ought to hang by his fireside.

....Bro. Robert P. Walker writes from Hillsboro: "Our church at Bethesda is prospering. Two have joined this year. The work is more hopeful than ever before. We expect to finish our house this year."

....On being told that he would not recover, the late Dr. A. J. Gordon had only one word to say, and that was "Victory." How fitting an end of this life; how appropriate the watchword of his entrance into eternity!

....Rev. G. L. Merrell, one of our most efficient young preachers, has changed his address from Franklinville to Star, Montgomery county. Bro. Merrell did good and lasting work on his former field, and we are sure his influence for good will be felt broadly in Montgomery.

....The President of the University says that 462 students are on the University's rolls; the Registrar wrote the RECORDER recently that 461 had been enrolled—all above ten years old. We believe both of them will try to qualify their respective statements before the Assembly adjourns.

....Hon. John F. Brown, Governor of the Seminole Nation, has been ordained a Baptist minister. He is a well educated and able man and can do great good among both the Seminoles and Muskokees (or Creeks.) The old chief, Rev. John Jumper, is still alive and actively engaged in Christian work. —Rev. J. S. Murrow, in Baptist and Reflector.

....Rev. J. S. Corpening, who took a course at the Seminary after graduating at Wake Forest, writes from Union City, Tenn.: "Our work here is moving very nicely. The field is large, five thousand inhabitants, and the opportunities are greater than I can utilize. We have been recently blessed with a great revival, and the church is now in working order."

....Rev. T. J. Taylor requests us to announce that the Warren Union will meet at Macon on Friday before the fifth Sunday in March. If the brethren send them in time, we purpose publishing programs of all the Union Meetings and Sunday-school Associations in the RECORDER of March 6th. To do this, the programs should be in our hands by February 27th.

....A salaried Oxford Asylum official thinks the fact that the editor of the RECORDER is "a Mason and a Christian" would keep him from trying to have the State appropriation to the Asylum stopped. We believe it will help the Asylum and the Masons to make them independent of the State, for we know the Masons would support their Asylum sufficiently well unaided.

...."I wish to join hands with Bro. N. S. Jones in the aggressive movement to carry the gospel into the regions beyond. For some time I have been holding about one meeting a year of this kind, and already have a place selected for one this year, but might do more. United, judicious effort along this line will accomplish much for the Master's kingdom."—Rev. C. E. Gower.

....With the RECORDER at fifty cents for nineteen weeks, running a series of articles especially designed to indoctrinate, there can be no excuse for weak memberships any longer. Remember we have an extra supply of last issue and this issue, in order that new subscribers may get the benefit of the entire series. If the money is not convenient, we will send the paper on any pastor's security.

....The Presbyterians of Scotland—at least, the sturdy, true-blue ones—are up in arms because a young preacher has introduced ritualism into St. Giles church of Edinburg. This is the church in which the immortal Jennie Geddes threw her stool at the head of the preacher who attempted the Episcopal service, and by her action began the revolution which made Scotland Presbyterian.—Western Recorder.

....Rev. J. R. Jones, returned home from Cape Charles, Va., Sunday. He has decided to move down there and take charge of two churches and a mission station. We are sorry that he is going to leave us, and when we say sorry we express the sentiment of this entire community.—Milton Times. We regret that Bro. Jones will leave this State. He has served the Lord long and well in our Convention, and we expect to hear of a blessed work through him in Virginia.

....The amount of money given by the General Assembly of 1893 to higher education was $180,000. This, had it been given to the public schools, would have given, during the past two years, in addition to the schools the children have had, a three months public school in each township in every county in North Carolina. There are about 960 townships, and $66 on an average gives a three months' school. For the benefit of the Patron and Gleaner, please understand that we say township.

....The salary of one professor of the University at Chapel Hill is $2,500, that of ten others each $2,000, of two others each $1,600, of one other $1,500 of four others each $600. There are many other employees; so that the total annual salary bill of the University is about $38,700. Why are the salaries at the University from five to ten hundred dollars more annually than the salaries of the professors at Trinity College, Davidson College and Wake Forest College? Is it because the salaries at the University are paid by the appropriations made by the General Assembly, out of taxes of the people?—C. Durham.

....The beautiful building of the First Baptist church, Huntsville, Ala., of which our friend, Rev. Oscar Haywood, is the popular pastor, has just been completed. It has a seating capacity of nearly 1,000. Bro. Haywood has been preaching, during the erection of the building, in the City Hall, and large audiences have attended upon His ministry. It is expected that Dr. Hawthorne, of Atlanta, Ga., will preach the sermon at the dedication of the church. Bro. Haywood's Tennessee friends will be glad to hear of his great success in Huntsville.—Baptist and Reflector.

....We must run up to seven thousand subscribers. We know we can, if you, pastors especially, but any reader who will, cooperate with us. It will build up any community for Baptists, if the series of articles that we have arranged can be disseminated among its residents, no one is too poor to pay fifty cents for the RECORDER from January 9th to May 15th. Begin subscriptions with January 9th, as not one of the articles should be missed.

....The weather did not keep our good friends from sending us a gratifying number of subscribers last week. They came from brethren J. I. Lennon of Lyons, Ga., T. R. Walker, Warren Plains, R. P. Walker, Hillsboro, N. C., J. A. Ballentine, Jonesboro, N. C., G. L. Merrell, Star, N. C., W. R. Cullom, Louisville, Ky., and Sister J. T. Maddrey, Seaboard, N. C., who "enjoys the RECORDER more and more," and "hopes we will a cure the desired 7,000." Thank you.

....It is with genuine regret that we note the retirement of Judge R. W. Winston from the Superior Court bench. He was not only a fair, faithful and highly competent Judge, but his fine store of plain common sense, and his easy and natural bearing, made him a favorite both with the bar and people who had business in his courts. He returns to the bar under most favorable conditions. The appointment of A. W. Graham, Esq., is an admirable one, and we believe his career will be as able as that of Judge Winston.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield wishes us to say that, while he has spoken in complimentary terms of the Greensboro Normal and Industrial School, he does not want to be understood as saying that the RECORDER has misrepresented the School in the least. Bro. Stringfield was interviewed at Greensboro by a reporter, and some of the papers have been trying to make capital of his good opinion. Throughout the State aid controversy, the RECORDER columns have been open to both sides, and they are still open. It is impossible for the RECORDER to misrepresent any school whose friends are active enough to write for it.

....As we anticipated, the Orphans' Friend, organ of the Oxford Orphan Asylum, is now claiming that it was incorrect in the statement that the Asylum is denominational. We rather think it was accidentally correct. It is impossible to make us believe that the Asylum is not a servant and an agency of Methodists in the control of Methodists. However, in fairness, we have no objection to publishing the following letter from the editor of the Orphans' Friend: "You will see by referring to the Orphans' Friend of the 15th that I recognized and acknowledged the mistake made in last week's issue in reference to the Oxford Orphan Asylum being denominational, and have corrected the same. I hope it will be your pleasure to publish this letter, so that the correction may be given as much notice as the error. I regret exceedingly having made such a misstatement."

....We concur in the following high estimate of Elder Livingston Johnston, which appeared in the Southern Index of Rockingham: "Mr. Johnson preached his final sermon at the Baptist church last Sunday morning. It was a lovely morning, and the crowded church plainly showed the great esteem in which Mr. Johnson is held by our people. His sermon was so timely and impressive that it will long linger in the memory of all who attended. He spoke of the faithfulness with which he had tried to perform the sacred duty of pastor, and many a tear could be seen in the congregation. Mr. Johnson has been loved and revered by our people, and they are sorely bereaved at his departure. He came to this place six years ago a young man just from the Louisville Seminary. He is now one of the foremost pastors of the State, and is held in high regard by everybody. Our loss is Lumberton's gain. No steps have yet been taken as to his successor."

....Senator Farthing has introduced a bill to reduce the appropriation to the Oxford Orphan Asylum one half. It deserves support. The Asylum has a surplus of $3,845 on hand after maintaining about 200 orphans in 1894 at a cost of $100 each. Other asylums, in North Carolina and in other States, maintain orphans at less than sixty dollars each. It should be done at Oxford. The News and Observer says Mr. Farthing "wants to turn out one half of the little children to the cold blasts of the friendless world." This is the voice of ignorance and prejudice; and we are surprised that it comes from the Observer under the new management. The Masons are not in the habit of turning out orphans to cold blasts, nor are the Methodists. And besides, the Observer ought to know that the Asylum's present income, apart from the State, is sufficient to support its inmates with management as economic as that of other orphans' homes. By the way, "friendless world" is doleful enough, but we dot grasp its significance in this connection.

....Dr. Pritchard, of Charlotte, N. C., stated in a recent sermon, that, other things being equal, Baptists ought to trade with Baptists. We cannot see anything wrong with that. Other things being equal, Baptists know Baptists better, do they not? It ought to be the most natural thing in the world for followers of the same faith to stand together. The fact is, all other denominations do stand closely together, but Baptists have never had the organization sufficient. The Methodists openly make Methodism a bond of union in business. The Episcopalians stand together, because they are few and have to stand alone; and Presbyterians are as clannish as good Scotchmen. Now we do not contend that a Baptist ought not trade with other Christians; that would hurt our denomination as a denomination, and would work hardship to some of its members. But we do think that, other things being equal, church fellowship should be of sufficient weight to turn the balanced scales. The truth is, to true Baptists the bond of church fellowship is the most binding of bonds.

....Kind contemporaries are warning us that we will "get left," if we do not "catch on to" the wild Y. P. National or Southern organization manias. Probably our thoughtful friends have "caught on" in fear lest they be left; but it happens that we believe there are worse things than being left;—and, pardon us, one of them is leaving the Word of God. However, while we fear several States will be led by fearful organs into approval of the National B. Y. P. U. or a Southern Union, we are sure that the great body of the Baptists of North Carolina are going to work with and for the young people along the existing lines.

....The BIBLICAL RECORDER did not make its point clear when it took our two allusions about the proposed Female University of that state for we thought that Raleigh was to give $22,000. and yet only $19,000 is looked upon and that we suppose includes the $10,000 which a sister wishes the priveledge of giving but hasn't done it. We have great compassion for the RECORDER for it can't wield neither the plow nor the sword but it is a good paper all the same.—Atlantic Baptist, (word for word and letter for letter). And Brother Speight can neither write nor comprehend correct English; but his intentions are good. But once more, $19,000 has been raised for the Baptist Female University.

The Royall Chair.

I suppose that few men are appealed to for money so much as preachers. This is as it should be. It gives us an opportunity to carry out Peter's injunction to elders that they become "ensamples to the flock." I have given money a few times in my life when I did not want to do so. I acted from expediency more than from a cheerful, willing heart. But as a rule, I give because I want to give, and love the objects to which I give.

While this is true of my giving in general, I don't think of any contribution that I ever made which gave me so much pleasure as that which I have pledged to give for the endowment of the Royall Chair at Wake Forest. I feel that the same reasons which move my heart to pray and sacrifice for the success of this object ought to move the heart of every Baptist in North Carolina in the same direction. With the hope that some one may be led to think of this, I give two or three of my reasons:

1. As one of Dr. Royall's students, I want to see his name permanently connected with the College.

The full force of this reason can be felt only by his students. I was requested some time ago to prepare an article giving some account of the ministers that have influenced me most. I have not time to prepare the article, but my mind went back to Dr. Royall at once. I can't think of any sermon or saying of his that had anything like a revolutionary effect upon my life. I only know that each year I feel the influence of his life on mine grow stronger and more definite.

I recall here an incident which may show what I am speaking of. It occurred about the time Robert Elsmere was being so much discussed. Several students were talking near the College campus, when Dr. Royall chanced to pass us. One who was not too strong in the faith pointed to him and said, "Whatever may come or not come, there is an argument for Christianity which I can never doubt."

How many are the minds that have been saved from shipwreck by that living argument! Was it you? Was it your boy? For me to think of Wake Forest College is to think of Dr. Royall, and as one who loves his memory, it does me good and gives me pleasure to contribute my mite toward perpetuating his name in connection with the College.

2. I owe it to the College as one of the Baptists of North Carolina.

This appeals to me from several standpoints:

(1) Because of past struggles and triumphs. When I think of how the Legislature of North Carolina in 1833 "grudgingly" granted a meagre charter for Wake Forest College "by only a single vote, and that the casting vote of the Speaker"; when I think of the financial struggles of the College in its early days, and again just after the war, and of the arduous labors and heroic sacrifices of Elder Jas. Purefoy and others; when I think of the generous friends whom God has raised up for the College in times of special need; when I look at the record of the College, the number and the stamp of men she has sent out, I am filled with gratitude to God, and feel that I ought to make a thanksgiving offering for the way she has been guided through her struggles, and stands to-day as a fitting monument to the fidelity of the North Carolina Baptists of the past generation.

(2) Because of present needs. It is not always a healthy sign to see one's wants increasing. To be always wanting more and more may be a sign of extravagance and profligacy. But to see one's actual needs increasing is a sign of growth and prosperity. Our first little pantaloons of which we were so proud had to be laid aside very soon if there was healthy growth. With all healthy growth come larger needs. The growth of Wake Forest has not been spasmodic: it has been normal and healthy. The College is on a firmer basis to-day. But there is actual need, and we as the Baptists of North Carolina are the ones to supply this need. I do wish it could be said that every Baptist of the State had done something to make this present movement a success. Let each one of us say "as far as success depends on me it is assured." God does not expect impossibilities of us, but let each one make sure that he has done his best.

(3) Because of my hopes for the future. I have great faith in and hope for the future of Wake Forest College. I have the same with regard to the Baptists of the State, and the same with regard to the State itself. This faith and these hopes move me to want to put a few dollars into that Institution which is to be so intimately connected with all that is good in the development of our people as a denomination as well as in the development of our State.

3. As a friend of the voluntary system for higher education.

The issues of the present contest on the question of higher education are vital and far reaching. The merits and demerits of each system are being clearly opened to the people. There is no doubt but that the voluntary system must ultimately prevail. But no system can accomplish its end without united and persistent effort on the part of its advocates. We should see that the right system is guaranteed by our action at the ballot-box. We should see that this system is carried out by letting our "prayers and our alms go up together" for the success of our system.

W. R. CULLOM.

A Timely Criticism by "Old Man."

Some things are brought to our notice in a recent RECORDER by "Old Man" that are worthy of serious thought. While this writer is yet quite young in the ministry, he has had repeated opportunities to test the truth of "Old Man's" words. I am glad, for one, that he still lives with so much of happy reliance upon the gospel and its methods and power to save the world,—and that he is moved by worthy convictions to sound a note of alarm against the "abuse of revivals" by undue manipulations on the part of the ministry. I believe in revivals of religion. I believe further that it was intended (as evidenced by the examples of the Apostles and the approval of the Holy Spirit in his accompaniment of the labors of those who still meet and preach the Word, in humble reliance upon the work of the Spirit), that the greater number of the people who are to be saved, should date their religious impressions to the work of protracted efforts. It is, then, that the minds of the people are constantly directed to the words of truth, and the mercy and the tender compassion of a loving Saviour. This leads to serious reflection. It softens the heart and prepares the way for truth to enter and take root—the power of which must "set the captive free" if he would be "free indeed." (John 8: 32).

It is a good time and place for self examination—for hearts to grow tender toward each other—for feuds and unkind feelings between man and man to be buried,—a thing which in itself stimulates the production and growth of grace. But after all we are to rely upon the faithful ministration of the Word for any real effects (1 Cor. 1: 21).

Excitement may affect to "coil the writhing serpent" for a time, but the superficiality of its work will be betrayed, when the heat of temptation again rises to excite the passion for sin.

Another trouble must naturally follow a meeting when undue efforts are made to count a great number of converts. Besides an effort to satisfy them that they are Christians (a work which the Bible relegates to the Holy Spirit: see John 3: 63; Rom. 8: 16; Eph. 3: 16, and 1 John 5: 5) by every human device in arguments, and real or affected experiences, an organized effort must be made "to get them into the church." Committees are appointed either openly or covertly to "persuade them to join the church to save them from apostacy." This is a slander of Christianity. It puts a small estimate indeed upon the work of "grace in the heart." It acknowledges the lack of genuine conversion which makes the possessor feel that the church is his home, and which will leads him to seek admission into it in the face of opposition. (Acts 9: 26).

Oh, for a church that is filled with people whom God converts, and who will seek admission into its fellowship! They would love it and honor it with their sacrifices, and would themselves feel honored to be a "doorkeeper in the house of the Lord." We would not have to "set traps" to catch the wandering ones; nor hedge them into "earthly built folds" to harness them up for Christian service.

"Old Man" Heartily Approved.

Dear Recorder:—In the RECORDER of the 6th inst. I see an article headed "Revivals" over the signature of "Old Man." I simply wish to say, I second the said article and request the same "Old Man" to come again and stay longer.

I think I am safe in saying that if every professed Christian whose name is enrolled on a Baptist church-book in Eastern North Carolina would read the article and heed its teachings, we would have less deadheads and drones, and more Christian workers named on our church-books; we would have less church indebtedness and more money in our church treasury; we would have less style and modern preaching and more pastors in our pulpits; we would have less show, form and fashion and more godly men and women in our pews; would have less preachers lookers after lucrative fields, and more enquiring "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" and last but not least, we would have a converted and godly church membership; we would pay as we go and owe no man anything, hence begging preachers and church-debts would be things of the past.

"Old Man," let us hear your bugle notes of warning oftener and along the same line. While you may be an old man, those who are "bearing the burden and heat of the day" will never deem you an old fogy.

Columbia, N. C., Feb. 11, 1895.

Ex Gov. W. J. Northen, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Southern Baptist Convention, has become connected with the well-known Southern Cultivator, for which he has been a frequent contributor many years. We are sure the acquisition of Gov. Northen will increase the usefulness of this reliable monthly.

Sunday-schools.

"Why did the churches of the South organize a Southern Baptist Sunday school Board," &c.?—Biblical Recorder. Stopping there, I would say, so far as some are concerned, to neglect it. One of the objects in view was to build up our own Sunday school literature.

Examining the minutes of the Flat River Association, 1894, I was struck with the artistic appearance of the cover; it bears earmarks of being furnished to hand. It is full of advertisements of the American Baptist Publication Society, and the last page is devoted entirely to S. S. literature. I then examined the inside, the minutes, and turned to the report on Sunday schools, and not a word is said about our Southern literature.

Ever since the Southern Baptist Convention undertook the publication of the S. S. literature, I have given my views and influence (if I have any influence) in favor of patronizing it. If we do not patronize our own enterprise, we will never build up any. They will not grow up of themselves like pine trees. Just think of it! Our own people publishing S. S. literature as good as the best, if not a little better, and some of us failing to patronize it! It has been said that we ought to have our own printing establishment. Even so. But how can we have any thing without patronage, and the patronage must come from among ourselves.

I am not opposing the American Baptist Publication Society, or their publications, though I have seen from time to time some sharp adverse criticism of some of their S. S. publications, but I want us to cultivate our own plantation. I am opposed, however, on general principles, to huge, overshadowing monopolies. I think the South ought to have a publishing house, and the West one, (and they are making a start in that direction), and publish S. S. and other Baptist literature specially adapted to the wants of the different sections, and each section ought to give special patronage to their own literature.

If the S. B. Convention should divide, I think it would be better. The yearly meetings have become to large and handsome. They ought to divide or cut down their membership at least one half. But I must stop here.

Retrospective and Prospective.

For a little more than two years the writer of these lines has been trying to warn men and women to "flee from the wrath to come," and to edify those who have enlisted in the fight against evil. His unworthiness and incompetency have ever stared him in the face; but he realizes that God is to, and does, take the "weak things to confound the mighty," and, therefore, he leaves all in the hands of him whom it has been his good fortune to serve.

Since the fall of 1893 it has been our pleasure to serve four churches as pastor. It was ever our purpose to be as faithful as we could. During the time thus spent, ties have been formed that death alone can sever. We shall ever remember with pleasure the brethren with whom we have labored. Our service as pastor has now ended for the present.

On last Sunday we preached our last sermon at Cleveland, and closed our work there as pastor. It has been, indeed, a pleasure to serve this church. We were with them just a year, but that was long enough to become very much attached to them; for to know them is to love them.

This is a hard field. There are only a few Baptists (but a noble few they are), and they are surrounded by "isms." I have learned more about some "sects" since taking charge of this work than I had ever learned before. They are now without a pastor. They need a good, consecrated man of God to live among them. It is their purpose to get some one if they can. The work that is to be done can be done only by a resident pastor. May the Lord send just such a one as they need.

As I look out into the future, I see before me several years of school life. It was hard for us to give up the loved work, but realizing that God requires us to make the best use of our opportunities, we felt it our duty to better prepare for the great work He has given us to do. Our eyes are now turned toward that institution which has done so much for North Carolina and the world—Wake Forest College.

Fraternally, A. W. SETZER.

Reverse It.

I mean your Sunday-school lecture. If you lecture at all, do it in connection with the reading of the general lesson of the whole school before the teachers take their classes. Thus all, even the little children, will become interested, new life will spring up, and success will crown the exercises of the day.

Let me repeat: Give instruction on the lesson in the opening exercises, so that teacher and pupil may have the benefit of that instruction in the study of the lesson.

A man says: "Boys, go and plant that field of corn, and then come and circle around me, and I will lecture you on corn-planting." Every one can see at once that the lecture comes at the wrong end.

In conclusion, let me say: After the teachers have heard their classes, call the whole school around the organ, and with a few inspiriting songs, adjourn.

"THE WORK OF AN EVANGELIST."

It seems to me that the Lord is speaking to the preachers of North Carolina through Bro. N. B. Jones. May the Lord stir the hearts of all the pastors and such laymen as they would have to aid them, to go forth at once in the execution of the dear brother's plans. These plans need no amendment.

Literary.

The Dictionary of Scientific Illustrations and Symbols.—The first sentence of this strikingly attractive book describes aptly its purpose—"Scientific facts arranged so as to be of immediate use to men who require a suggestive topic, a forcible analogy, a cogent symbol, or a suitable illustration." And every one of the four hundred pages is a fulfillment of that purpose. While the two very full and careful indexes, one of 'General Topics,' the other of 'Natural Objects,' adapt the volume to the readiest use of all for whom it is designed. Then the comprehensive 'List of Authorities at the end, giving the words referred to and explaining the abbreviations used to indicate them, is of manifest advantage to all who want to realize that they are safe in the use of the illustration they employ in pulpit or on platform; in the mission of the orator, or the twin mission of the author. How vastly illustrations that are apt and accurate enrich the true teacher—be his sphere what it may—everyone knows. With such a book as this available, no one need be without such wealth. In each instance the illustration is linked, simply, but inextricably with the lesson it is to teach, and to stand ready for prompt and direct use. Here argument can find apt analogies, irony polished shafts, and pathos resistless appeals. 8vo. cloth, 420 pages, $3 00 postpaid. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 3 Cooper Union, New York.

A Request.

To the Churches of the Atlantic Baptist Association:—I ask for space in the RECORDER to request the Clerks of the churches belonging to the Atlantic Baptist Association to send to me such facts relating to the organization and history of each church as are worthy of preservation. I see from reading the minutes of the last session of the Association, that I was appointed its Historian. Hence, this request.

Respectfully, JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

Burpee's Seed Annual for 1895.

Always bright and original, Burpee's Farm Annual for 1895, is even better than ever before. The cover is most artistic and beautiful; lithographed in ten colors, it shows on the front an attractive bouquet of the new Sweet Peas, now so fashionable, while on the rear is a bird's eye view of Fordhook Farm, where many of Burpee's seeds are grown and where there were conducted the past season more than six thousand trials of vegetables and flowers grown from seed. This Catalogue is really a complete book on seeds, as it contains 147 pages, besides several colored plates and special circulars. The illustrations, 400 in number, are all true to nature being mostly engraved from photographs, while the descriptions of both new and standard seeds are noteworthy for their accuracy. Messrs. W. Atlee Burpee & Co. make the nominal charge of 10c. for the Farm Annual, which is less than actual cost of publication, but will be pleased to mail a copy free to any of our readers who intend to purchase seeds this spring. It contains much useful information which cannot be had in any other form, and we strongly recommend all who have occasion to buy seeds to consult the Catalogue of these well known Philadelphia Seed Growers.

"An Offer of $200.00 in Gold."

No book is selling as rapidly as "Talks to Children about Jesus." The publishers, R. H. Woodard Company, Baltimore, Md., are making a most liberal offer of $200 in gold to agents who sell within the next three months two hundred copies. The book is sold very low and is beautifully illustrated. Freight is paid and credit given. Send at once thirty-five cents for canvassing outfit and full information. They also publish other popular books.

A Wonderful Cure for Cancer.

Mrs. Betty Powers, 304 W. Marshall Street, Richmond, Va., after visiting Baltimore, Md., for treatment, as well as having received treatment from her home physicians, was given up as hopeless. Dr. Scott Mason was called, and in twenty five days gave complete relief and removed the last vestige of cancer without using knife or burning plaster.

Dr. Mason claims to be able to cure a large per cent. of so called "incurable cases" readily, without pain, and permanently. Many cases can be cured at home at small cost. Those who are afflicted should write to Dr. Scott Mason, 700 Clay Street., Richmond Va., for information, testimonials, terms, &c.

WHAT N. B. BROUGHTON SAYS.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 26, 1894.

J. D. BOUSHALL, Esq.,
Manager Atlas Life Ins. Co.,
Raleigh, N. C.

My Dear Sir:—I am to day in receipt of the Company's check on the First National Bank of New York for one thousand dollars ($1,000) in full settlement of Policy No. 213,127 on the life of the late Lewis C. Lougee, Treasurer of Wake county.

Please accept the thanks of the family for this prompt and satisfactory settlement. Mr. Lougee died on the 10th Nov., 1894. The proofs were filed with you on the 17th. The check is dated Nov. 24th.

I take great pleasure in commending your excellent Company to those looking for safe and reliable insurance.

Yours truly, N. B. BROUGHTON,
Administrator, L. C. Lougee.

I don't seem right without my old friend, the RECORDER. I am a life-time subscriber.—REV. J. A. JOINER, Elwood, Ind.

"Came to Jesus by Night."

This may have been owing to several causes. Nicodemus might have been too busy to come by day, or he might have desired a protracted interview, or he might have been timid and wished the visit to be secret, or he might have but just heard of Jesus and resolved on an immediate acquaintance, or he might have respected the saying of the rabbis that night was the best time to study the law of God. The lesson for us is that Jesus is ever ready to welcome and bless.

Night is a good time to seek Jesus. Away from the glare of day's business, it is well, in the hour of quiet thought, when shut in by darkness, to enjoy communion with him in judging the deeds of the day that is past, and planning the pursuit of the day that is to come, or in getting away from the whirl of active duty, and enjoying the refreshment of reverie. It is a joy and a strength to find him near and gain wisdom by communion. And when the night of sorrow comes, and the black, cold, dark hours of affliction roll slowly along, there is no presence that can so cheer and uphold as that of the ever-loving Lord. And when the night of doubt falls upon us, and the truths in which we have so firmly believed seem like wild birds to fly out of sight, when faith wanes and doubts darken all the atmosphere of the soul, then it is sweet to gaze upon the star of Bethlehem, and cling with resolute grasp to an ever present Saviour. And when the night of death shall come it will be glorious then, at the last opportunity for eternity, to go to Christ in the darkness, and cling to him when all other light is gone. So shall we rise to the region of endless day, where we shall be ever with him, and never more seek him in the season of night.—The Freeman.

One Tenth.

At the last meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention, Bro. A. K. Seago of Louisiana introduced a resolution in regard to giving one tenth of our income to the Lord. The resolution was referred to a committee which will report next year.

Without intending to infringe upon the matter referred to the committee, we beg leave to call attention to a few facts on this subject.

We estimate the gross income of the white Baptists of the South to be not less than an average of one dollar per day, or an aggregate of $500,000,000 per annum; one tenth of which would be $50,000,000.

Let us see how this sum would fit the requirement of our religious conditions and what amount could be applied to each object fostered by the denomination.

There are 17,000 churches to be cared for. At $500 per church, this would require $8,500,000. Then there would be required, say $100 000 in each of our fifteen States for denominational education. This would be $1,500,000.

Then we would need for orphanage and for the support of indigent ministers and for the sick and poor, say $100,000 more in each State. This would make another $1,500,000.

Then there would be required for State and Home Missions, including church buildings, say $100 000 in each State, or a total of $1,500 000. This, it seems to me, would be ample provision for these various objects, and the total would be:

Church support	$8,500,000
Education	1,500 000
Orphanage, etc	1,500 000
Home Missions	1,500 000
Total	13,000 000

There would be left $12,000,000 for Foreign Missions. [There would still be left unexpended $25 000.000 —ED. RECORDER.]

Incredulity may smile at these figures, but when our churches become earnest in their endeavors to enthrone their Christ, their offerings will greatly exceed them.—Home Field.

If God putteth no grievous cross upon you, let your brethren's cross be your cross; which is certain token of true brotherly love.—Bradford.

Oils Cure for Cancer.

Dr. Bye has discovered a combination of oils that readily cure cancer, catarrh, tumors and malignant skin diseases. He has cured over six thousand persons within the last three years, over one hundred of whom were physicians. Readers having friends afflicted should cut this out and send it to them. Books sent free, giving particulars and prices of oils. Address Dr. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.

Mocking at Sin.

What is it "to make a mock at sin?" Clearly, to speak of it in a trifling way, and to make jokes about it. A Christian man will never speak about sin without a certain awe. It is the thing which destroys the human race; it is the "abominable thing" which God hates. The Christian cannot bring himself to jest about it. It is far too solemn a matter. Other men may laugh about moral evil; or may give nicknames to Satan; or may ridicule the "preciseness", as they call it, of those who endeavor to avoid the contamination and pollution of sin. He can do nothing of the kind. Sin is too serious a matter in his eyes to jest about. But there are other ways, I think, of making a mock of sin, and one is, by glossing over wrong-doing by fair and specious names. Call a young fellow "a little wild", or "a little unsteady", when he is posting to the devil as fast as he can go; call a licentious life a "gay" life; call drunkenness and gluttony "good fellowship"; call dishonesty "smartness", and cheating "dexterity"—and, it strikes me, you are indulging in the habit attributed to the persons in our text. You are making a "mock at sin." Yet again, I think you must not acquit a man of complicity in this offence if you find him incapable of expressing indignation against moral evil.

It is part of a godly character to hate sin. A righteous indignation is always found in a living soul. And if a man can hear of unrighteous and oppressive and selfish acts, without being moved thereby to anger, depend upon it that man has not a living soul within him; he has not been made a subject of the converting grace of God. To be indifferent about sin, to treat it with toleration, with leniency, with indifference—is as bad a sign of our spiritual condition as can well be imagined; it is, virtually, to "make a mock at sin".—Gordon Calthrop.

'Tis coming up the steep of time,
And this old world is growing brighter;
We may not see its dawn sublime,
Yet high hopes make the heart throb lighter;
We may be sleeping in the ground
When it awakes the world in wonder;
But we have felt it gathering round,
And heard its voice of living thunder.
'Tis coming! yes, 'tis coming!
—Gerald Massey.

Speaking in a general way the British empire extends over one continent, 100 peninsulas, 500 promontories, 1,000 lakes, 2 000 rivers and 10,000 islands. "The Assyrian empire was not so wealthy; the Roman empire was not so popular, the Persian empire was not so extensive, the Spanish empire was not so powerful," is the way the Briton sings.

Of the 20,000 total abstainers among the English soldiers now in India, only fifteen men were tried by court-martial during the past year, says a native paper, while no less than 2,500 non-abstainers were placed on trial during the same period.

Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, will tell you that Johnson's Magnetic Oil always gives satisfaction and is the cheapest.

The consumption of alcohol per inhabitant in the various countries of the world is: Germany, 11 quarts per inhabitant; Austria-Hungary, 6.89; Belgium, 8 86; United States, 5; France, 8.07; Italy, 1 97; Holland, 9; Russia, 6 3; Great Britain, 4 42.

Harness Your Lightning.

There are two kinds of religion, the theoretical and the practical—or rather, I should say, that which is practical is religion, and that which is merely speculative is not religion. Some people love to speculate about spiritual things, as others of a different turn of mind love to discuss the good points of a horse and wager on its speed. Some love to indulge their fancies as to the glories of heaven, but are making no practical progress toward getting there. Their religion is like the Aurora Borealis: it lights up the wintry sky with beautiful colors of crimson and blue, pleasing to the eye, but quickly vanishing. Practical religion uses its electric energy in another way—harnesses it to every day life, causing it to push the wheels of progress and light up the dark ways.—Selected.

Look upon the success and sweetness of thy duties as very much depending upon the keeping of thy heart closely with all diligence.—Flavel.

Rev. Wm. G. Puddefoot has figured out that it costs $50 000 000 a year to run the churches and $400,000,000 to run the jails. He remarks: "We pay eight times as much for running our fellow-men down and jailing them as we do in trying to make them better so that they will not need the jail."

Scott's Emulsion

will cure a stubborn cough when all the ordinary cough remedies have failed. Try it for yourself. We are putting up a fifty-cent size chiefly for that purpose. A cough is usually the telltale of a weakened physical condition. Correct that condition by the use of a proper remedy and the cough will soon disappear.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites acts in two ways. It nourishes, strengthens and builds up the system, at the same time allays the irritation and heals the inflammation. It gives immediate relief at night from the choking sensation so often accompanying a cold.

Don't be persuaded to take a substitute.

Taking

it for granted that you want to get the best results in painting, you will have to use Pure White Lead to obtain them. There are many mixtures branded "White Lead," "Pure White Lead," etc., which contain little, if any, White Lead, but are principally barytes, which is of little value, if not worthless. To be sure, accept only a genuine brand (see list).

If you want any shade of color, tint the White Lead with National Lead Co.'s tinting colors, prepared expressly for this purpose. A feature of these colors is the ease with which they are used and the exactness with which the desired shade is obtained. For particulars send for pamphlet, free.

CALCULI DISSOLVED

By BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Spring No. 2.

Dr. C. H. Davis, of Meriden, Conn., in the "New Eng. Med. Monthly," for July, '90:

"Mr. R. L. Roys, of this city, consulted me about two years ago for Stone in the Bladder, from which he had been suffering for a number of years. On my suggestion he commenced the use of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER as he was very much opposed to operative interference. After using the Water for a short time, disintegration to a certain extent took place, and large quantities of stone were passed. For several days in succession, he passed as much as a teaspoonful of the debris, and at intervals for a considerable period he passed large quantities, and under the continued use of the Water, there was a constant passage of calculi until he was entirely relieved of his trouble.

"The photograph herewith sent is a correct representation, and exact size, of some of the largest specimens of Calculi discharged by Mr. Roys. A chemical and microscopical examination showed that they are Uric Acid with a trace of the Oxalate of Lime."

This Water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f.o.b at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

The Depths of the Bible.

I am glad there is a depth in the Bible I know nothing about, says Mr. Moody; that there is a height there I cannot climb to if I should live to be as old as Methuselah; I venture to say if I should live for ages on the earth I would only have touched its surface.

I pity the man who knows all the Bible, for it is a pretty good sign he doesn't know himself. A man came to me with what he thought was a very difficult passage, and he said:

"Mr. Moody, how do you explain it?"

I said, "I don't explain it."

"But how do you interpret it?"

"I don't interpret it."

"Well, how do you understand it?"

"I don't understand it."

"But what do you do with it?"

"I don't do anything with it."

"You don't believe it?"

"Yes, I believe it. There are lots of things that I believe that I do not understand. In the third chapter of John, Christ says to Nicodemus, 'If you do not understand earthly things how can you understand heavenly things?' There are a great many things about my own body I do not understand; I don't understand nature; it is filled with wonderful things I don't comprehend. Then why should I expect to know everything spiritually?" But men ask, "How can you prove the book is inspired?" I answer, because it inspires me. That is one of the best proofs. It does inspire us.

Trials and Triumphs in China

BY MRS. T. H BRIGGS, RALEIGH.

I. STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

An ancient and populous empire exists in the far East—the most ancient and the most populous of which the world knows. Its people number over four hundred millions, a great multitude. Take your Bible and carefully count, not the chapters or verses, but the letters from the beginning of Genesis to the "Amen" at the close of Revelation, and then go over the task ten, twenty, forty, nay, eighty times before you will reach the number representing the men, women and children of that old and wondrous empire. This, then, may be given as one of the great obstacles to be overcome—the immensity of China and the density of her population.

II. THE LANGUAGE OF CHINA.

It is no small task to learn the Chinese language. There are more written characters or letters in their alphabet than you can count, but only several thousand are in common use. An abundant gift of consecrated perseverance is needed to acquire a knowledge of this ancient tongue; yet within this very trial lies also a triumph for the spread of the gospel. While there are many varieties of the spoken dialect, the written language is the same for the whole empire. This affords great facility for communication with all the people of this vast kingdom. Then the Chinese are from their birth among the better classes, students. Their memories are remarkable. It has been said, that if all the classics of China were destroyed to day, there are a million men who could reproduce them from memory. One of their greatest literary works is the Chinese Encyclopedia, which consists of 25,000 volumes. The earliest missionaries found that the Chinese knew about the magnet. Paper was made there in the year 150, and printing was done five hundred years before Caxton introduced it into England. Given a common written language among such a people, and Christian literature must make its way. The written language is greatly venerated. The clothing, chopsticks, pans, vases, cabinets, almost everything belonging to the Chinese are decorated with these written characters. It is intelligible not only to scholars, but to shopkeepers and dealers throughout the eighteen provinces and to Chinamen in other countries.

III. THE CHARACTER OF THE PEOPLE.

The character of the Chinese, like their language, is at once a mighty obstacle and a wonderful advantage. The Chinaman is slow and conservative, and hard to reach; but having been convinced of the claims of Christ, he is stable to a remarkable degree. One writer says: "Of the moral character of this people, it is very difficult to speak justly. In the same individual, virtues and vices apparently incompatible are placed side by side. Meekness, industry, cheerfulness, reverence for parents and the aged, are accompanied by lying, cruelty, ingratitude and distrust." The question is asked, "How is it after conversion?" The answer is, "We must not be too speedily disheartened. We must expect slow but sure progress. There are none of the brilliant dashes of the Japanese in the Chinese. They have their staying qualities: they never give up. When they set their face toward an end, they go to it if it takes centuries. If, at last they give up their vanity and accept Christ, they will doubtless wield a power which will be felt not only in Asia but throughout the world.

IV. CONFUCIANISM AND ANCESTOR WORSHIP.

Confucianism is the most ancient and deeply rooted of the three prominent religions of China. The worship of ancestors is another opposing element. Tablets twelve to fifteen inches high are erected for departed relatives before which incense is burned morning and evening. For a deceased father the ceremonial must be kept up forty nine days. At the festival of the tombs in the spring, the people universally have family gatherings to worship the dead. A family in Canton is said to have eleven hundred tablets in each of two rooms, with the third containing an image of the ancestor, a disciple of Confucius, who lived 300 B. C.

The objects of this worship is two fold: to secure the repose of the dead, to provide them with comfort, clothing, furniture, made of paper, and transported to them by burning; and also to secure the worshipper from damage to person, business or property from the restless ghosts of these departed relatives. The cost of this worship is simply enormous. The living generation is bound to the dead generations. China does not look forward but backward.

V. GRADUAL OPENING OF CHINA.

For many years after a few ports had been thrown open, the interior of China was practically closed to foreigners. Missionary work could only be carried on near the sea-coast. Little by little the situation has changed until Christ's messengers have penetrated far into the heart of the country. A few years ago, it was death for a foreigner to be seen in the interior provinces. Now "Jesus' chapels" are allowed, and the people are willing, sometimes glad to hear the good Name of salvation.

VI. A DREADFUL OBSTACLE.

It is with shame that we record the fact that the greatest obstacle to Christianity in China has been placed there by a Christian nation. England raises the poppy in India, prepares from it the deadly opium drug, and sends it to China. In 1840 the Emperor of China resolved to stop its importation, and imprisoned the English commissioner and destroyed all the opium under his control at Canton. It is said the monarch wept as he exclaimed, "How can I die and go to the shade of my imperial father and ancestors, until these direful evils be removed!" Twenty thousand two hundred and ninety-one chests of opium received from the English were completely destroyed, a solitary instance in the history of the world of a pagan monarch preferring to destroy what would injure his subjects rather than fill his own pockets with the sale. From this came the "Opium War" in which Great Britain the victor compelled him to pay six million dollars for the opium. Since then, China has been forced to receive English shipments of opium, with all the dreadful mental and moral ruin which results. Opium has been forced upon them at the bayonet's point! Can we refuse them the Bible to lead them into light and truth?

VII. MEDICAL MISSIONS.

Christian missions have furnished so far the only solution of the opium problem. When we reflect that of all medical foreign missionaries, one third are at work in China, we see that this form of Christian beneficence seems best to reach the hard and stubborn Chinaman. There are at present sixty-one hospitals and forty four dispensaries connected with Protestant missions in China, and last year there were 350,000 patients. Many of them were cured of the opium habit. In one hospital for women there were 9,000 patients the first year. In a Presbyterian hospital last year there were 5,830 persons treated and 1,122 operations performed, the patients coming from more than a thousand distant towns and villages. Surely the seed of Christian benevolence, sown under such circumstances, must bring forth a rich harvest?

VIII. SOME MISSIONARY HEROES.

Thousands of consecrated lives have been given to the evangelization of China. It will only be possible to mention here and there a representative of this grand host.

Robert Morrison was the first Protestant missionary, going to Canton in 1807. Unable to do direct missionary work, he labored as a servant of the East India Company in compiling a Chinese dictionary and translating the Bible into that tongue. Thus he prepared the way for future work.

Would that there were time to record many names, but the Father has them all on his record book, and their reward is sure. We must not forget that there have been noble women among these missionary pioneers.

We cannot leave this subject without mentioning our own beloved Mrs. Yates. "A woman of such culture and refinement that she would always seem a queen among women, and yet she gave up social pleasures, personal ease, and forty-seven years she held out the life and light of the gospel in darkened heathendom to perishing souls. Never did a wife better supplement the life work of a husband than did this excellent woman minister to, uphold, comfort and help the great missionary in his life-long labors."

MRS. YATES.

"Sleep in peace. The earth hath not
A nobler name than thine shall be.
The deeds by marshalled manhood wrought,
The lofty energies of thought,
The fire of poesy,—
These have but frail and fading honors—thine
Shall Time into eternity consign.

Yea, and when thrones shall crumble down,
And human pride and grandeur fall,—
The herald's line of long renown,—
The mitre and kingly crown,—
Perishing glories all!
The pure devotion of thy generous heart
Shall live in Heaven, of which it was a part."

IX. POSSIBILITIES.

These are best expressed in an appeal sent to the home churches by the entire force of Protestant missionaries assembled at the great Shanghai conference: "We want China emancipated from the thraldom of sin in this generation. It is possible. Our Lord said, 'According to your faith be it unto you.' Standing on the borders of this vast empire, we therefore, 120 missionaries from almost every evangelical religious denomination in Europe and America, assembled in general conference at Shanghai, and representing the whole body of Protestant missionaries in China, feeling our utter insufficiency for the great work so rapidly expanding, do most earnestly plead with one will, calling upon the whole church of God for more laborers. And we pray that the Spirit of God may move upon the hearts of all to whom this appeal comes to cry, 'Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?' And may this spirit be communicated from heart to heart, from church to church, until the whole Christian world shall be aroused, and every soldier of the Cross shall come to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

X. OUR DUTY.

The appeal of the missionaries just given lays the burden of China's evangelization upon every Christian heart. They plead for the neglected millions of heathendom. They say to the church of Jesus Christ, Behold them! They are your brothers and sisters in a common humanity. They are one with us all in sin and ruin; let them be one with us in the knowledge of salvation.

Awake, O selfish, sleeping, forgetful church, arouse thee to thy duties, fulfil thy solemn mission, proclaim thy glorious message, that all the earth may ring with praises due to Emmanuel's name.

Does Your Boy Need Britannica?

Youth

It is the Formative period. It is then that the mind is freest from care, the imagination unhampered, the memory most retentive, the eye brightest, and the nature most susceptible. What a boy reads in this period becomes so indelibly impressed upon his nature that it becomes a part of his very character.

This is a time when a parent's responsibility is greatest. It is not enough to tell the boy what he ought to become. Most boys are not overly susceptible to didactic teaching. You can usually lead him a mile easier than you can drive him a rod. See that he has the proper surroundings, and a little encouragement, and it is surprising how readily he develops a taste for the best in literature. Let that taste be developed, and there is little danger as to his future.

It was

Dr. Philips Brooks

Who said; "Show me what books a boy reads, and I will read you his destiny."

How important it is, then, that your home should be provided with books of the highest character.

Fairy tales, and even, perhaps, "Buffalo Bill" stories, have their place as developers of a taste for reading, a sort of literary milk, as it were, but unless the boy soon shows a preference for the stronger meat of practical knowledge, history, travel, etc., you may be sure that he is mentally unsound, or that there has been something radically wrong in his education.

The Encyclopædia Britannica has rightly been termed "the concentrated essence of the whole world's wisdom." Let your boy read its interesting pages, and he will soon look with disdain upon "flashy" literature. We are continually underestimating a boy's capacity for large ideas. There is nothing so attractive as truth. Give him the material out of which to construct large ideas. Put Britannica in the home, where he can consult it continually, and as he attains manhood he will find no place in literary or professional life to which he may not aspire.

Talks About Law.
A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

NEWS SUMMARY.

North Carolina.

Capt. E. B. Englehard died at Raleigh the 10th.——Prisoners set the Albemarle jail on fire, destroying the building; they escaped, but were recaptured.——W. W. Fuller, Esq., of Durham, has been made attorney for the American Tobacco Company with a salary, variously stated, of more than $20,000 and less than $50,000 a year.——Extensive improvements in regard to the coal industry were made in the State in 1894; the total product was 13,150 tons, valued at the mines at $30,000.——Bill for a public building at Winston has been reported favorably in Congress.——The Governor has appointed Hon. A. W. Graham of Oxford to succeed Judge Winston on the Superior Court Bench.——A drunken negro barber, by name Laney, was killed by a train the 14th near Charlotte.——Considerable dissatisfaction having been expressed by the employees of the Southern Railway, the chiefs of that corporation had a statement of its affairs made and offered it for the consideration of the employees and the public. The matter will be adjusted. This is a good way to avoid strikes.——Great quantities of frozen fish have been gathered in our eastern waters and shipped. They sold for five cents a pound, and there were many tons of them. So the wind did blow good.——The six per cent. interest bill has passed both Houses of the Legislature.

In General.

The steamer La Gascogne ten days overdue arrived at New York the 11th.——The snow storm blanketed the country from Washington to Florida. In the latter State $10,000 000 damage was done. There was considerable suffering at the North.——The United States Government estimates the cotton crop to be 9,088 000 bales, one-fourth of the bales still on plantations.——The proposition for annual salaries for private secretaries of members of Congress was defeated.——The new mayor of New York has made his appointments, and they are disappointing to partisans of all sorts.——U. S. Minister to Mexico, I. N. Gray, died of pneumonia the 14th. Senator Ransom's friends are urging the President to honor him with the post thus made vacant.——The gold reserve will not be further decreased; but, as the new bonds are sold, will increase. The bankers seem to have agreed to try to keep the newly acquired reserve intact. $50,000 000 in gold will come from Europe for the bonds. The latter were bought for less than U. S. bonds have sold for in many years. The reason assigned is that they being made "payable in coin," their purchasers were fearful that they would be redeemed in depreciated silver.——A $135,000 fire occurred in Portsmouth the 14th.

General Assembly.

FEBRUARY 11.

SENATE.—Bills introduced: By White, Alexander, to provide for revising and digesting the public laws; by Black, to provide for levying and collecting inheritance tax; by Moody, to regulate the hours of labor in cotton factories. Several local or private bills passed final reading. There was a prolonged debate on a bill to equip and furnish the female department of the N. C. Insane Asylum, which passed final reading. Bill for protection of fish and game was tabled. The bill to permit counties to work State convicts on public roads, only such convicts as are not needed on the State farms to be thus employed, passed.

HOUSE.—A good deal of time was taken by a discussion of a bill relating to the charter of Elizabeth City. Bills introduced: By Crummell, to provide for compulsory education; by Gentry, to forbid screens in saloons and regulate the opening and closing hours of saloons; by Ewart, to prohibit the use of profane and indecent language. The bill to regulate freight shipments, designed to benefit small truck shippers, passed third reading, after considerable debate. The Senate bill giving townships in certain counties local option with respect to the stock law was tabled. Bill to prohibit prize-fighting passed third reading. The election case from Gates, of Gatling against Smith, was decided favorably to the latter.

FEBRUARY 12.

SENATE.—Bills introduced: By McCaskey, to define trusts, etc., and make them criminal. Various local and private bills passed final reading. The bill relating to opening our eastern sounds to Northern huntsmen was tabled.

HOUSE.—Peace offered a resolution to appoint a committee to investigate the American Tobacco Company. Bills introduced: By McClammy, to exempt regular firemen from poll-tax; by Reinhardt, to provide for meeting of the General Assembly every four years. Norment and Smith were seated in place of Payne and Carlyle of Robeson. Bill allowing townships in five western counties local option respecting the stock law, passed, amendments to include other counties being killed. Bills to reduce the fee for registration of crop liens to fifty cents was tabled. Bill to prohibit the taking of free passes was tabled. Six per cent. interest bill was referred to Judiciary Committee. Bill to allow county officers to give Trust and Security bonds passed.

FEBRUARY 13.

SENATE.—Bill to prevent hunting of o'possums from February till October in certain counties passed third reading. Bill to withdraw appropriation to Oxford Orphan Asylum was tabled. There were numerous private and local bills.

HOUSE.—Crummell introduced resolution to reduce salaries of officers of public institutions who receive as much as fifty dollars a month, by one third. Burnham introduced a bill making education compulsory. Bill to make Trust and Security companies legitimate bondsmen for county officers passed third reading. Bill to add the unclaimed $26,000 United States returned direct tax to the school fund, dividing it by counties according to school population, passed. Efforts had been made to use part of this fund for the Confederate monument at Raleigh and part for the Atlanta exposition. $25,000 was thrown away in the Chicago exhibit. A squabble about the six per cent. interest bill consumed the rest of the time.

FEBRUARY 14.

SENATE.—Bill making education of blind children compulsory was tabled. Bill to compel railroads to redeem unused tickets and prohibit operations of ticket-brokers passed second reading.

HOUSE.—There were many expressions of resentment relative to a newspaper charge that certain members were conspiring to defeat the six per cent. bill. Discussion of a bill to change Mitchell county from the Eight to the Ninth District occupied the remainder of the session.

FEBRUARY 15.

SENATE.—Bill to require railroads to redeem unused tickets passed third reading, as did also a bill to protect holders of fire insurance policies.

HOUSE.—Bill introduced by Winborne to regulate sale of liquor in towns; by French, to prevent adulteration of candy; Bagwell, to appropriate $5 000 to the State Fair; Smith of Gates, to pay solicitors $2,000 a year in lieu of fees and other compensation. Bill transferring Mitchell county from Eighth to Ninth District passed its third reading.

FEBRUARY 16.

SENATE.—Bill, introduced by Franck, to abolish trusts and to increase school fund; by Farthing, to prevent double and unjust taxation. Bill to exempt volunteer firemen from poll tax passed third reading. Wall of Davidson introduced a bill to establish a Normal School for the colored race at Winston.

HOUSE.—Many bills, relating to incorporation of stock companies, churches, lodges and schools, prohibiting sale of whiskey in certain localities, for the relief of certain persons, etc., none of them of more than local significance were introduced, and some were passed.

Elder J. A. Stradley.

RESOLUTIONS OF AMIS CHAPEL CHURCH.

WHEREAS, Our beloved brother and pastor, Elder J. A. Stradley, has seen fit, by the will of God we trust, to sever his connection with this church of which he has been a most faithful and efficient pastor for the past twenty-nine years; and whereas, we feel that it is both just and appropriate to give public expression of gratitude to him for the faithful and loving service he has so long and so acceptably rendered; therefore

Resolved, That we, the members of Amis Chapel church heartily thank him for the earnest and faithful gospel instruction given to us and our children, a generation of whom have grown up under his tender and loving care.

Resolved 2. That we emulate the spirit of earnestness and zeal which characterized his work, and remember with tender affection his manly graces, his dignity of deportment, his cultivated mind and excellent Christian character; and we heartily commend him to the brethren and sisters of his new field as a faithful Christian worker.

Resolved 3. That we believe the field of his labor here has been so cultivated as to greatly help his successor in the advancement of the cause he loves so well.

Resolved 4. That in parting with Bro. Stradley, we extend our love and sympathy, and pray that the blessings of God may rest on him and his work, and may his labor in his new field be crowned with success, and may many be brought to know the truth as it is in Jesus.

Resolved 5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, and a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

J. W. CHANDLER, Assist. C. C.

From Missionary W. D. Powell.

We will have a Missionary Conference in Toluca, April 3, 4, 5. We expect to have the body of the Missionary force in Mexico to meet us. Every denomination will be represented. The railroads give unusually low rates. I have a promise from Mr. Moody that he and Mr. Sankey will be with us. We expect a great time and are praying that it will lead to a general revival throughout Mexico. We will discuss seventeen subjects bearing on the Holy Spirit and His work. The third person of the Trinity has not been honored as He should. This is well-nigh universally admitted. We shall endeavor in the future to give Him His due place in the matter of soul-saving in Mexico.

There will be much help in meeting our brethren of different faiths on a platform where we are agreed. The division in Christ's body in Mexico retards the growth of the cause. We are unwilling to surrender a single item of gospel truth and yet we are willing to meet all in conference on that in which we are agreed.

Of course no one feels that a mammoth meeting in which there will be able speeches, essays etc., will of itself bring a revival. But it may help to secure so desirable an end. Rarely does the average pulpit emphasize the importance of personal holiness and the work of the Holy Spirit as the word of God requires? I doubt it. The only explanation for great numbers converted in mission work whether among the North American Indians, the Telugus, the Cubans or any other country or class of people is traced directly to the power and presence of the Holy Spirit.

Missionaries grow lukewarm from standing in the presence of so much doubt and unbelief and then vainly try to seek relief by changing plans, when what they need is power from on high. More humble seeking for an enduement from on high would make unnecessary this tiresome wrangling over these minor matters which should be settled by each one according to his taste. Filled with the Spirit, difficulties would melt away and power would be given us with God and men.

DIED.

CARR—Sister Mattie Carr, daughter of Alfred and Martha Carr, passed to the realms of eternal glory Jan. 24th, 1895, in the sixteenth year of her age. She was a member of Bethesden church for four years. May God comfort the dear loved ones for Jesus' sake.

ROBERT P. WALKER.

FORRESTER—At Ramseur, on Feb. 4th, 1895, Bro. Manly Forrester. He was devoted to the cause of Christ and faithful to his church of which he was a member. We as a church and as acquaintances sustain a great loss, but we believe that our loss is his gain. He leaves four children, two brothers and four sisters to mourn their loss; though they do not mourn as those who have no hope. May the God of all grace comfort the bereaved children and friends. The burial service was conducted by the writer.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

G. W. HARMAN.

Ramseur, N. C.

CRAWFORD—At 2 a. m. on Feb. 9th, Mrs. W. R. Crawford of West Raleigh departed this life. On Sunday afternoon, Feb. 10th, the funeral was held from the First Baptist church. Dr. J. W. Carter, the pastor, was assisted by Rev. A. D. Hunter, pastor of the West Raleigh Baptist church.

Mrs. Crawford leaves a husband, an aged mother, and seven children, with many friends to mourn her loss. She was kind hearted, especially so to the poor. She had exercised personal faith in Christ since she was twenty years old. It was this faith and hope that was her comfort and stay until the end.

May the loved ones left behind follow her in so far as she followed Christ; and may they be able to say

"Another hand is beckoning us,
Another call is given;
And glows once more with angel steps
The path which reaches heaven.

Not for the dead in Christ we weep,
Their sorrows now are o'er;
The sea is calm, the tempest past,
On that eternal shore.

Their peace is sealed, their rest is sure,
Within that better home;
Awhile we weep and linger here,
Then follow to the tomb."

A. D. H.

STEVENS—Died at the University of Maryland Hospital, Baltimore, Jan. 29th, James H. Stevens. He had been for many years affected with a throat trouble that obstructed his swallowing necessary nourishment, but of late this malady rendered a surgical operation a final resort. The operation was successfully performed by that noted surgeon, Dr. Tiffany, proper nourishment introduced and relished, but owing to advanced age and loss of strength he was unable to rally, and sank away, after four days, retaining consciousness to the last. He was born at the old homestead near Clinton Aug. 29th, 1825. In 1850 he was married to Serena F. Oates. About three years after marriage he was baptized by Rev. Geo. W. Wallace at the old "Ten Mile" (Beulah) church, then a strong and wealthy body. His genial nature, manifest loyalty to the Master's cause, and high social standing, at once brought him into prominence, and he was soon ordained a deacon.

He moved into Clinton in 1869, and two years after united with the Clinton church and was enrolled as a deacon. He became widely known for his generous hospitality, his zeal as a Baptist, and attentiveness to every detail concerning his church. He was a liberal giver. Before joining the Clinton church he had already stepped in with a large contribution that saved its building from foreclosure. He contributed largely to the founding of the Warsaw High School, and was a charter trustee.

Brother Stevens was a good listener, always at his post to cheer his pastor. He was indeed his pastor's friend, so mindful of his welfare, so tender of his feelings.

How much we shall miss the affectionate greeting, warm hand shake, the cordial fireside welcome of Bro. Stevens! Harrassed by the recent bank failure, and weakened by his failing health, he seemed for the past few months to draw closer to God and to his church. Before submitting to the surgical operation he wrote the wife who so faithfully has stood by him in the family and in the church all these years, expressing his willingness to die, and kneeling at his couch committed his soul to the Lord's keeping. Three sons survive him, all in the church. Of these, W. E. Stevens, Esq., has been twice honored with a seat in the Legislature, and J. A. Stevens is one of our most successful and beloved physicians. Four children have preceded him to the eternal shores. When his remains were brought for interment in the Clinton cemetery there abided upon the countenance that sweet restful expression that betokened the Christian at rest.

"When shall we meet again,
Meet ne'er to sever,
When will peace wreathe her chain
Round us forever?"
"Up to that world of light
Take us dear Saviour,
There shall we all unite
Happy forever."

A Minister's Testimony.

DIXON, CALIFORNIA, Jan. 4, 1895.

Having used the Tahoe Kidney Cure, I can testify to its great merit as a remedy for kidney trouble. I obtained almost immediate relief, and I am convinced that it is a really remarkable medicine. My wife was speedily relieved of Leucorrhoea by its use, a few doses affording relief. I may add that I know of others in my congregation who have taken the Tahoe Kidney Cure with most gratifying results.

From Bro. J. E. Duncan.

Dear Recorder:—Perhaps a few lines from this section would not be amiss.

Tally Ho Baptist church is situated one mile from Stem in Granville county, and was organized more than fifty years ago. The original members are all gone (I think) to their reward, with the exception of one, Bro. W. T. Hunt, than whom there is no better man.

Dr. R. H. Marsh, as pastor, about twenty-five years ago, took charge of this church, and has served it continually since, with the exception of four years. One year ago the church elected Bro. J. E. Smith, a young man, this being his first pastorate. Though young in age, he is old in knowledge, and is truly a wise leader, a man of God.

Every man in the State ought, by all means, to read the RECORDER. The editorials are richly worth the price of subscription. Every number seems better than the previous one. The article headed "Revivals" by "Old Man" are timely warnings, and should be read and re read by every pastor and enthusiastic layman throughout the land. Fraternally,

J. E. DUNCAN.

We direct special attention to the following remarkable statement:

For many years I suffered from Catarrh, which destroyed my hearing, and for 25 years I was so deaf that I could not hear a clock strike by holding my ear against it. I had tried every known remedy, and nothing gave me the slightest relief. I obtained Dr. Moore's treatment, and in three weeks my hearing began to improve, and now I can hear common conversation across a room; can hear a clock strike in an adjoining room, 80 feet away. I think I am entirely cured, and my hearing permanently restored.

Thy Neighbor as Thyself.

BY THEO. H. HILL.

I hold it truth, the truest joy
That may on earth be had
Arises from the sweet employ
Of making others glad.

If there be selfishness in this,
It hoards no secret pelf,
But welcomes still to share its bliss
Another as itself.

Its dearest treasures it would give
Nor stay to count the cost;
If others on its bounty live—
Then nothing it has lost.

Such love is lavished--never sold,
Its honor knows no stain;
There is no canker on its gold—
No mildew on its grain.

Be mine the happiness to know,
If rich how blest is he
Whom God Himself has honored so
His almoner to be.

But, if it be the Master's will
That I should daily fare
Through narrow ways a toiler still
For all I eat and wear,

Then be it mine with grateful heart
Such blessing to receive
As I would willingly impart
Another to relieve.

The Way of One Poultry Woman.

I rise to speak, and my theme shall be of the one thing only that I profess to understand, the management of the hen. I have now 500 on the place, and not an ailing one in the lot. They are also free from vermin, and are already beginning to moult. One hundred and fifty of the number are hens, and besides raising 350 chicks, and using all the eggs we desired, I have sold on the average 150 dozen eggs for every month since January. The food during the time consisted of wheat, oats and rye mixed, with a small mess of corn once a day, and during the early months all the milk they could consume. But, let me whisper it, in the meantime they were not left to manage things their own way, but under strict discipline and brought up in the way they should go. As a preventive of parasites and for the sake of good health and pure odors, their habitation and yards were kept clean and raked and swept and whitewashed, and the setting hens, eggs and newly hatched chicks freely sprinkled with insect powder. Every hen inclined to set is straightway daubed on the parts, most likely to be infected, with coal oil, and if she is still determined to set she will prove one not likely to forsake the nest when the eggs are given her.

But the most important secret and the one having the strongest bearing toward "luck" is that they were given plenty of pure, cold water. This, I contend, is far more essential than food if they have a wide range, and the one thing needful to their health, to say nothing of comfort, during the hot weather. Yes, attention to details is what counts, so do not expect to sit at your ease and at the same time reap a rich reward from the chicken business. If you are really concerned for their well-being and want them to thrive and your pocket-book to grow fat, you will constitute yourself doctor and generalissimo of the whole management. You will have a hospital where the wounded or ailing may receive their just and timely care, and to relieve the most common you will rub fresh wounds with pure lard and turpentine, roup you will treat twice a day with a mixture of grease and kerosene over the head and in the mouth. For lice you will keep a clean house and nests, plenty of lime about, and as a reserve for the foe, plenty of insect powder, and no harm to the chicks but sure death to the other "critters."

It's Astonishing

how Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription acts upon nervous women. It's a marvelous remedy for nervous and general debility, Chorea, or St Vitus Dance, Insomnia, or Inability to sleep, spasms, convulsions, or "fits," and every like disorder.

Even in cases of insanity resulting from functional derangements, the persistent use of the "Prescription" will, by restoring the natural functions, generally effect a cure.

For women suffering from any chronic "female complaint" or weakness; for women who are run down or overworked; at the change from girlhood to womanhood; and, later, at the critical "change of life,,—it is a medicine that safely and certainly builds up, strengthens, regulates, and cures.

If it doesn't, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

What more can any one ask?

Is anything that isn't sold in this way likely to be "just as good?"

A Man.

You want him to be a man. It doesn't make so much difference whether he is a "gentleman," so called, or not. But a man is a man the world over. Imagine Pilate leading the Man of Nazareth, thorn-crowned and robed in purple mockery, before the people, crying: "Behold the gentleman!" Fancy the "two men in white apparel" saying to the men who were to revolutionize government and religion and conduct, all over this world: "Ye gentleman of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven!" Your boy shall be a man, and the model of his life you will help him to find in the manhood of the New Testament. Meekness of spirit, noble aspiration, a merciful disposition, purity of heart, cleanliness of thought, chastity, right conduct, moderation in speech, generosity, magnanimity, forgiveness of wrongs, modesty, loyalty to duty, charity in judgment, practical wisdom—all these he will find in the Sermon on the Mount. All the cardinal principles, the sure foundations, upon which pure, true manhood is builded, he will find in the teachings and model of the New Testament. There is no other standard, no other model, of faultless manhood.—Robert J. Burdette.

Pruning.

Peaches are always produced on the wood that is but one year old. In order to increase the production lots of this new wood must be obtained. This can best be done in pruning by cutting back the ends of the limbs. We do not cut back as much as some do. We use a tree pruner and prune the ends off the main branches back to where they are from one-half to three quarters of an inch in diameter. This causes the branches to produce an abundance of new wood the next season. Cutting back too much is apt to cause too great an amount of wood growth. This makes the leaves and branches too thick, inviting rot, producing fungi. The prunning may be done any time when the sap is down and the tree is dormant. When cutting back, water spouts should be taken off and the smaller sprays throughout the tree cut off. Care should be taken to have the head open to the sunshine and a free circulation of air.

Young Workers.

It very often happens that a boy has to be busy with work of some kind, when he really wants to read and become educated. Now, this desire for education is a splendid thing in a boy. Indeed, there is nothing in the world that is any better. But it often happens that a boy is prevented by circumstances from doing that which would seem to be the best thing for him. Here is a word of encouragement to such boys. Read all you can in the best papers and magazines. Pick up scraps of information about people and things, and make them your own, so that you will remember them. Some day, your knowledge, picked up little by little, will be very extensive, and you will find that you compare very favorably with boys who have had much better chances for education than yourself. Console yourself with the thought that some of the best work in the world has been done under very trying circumstances. Sir Walter Raleigh wrote his "History of the World" during his eleven years' imprisonment. And who knows but you, during your years of work, when you would like to be enjoying years of study and recreation, may be laying the foundation of some piece of work as great as any Sir Walter Raleigh ever did?—Ledger.

What A Girl Can Be.

Cheerful, but never boisterous; happy, but never thoughtless: our bonnie lassie is the peacemaker, the universal helper, the sympathizer, the active worker of her home. Whatever is wanted, she can supply; and she can do all that is needed for the comfort of every one. She is eyes to the blind, feet to the lame, hands to the incapable. If anything is to be done for grandma, it is she who does it. When mother is ill, it is she who waits on her, who looks after the little ones and does the housekeeping. Loving, unselfish, energetic, industrious, she has no ambition outside the circle of home and its affections; and she does not pretend to intellectual merit. She adores her mother and lives in perfect peace with her sisters—which does not prevent her giving her whole heart to her lover, nor make her less than helpful and tender to a comparative stranger. She is of the most perfect type of a womanhood content to live in the shade of home and a strong man's love. Wherever she goes she will carry peace and create happiness—her influence will be ever essentially pure and gentle.—Christian Work.

Depend on Christ.

Reckon on Christ to do his part perfectly. Directly you give, he takes. Directly you will open the door, he enters. Directly you will back the flood gates, he pours in a glorious tide of fulness—fulness of wealth, of power, of joy. The clay has only to be plastic to the hand of a Palissy; the marble has only to be pliant to the chisel of a Michael Angelo; the organ has only to be responsive to the slightest touch of a Handel; the student has only to follow the least hint of a Faraday or a Whewell—and there will be no failure in results. Oh, to be equally susceptible to the moulding influences of Christ! We shall not fail in realizing the highest ideal of which we are capable if only we will let him do his work unhindered.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

A holy act strengthens the inward holiness. It is a seed of life growing into more life.—W. Robertson.

A WRECK

of the physical constitution often comes from unnatural, pernicious habits, contracted through ignorance or from excesses. Such habits result in loss of manly power, nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and a thousand and one derangements of mind and body. Epilepsy, paralysis, softening of the brain and even dread insanity sometimes result from such reckless self-abuse.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents in stamps to pay postage.

SEVERAL readers were so kind as to write that they think the RECORDER'S advocacy of free silver coinage at the usual ratio is unsound. We had the time to write to only one of them, and he and we found out that both were of the same opinion, although he is a banker and a monometalist and we a bimetalist and—not a banker, at any rate. The RECORDER advocates free silver coinage at a ratio of sixteen to one because it believes that free coinage of silver at that ratio will cause silver to gain in value sufficient to make sixteen ounces of silver worth in the markets as much as one ounce of gold. If such coinage does not cause this result, the ratio would have to be increased. We believe the ratio of sixteen to one is sufficient, because it was more than sufficient in 1873, when silver smiths exchanged gold dollars for silver dollars, in order to get the latter to use in their work. When the law was passed limiting the use of silver, the price of it decreased, just as the price of hams would decrease if a law should be passed declaring that no one shall use hog meat. And so would gold depreciate. Give silver as fair a chance as gold has, and if it does not regain its former value relative to gold, then make it secondary. But first give it a fair chance.

THE cumulative system of voting would have protected the eastern counties from negro domination. The fact that it met with the opposition of men who seem spitefully to have striven to turn over these counties to the negroes, is eloquently in its favor.

As there are people who do not comprehend the word cumulative, it is timely to explain: A proposed legislative enactment provided for the election of county commissioners by the people. There were five commissioners to be elected for each county. Any voter could cast one ballot each for five men, or he could cast five ballots for one man. This insured representation of the minority, if the minority casts together all its votes, for one or for two men, as it can afford; the majority dividing itself between probably five and at least four men. And, if the law should have further provided that no action of a board of county commissioners were lawful, except it had been voted for by at least four of them, compromise measures and tolerable protection to the minority in any county would have been the usual result.

We regret to say that caucuses have eliminated this cumulative idea from the county government reorganization plans. If it had been left to a vote of the people, there is no doubt but that it would have been preferred to the plan that will probably be adopted by the Assembly; in fact, if caucuses had not prevented it from having a fair chance in this body, it would have been incorporated into the proposed county government laws.

THERE were many predictions made respecting the six per cent. interest law. Some said that it would deprive farmers who cannot make first class security of their only means of escaping merchant shylocks; that, while heretofore they might borrow money at eight per cent. to buy provisions with, they will have to buy on time, mortgaging their crops, and paying a great price for their credit-bought supplies, instead of eight per cent. We rather think merchants cannot—if they would—so combine, that competition will not compel them to be content with small profits. And, moreover, we are sure there are many people with money to lend who will be glad to lend it to well-secured people. Good security, we have been told, can get money at five per cent. in Richmond, Va.; and poor security never could get it anywhere, except by deceit. Others say the law will be transgressed; that, in the first place, National banks, being National, are above the law; this is untrue, although under the eight per cent. law they have regularly loaned money at eight per cent., exacting the interest in advance and collecting principal and interest in sixty or ninety days, renewing on the same terms. This is a rate of more than ten per cent. Building and Loan Associations loan at six per cent., requiring a membership fee and an assessment, and besides, collect interest monthly. Some of them collect eighteen per cent. by this system. There are those who say the law will be evaded in many respects; but it cannot be contended that this is a blemish on this law: it is a grave charge against the officers of the law. Many say the law will drive capital from the State. No great deal of capital has ever come in, and there has been no recent prospect of an unusual influx. As we have often said, the development of North Carolina is the opportunity and the task set for North Carolinians. Anything in North Carolina worthy of Northern capital is also worthy of Carolina brawn and Carolina capital—of both of which there is a native supply quite equal to uninflated demand. Others say the law will cause money lenders to invest in bonds and stocks, the latter especially of North Carolina mills, and thus advance the material interests of the State. We do not know. The income tax is unjustly severe on holders of small amounts of corporation stocks, since the total dividend is taxed two per cent. before it is distributed to stockholders; and thus one whose income is derived from stocks has to pay income-tax of two cent. whether his income be one dollar or one hundred thousand dollars. So far as we can see the law is an experiment. It was sought by three-fourths of the citizens. Its effect will be worth close study, especially if the evil predictions of it come to pass.

IT IS disappointing to attempt to get the news in a great daily paper. There is one before us. After six inches of great bold letters, likely to frighten one not used to them, there is a column of details respecting a luncheon given by a foreign count to a Miss Gould, whom he is going to wed in a few weeks, the paper says. Anything that may be the object of reasonable or unreasonable curiosity, from the count's appetite to the finger-nails of the about to be countess, can be found in this column; as, according to the paper, the count took the reporter into his confidence during the luncheon and gave him complete descriptions of his courtship, engagement and married life.

On the next page is a picture of Miss Francis W. C. T. U. Willard, LL. D., learning to ride a bicycle! There are three young men helping her, one in ministers' or actors' garb, another a college boy, and the third probably a servant. Miss Willard had on such a huge overcoat that the picture did not show whether she wore the fashionable "bloomers." There is a two column article by Miss Willard in favor of bicycle riding by women. On another part of the page is a picture of Miss Willard herself, in her usual pose; on her feet, eye-glasses in hand, undeniably long dresses and the familiar spinster wavelets above her ears, her eyes feigning intense mediation; she is as far from bicycles and bloomers as possible,—and, with Miss Willard, that is very far indeed. The paper tells at length of her ambitions, from riding a bicycle, to "emancipating" her sex and out manning Man. On the next page are pictures of a disreputable actress and an idiotic looking Catholic priest: the former frankly writes her biography, the latter fills two columns with results of a life-study of the lower animals, which—he has come to believe—have reason and souls with existence in another world. Then comes a page about theatres and actresses, with a picture of one who is notoriously disreputable. She came to Raleigh this year with a boasted record as bad as that of the "unspeakable" Breckenridge, infamous and spurned wherever he goes; and yet all Raleigh society, and many of their mothers, paid $1 50 each to see her. There is a column message by cable from England about a dog show; and a page, illustrated, about a similar show that is to be in America. Then a page each on society and yachting, half a page on base-ball, then the fashions, then sensational politics, then a great array of fires, robberies, murders, trials and hangings, and finally a spiritless editorial entitled a "Cheerful View of Life," from 2 Cor. 6: 10.

The paper in which these things appeared, all in one issue, so crowding it that one could not find the news, returns a clean profit of $500,000 or more a year to its owners; which is to say, the people like it quite well enough.

A newspaper was founded in New York City nearly forty years ago with the purpose of printing wholesome matter; not excluding any news, but publishing as little as possible of evil nature and as much of good as normal people ought to be interested in. The paper was a failure for twenty years, and was bought by its present owner for a very small sum. He changed its policy; published details of every thing unwholesome and repulsive, making them appear worse than they were, when possible, and even making up horrible stories when there were no real ones sufficiently horrible; and this paper is the most successful paper, financially, and the blackest and most unreliable in America. Such papers flourish only at the North. The South is not populous enough to support "great" papers, or it, too, would suffer the development of a public sentiment that makes lucrative such distortions of events and narrations of abnormities. But for a while, at least, we will continue to get the news from our State papers, growing fearful only when we see a great, black heading or a boast of 'metropolitan journalism.'

The Interbiblical Period and the Rise and Characteristics of the Jewish Sects.

Read before the "Bible Bands" of Wake Forest College by Dr. J. Hendren Gorrell, and requested to be published.

PART II.

Turning from the political history of the Jews, we must now direct attention to their literary history during this period. Perhaps first in importance stands the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures—the Septuagint. Under the Ptolemies, Alexandria was the great centre of literary activity; one of the early rulers of Egypt transported thither 30,000 families from Judea, and it is said that by the time of Christ, almost half the city was represented by the Jewish element. There they built a temple and performed the rites of their religion, though influenced in no slight degree by the spirit of Grecian religion and customs; this showed itself specially in the symbolic method of scriptural interpretation, which culminated in the allegorical system of Philo. Ptolemy Philadelphus, about 277 B. C., was very desirous of adding to the stores of the great Alexandrian library a copy of the Jewish Scriptures in the literary language of the time, i. e., the Greek. Tradition has it, that he chose six learned men from each of the twelve tribes, enclosed each man in a separate cell together with a copy of the Hebrew Scriptures and ordered the translation to be made. At the end of seventy two days the work was finished and the seventy-two copies were found to be precisely alike. This is of course a fiction, but the fact still remains, that this Septuagint translation of the Hebrew Bible was accomplished at this time at Alexandria—a translation which exercised the greatest influence in religious history, "for through it alone the religious truths became known to the Greek and the Roman. It was the Septuagint version which was the Bible of the Evangelists and the Apostles, and of the first age of the Christian church; it is still the only authorized text of the Eastern church and the basis of the only authorized text of the Latin church."—[Stanley.]

The religious writings of the Jews in this intermediate period are included in the so called Apocrypha. These are very important productions, since they afford us a most desirable insight into the religious life of the Hebrews in that time. The following is a rather complete enumeration of Apocryphal writings: Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, The Epistle of Jeremy, Tobit, The Wisdom of Solomon, Judith, I and II Esdras, Esther X.—XVI., The Song of the Three Holy Children, The History of Susannah, Bel and the Dragon, The Prayer of Manasses, I and II. Maccabees. Two other books are mentioned which have been lost—The Roll of the Building of the Temple and The Outside Books. Besides there are a number of Pseudopygrapha, so called because false names of authors were attached to them; such are the Book of Enoch, the Sybilline Oracles, the Psalter of Solomon, the Ascension and Vision of Isaiah, etc. All of these works must be assigned to the two centuries preceding the birth of Christ, hence a silence on the part of Jewish writings must be supposed for at least 150 years after Malachi's prophecy. These Apocryphal books come to us from the Alexandrian School, not from the Jews of Palestine, and it is extremely doubtful whether they were ever considered to be of divine authority. Neither Christ nor his disciples ever quoted from them, and it is certain that the early church placed them on a lower plane than the other Scriptures. The most conspicuous feature of these books is their legendary and superstitious character; they also display a lower religious tone than the other Scriptures, abound in the bigotry of national pride, and emphasize ritualism and the efficacy of good works alone. "It was," says Redford, "their praise of almsgiving and the sanction of the worship of saints which no doubt led the Roman church to include the Apocrypha in the canon by the decree of the Council of Trent."

Another peculiarity of these writings is the presence of the so-called new religious philosophy due to the influence of the Alexandrian School. This is specially evident in the "Wisdom of Solomon," where there is an obvious attempt to reconcile the Jewish teachings with Grecian philosophy.

From their literature let us turn again to the Jewish people. The great council of the Jewish nation was the Sanhedrin. This council consisted of seventy one members, and met in one of the cloisters of the court of the Israelites at Jerusalem; it formed the court of appeal from the smaller Sanhedrins of twenty-three members each, meeting in the different cities. The old hypothesis that this council goes back to Moses's council of seventy-one elders cannot be substantiated; its history cannot be carried back farther than the end of the Persian and the beginning of the Greek period. The members were partly priests, partly Levites, and partly elders; when the Pharisaic party came into special prominence, they evidently formed a contingent of this body. The members must all be religious and learned in arts and languages, without bodily imperfections, and fathers of children. The High Priest acted as President. The members of the court sat in a semicircle; in front of them sat the two clerks to register the votes in favor of acquittal or of condemnation; in front of these were placed three rows of the disciples of the learned men. The prisoner must appear in an humble attitude and dressed in mourning. For a sentence of acquittal, a simple majority was sufficient, while for condemnation a majority of two was required. The jurisdiction of the Sanhedrin was limited simply to judicial decisions; it was the court to which were referred not only criminal cases, but also questions concerning the Jewish Scriptures, and hence was regarded with the greatest reverence by the people; it even exercised an important influence upon the decisions of the Roman officials, though it was possible at any time for the Roman authorities to proceed independently of the Jewish court.

Leaving the priesthood out of account, we must direct our attention to those Jewish orders, which, if not inaugurated, at least received their greatest development, during this interbiblical period. First in prominence stand the Scribes. These were really doctors or teachers of the law. In the earliest periods of Jewish history the priesthood exercised this function, but, owing to their degeneracy and the immense development of the law, many secular men devoted their time to this study. After the destruction of the temple and the general introduction of synagogue-worship, these teachers or explainers of the law were in great demand. In the beginning, the Law, so-called Thorah, was most revered, but there gradually grew up a vast mass of scribal interpretations of the law, which was called a "hedge" built around the Thorah. Now, in course of time these traditions and interpretations of the Scribes became of equal if not of greater authority than the law itself. These written traditions are embraced in what is called the Talmud, the most important part of which is the so called Mishna, or second law. That which had most concern for the Jewish people was the Midrash or Exegesis. Of this there were two divisions: (1) that which related to the regulation of the conduct of the people; (2) an elaboration of the historical portions of Holy Scripture. In the first part, express stress is laid upon the most minute observance of rites and ceremonies; this strict observance of the letter to the neglect of the spirit justified our Lord's accusation that they made void the law through their traditions. The second part, with its profuse elaborations of Jewish history, is replete with absurd, ridiculous, and almost blasphemous statements; as, for instance, in the story of the creation, the following things came into existence, according to the Mishna, in the twilight before the first Sabbath—the abyss of the earth, the mouth of Balaam's ass, the rainbow, manna, the rod of Moses, a stone apt ting worm, alphabetic writing, the writing of the tables of the law, evil spirits, the grave of Moses, Abraham's ram, and the first pair of tongs [Schuerer.] These scribes, who were called in the markets, Rabbi, Rabbi, sought by means of this false authority to obtain power over the masses, and the spirit of rabbinical traditionalism was as far from the teaching of the Old Testament as it was condemned in the New. The chief object of the Talmud was to dignify the rabbis, not to reveal the meaning of God's Word, and their precepts they forced upon the people, teaching them that it was a greater sin to disobey them than the written word. Well, therefore, did our Lord characterize them when he exclaimed: "Ye Scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites!"

Mention of the Pharisees leads us to the consideration of the two great sects into which the majority of the Jewish people was divided at the time of Christ—the Pharisees and the Sadducees. The origin of both sects still remains in considerable obscurity. The name "Pharisees" is from the Hebrew Perushim, meaning "Separatists"; it was evidently given to this sect at first by their enemies as a term of reproach; it signified separation not only from the uncleanness of the heathen, but also from the great mass of their own people. The members of this sect called themselves Chaberim, i. e., "neighbors," with distinct reference to their unanimity in strictly observing the law, especially in those points relating to cleanness and uncleanness. The formation of a distinct sect by such enthusiasts cannot date back farther than the times of the Maccabees. They evidently formed a large proportion of the so called "pious," who fought under Judas Maccabeus for the traditions of their fathers; when, however, the Maccabean conflict assumed the form of a fight principally for political rights, the Pharisees gradually withdrew, and, when the aims of the two parties grew widely divergent, as in the times of John Hyrcanus, an open rupture with the Asmonean power was the result. Their supremacy was restored by Alexandra, and henceforth the Pharisees controlled in a great degree the spiritual and political life of the nation. They ever possessed the ear of the people and all acts of public worship, prayers and sacrifices were performed according to their injunctions. It was, therefore, indeed a happy stroke of genius, that led Paul before the council to cry out: "Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee and the son of a Pharisee." A good indication of the characteristics of this sect is the fact that all the influential Scribes belonged to the Pharisaic party. The Pharisees declared the necessity of adhering not only to the precepts of the Thorah, or written law, but also to the oral law as given by the Scribes; hence Josephus says: "The Pharisees have imposed upon the people many laws taken from the traditions of the fathers, which are not written in the law of Moses." As to their distinct doctrines, the Pharisees taught that every soul is imperishable, but only the righteous pass into another body, while the wicked pass into eternal torment To such a point was this carried that the Mishna even says, "He, who says that the resurrection of the dead is not to be inferred from the law, has no part in the world to come." The second of their principal beliefs was in the existence of angels and spirits. With regard to their belief in Providence, Josephus is a little vague, but stripping off the Greek philosophy in his statement, it resolves itself thus: they believed that everything that happens takes place through God's providence, and in everything the co operation of God is to be admitted; but, on the other hand, quite as much stress is laid on man's responsibility. The standpoint of the Pharisees was not political but essentially religious. Considering the salvation of God's chosen people to be the only fact of importance in the world's history, they would acknowledge allegiance to no heathen king; it was the Pharisees who submitted to Christ the question, whether it were right to pay tribute to Cæsar; the majority of them even refused to take the oath to Herod. Their exclusive spirit carried itself at times to the height of absurdity; the Pharisee, to prevent his becoming unclean, avoided the slightest contact with a non-Pharisee, and it was pre-eminently this sect who found fault with Jesus for his intercourse with publicans and sinners.

The Situation as I See It.

The great question before us now is not whether we will educate our young women, but WHERE? The reason that this is a question of such magnitude is, college life enters into and becomes a part of the entire life. If a knowledge of text books—Latin, French, German, Mathematics, Literature, Music and Art—were all the pupil obtained at college, it would make no more difference about the college attended than the merchant from whom we buy articles. Indeed, it is a rare thing for a pupil to attend college without absorbing more of the college and its surroundings than of the text books. Years after the formulas in Calculus have been forgotten, we find the influence of the college life still lingering. What means the life long existence of an indescribable regard for "our alma mater!" This regard comes along with that we have for our old home church, and is not far removed from it.

There is no way to estimate just how much we get from text books, or how much we get from the college and its surroundings, but I venture to say that text books do much less than we usually think. I remember, from the first lecture I heard at college, a sentence like this, "You did not come here to show your learning, but to learn." About that time the pupil, who meant to be faithful, surrendered all preconceived notions about what ought or ought not to exist, so far as the college or its moral surroundings were concerned.

That the selection of the college should be left to our children is an error that causes much grief. To be reduced to the necessity of "choosing between two evils" is, to say the least, exceedingly unfortunate.

The reasons for educating our children at all are to aid us most in the selection of the college for them. Parents who make this selection on the basis of economy and convenience may get more than they pay for—more, very much more, than they want.

Greater care is necessary in the selection of a college for our young women than for our young men, because they are more susceptible, and necessarily more intimately associated with the personnel of the college.

Among the reasons for the education of our young women are these: That they may be of greater service to themselves—greater service in determining the rules of christianized society—and of much greater service in their church and denominational work. What college offers the best advantages along these lines? Those who will give the matter careful study will find that, from the very nature of the case, State colleges cannot take the place of denominational colleges in this most important work. They cannot afford an undertaking so divine its character. The faculty of a State school may or may not be Christians. If they be Christians, they may be quite inconsistent in their department, and tolerate much that we regard as inimical to Christian character.

NON-SECTARIAN COLLEGES.

We sometimes see colleges advertised as "non-sectarian." I have always regarded them with suspicion. Teachers belonging to different denominations are employed to more forcibly impress the idea of non-sectarianism. There is a kind of liberality in this that I always appreciate, but never enjoy. Non-sectarian schools and non-sectarian churches are very intimately associated in my mind. Non-sectarianism in schools or Christian organizations of any kind (for that matter, is productive of much injury to those who come fully under its influence.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE individual communion cup has obtained a foot-hold in many 'fashionable' churches at the North and in one—the Tryon Street Methodist church, Charlotte—in North Carolina.

We hope there is sufficient religion—if not enough common sense—in every Baptist church in North Carolina to discountenance any move to introduce this new form of a general rebellion against the Holy Bible. We speak advisedly; this individual cup business is of a part with the tendency toward woman-speaking, liberalism, anti-inspiration, new dispensation and ultra organization. The same people will be in for making a new Bible after awhile.

IT IS something to remain in an humble pastorate a long time. We are not surprised when we hear that ministers have remained in a rich city pulpit a great term of years. No doubt they had every inducement to remain; no sacrifice was required, and they had only to keep in with the people.

We often hear men say that this or that one has outlived his usefulness at some church, that it were wise to change. We doubt this. As long as a pastor is full of the Spirit, he can hardly spend his usefulness. If his people are in the wrong at heart, he will be most useful in trying to bring them right. It is always encouraging to hear of long pastorates. They are signs of spirituality.

WE HOPE no reader of the RECORDER understood an editorial note last week to imply that the income of $32,250 of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, Raleigh, N. C., was derived entirely from the State. The facts are, this institution received in 1894 $10,000 by appropriation of the Legislature, and $7,500 from the State Treasury, which latter sum the State is under obligations to the United States Government to expend for this purpose annually, and which would have to be paid out to some other institution, were it not thus disposed of. The State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts received in 1894 a larger income from the State and National Governments than any other educational institution in the State.

IT CAN be put down as sure that no one will allow suspicion to rest on him any longer than possible; an innocent man will prove his innocence. If a man say he is persecuted, and does not clear himself of charges brought against him, he is probably using the sufferings of the martyrs of a darker age to shield a guilty soul. It is not possible to persecute a man long enough to injure him, since means of communication have become so efficient. One who wishes to disprove a false charge can do so.

Sometimes suspicion attaches to a brother in the ministry. When this occurs, the brother should at once clear himself or get out of the pulpit. It does great injury to a church and injures all ministers for a preacher to live under suspicion. And, the reader may count on it, no one is going to live under suspicion, if he is innocent.

"TEMPERANCE is dead" according to the papers; but men in authority have killed before this only to find that the dead arose gloriously alive.

A Baptist preacher looked on the Senate Wednesday, and drew within his mind a striking analogy with another grave dilemma that harrassed one in authority many centuries ago. It was when a thief was released. The thieves of health and home and life and souls are still for the most part free. The Assembly is accountable. How the vote was, is given on another page. It should be cut out and used as a guide in the future.

Public sentiment is powerful, and the oftener it is disappointed, the stronger it grows.

Saloons will do a great deal of harm in two years. For this the Senators who voted against the Temperance Bill are largely responsible, they and their electors. The harm that saloons do two years from now will be charged against those who vote for men not pledged to do what they can to promote temperance.

We believe that the majority of the voters in North Carolina are opposed to the liquor traffic. If they will stand out—from now until November, 1896—and withhold their votes from every man not pledged against the sale of intoxicating liquors, there will be a great resurrection.

THE RISE OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—NO. 4.

The struggle between Christianity and paganism was long and severe; yet the very fierceness of the combat tended to conserve religion pure. When early in the fourth century Constantine ascended the throne, he declared for Christianity, and made it a State religion. The struggle with heathenism was now fairly over. The Emperor became head of the church, securing to the Christians protection of life and property. The church became rapidly popular; its priests became arrogant and debauched; religious corruption became prevalent; and, "the unkindest cut of all," the pagans made friends with Christianity and adopted it as the national religion in large numbers. As a consequence, the church was modeled anew; and since it was now fast becoming a vast and irresistable political machine, well might the ambitious clergy ask, in the language of D'Aubigne, "If Rome is the queen of cities, why should not her pastor be the king of bishops? Why should not the Roman church be the mother of Christendom? Why should not all nations be her children, and her authority their sovereign law?' So the church was shaped after the government of Rome, and eventually became the most powerful despotism on earth. In this way, paganism, foiled in the attempt to crush Christianity, succeeded in corrupting it by entering into it as its controling factor. Pagan forms and rites completely superseded the simple worship of the Gospel. Rome built altars for her priestly service, and "adopted paganisms, gorgeous rites, mitres, tiaras, wax tapers, crosiers, processions, lustrations, images, gold and silver vases, holy water, and temples." The idolatry of old Rome was handed over to new Rome with no remarkable change except the substitution of new names for the old idols. God the Father appears in their pictures as an old man; Jesus is represented as an infant in his mother's arms; while Rome's true deity is the Virgin Mary. Mary is as truly the goddess of Catholics as Diana was of pagans. It is not an uncommon thing to see the Virgin put forth as the great object of worship; look on the corner stone of a Catholic church and see those words—Sanctæ Mariæ, showing that the church is dedicated not to Christ, but his mother. In the Catholic prayer book is this petition: "Under thy protection we fly, holy mother of God; do not despise our petitions in our necessities, but deliver us always from all dangers, O glorious and blessed Virgin." These expressions, referring to her, are found in the litany: "Gate of Heaven;" "Cause of our Joy;" "Seat of Wisdom;" "The Health of the Sick;" "Help of Christians;" "Pray for us;" "Refuge of Sinners." Pope Gregory XVI. says: "But in order that we may receive all these blessings, let us raise our eyes and hands to the Most Beloved Virgin, who alone has destroyed all the heresies, who is the surest foundation of our hope, nay, who is all the foundation of our hope." Thus has Mary been defined as the sinner's refuge and only hope. What is left for Christ to do? He is displaced in the Papacy by a goddess called Mary; and worship due to him is given to a creature. Is not this the grossest idolatry?

The Romish mass, too, savors of rankest idolatry, and superstition of the lowest type. Hear Rome's definition of the mass: "The Holy Eucharist is a sacrament which contains really and indeed the body and blood, the soul and divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, under the forms and appearances of of bread and wine." Thus it is true as one has said: "The ancient pagans worshipped their god under material forms; the Assyrians, the sun; the Romans, emperors, and the modern pagans, under the form of a stone, or a tree. These were called and are called pagans, because they worship God under material forms. But the Roman Catholics, according to the Boston Catechism, worship God under this material form of bread and wine; therefore, are we not justified in pronouncing Romanism as no better than paganism?"

Rome commits idolatry also in the worship of unnumbered saints—her substitutes for the pagan deities. Among the ancients each country had its special divinity; for instance, Egypt had her Isis and Osiris; Babylon, her Belus; Greece, her Zeus. So the Catholics have St. Patrick as the patron saint of Ireland; St. Stephen, of Hungary; St. Louis, of France. As Juno was the goddess of Carthage, and Minerva of Athens, so is Mary the goddess of Rome.

No other pagan religion is so hostile to the Holy Bible. At least five popes condemned publicly the Scriptures. Pope Pius IX., declared infallible in 1870, proclaimed the Bible a dangerous and heretical book, the reading of which visits damnation on even the faithful. It has been no uncommon thing for priests to force their people to burn Bibles distributed by missionaries, and to incite them to the bitterest persecution. Rome, indeed, has gone far beyond pagans in persecuting, taxing her keenest wits to devise the most cruel instruments of torture. Romanism cultivated persecution as a fine art. President Edwards says: "And that persecution might be managed the more effectually, there were certain societies of men established in various parts of the popish dominions, whose business it should be to study, and improve, and practice persecution, namely, the courts of inquisition." And by this foul institution hundreds of thousands of protestants were murdered by the Beast, which, with his jaws dripping with martyred blood, stands before the high heavens of God as Satan's masterpiece of pagan perfidy.

We may notice the dogmas of Romanism next, termed in Scripture "lying wonders."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

If a member of a Baptist church asks the church to erase his name, has the church a right to do so without preferring any charge against him? Is it best to do so if he insists on it?

ENQUIRER.

We answer yes to both questions. A member who asks the church to erase his name, prefers a charge of sufficient weight against himself. A brotherly effort ought to be made to have him tell what is his trouble. If, however, he insists on keeping his conscience to himself and persists in the request that his name be erased, his wish should be gratified; and it would hardly be right to prefer a charge without more evidence.

On the other hand, a member against whom charges of unworthy conduct can be brought, should not be allowed to have his name erased until they have been brought up.

NEW TRIAL OFFER.

Our trial offers have been so successful that we propose another. Any new subscriber who sends fifty cents will get the RECORDER from March 1st to July 4th, and an Almanac thrown in, if the supply has not exhausted.

Back numbers can be furnished, if desired, as we have about thirty copies of each RECORDER since January 9th, to spare.

IT STRIKES us that it is about time the epoch-marking Fortress Monroe Conference were panning out. Just after the meeting occurred many contemporaries were enthusiastic in predictions of great results; but of late, the subject seems to have grown cold. Perhaps Gen. Morgan's prejudiced and incorrect charges that Southern whites had been burning negro schools, which he has since been brought, by the Religious Herald, to qualify, has helped convince some credulous brethren that much of the fraternity at Fortress Monroe was of the same quality as that of similar meetings which have been held every year or two by some organization ever since Lee surrendered.

THE RECORDER will act on the following suggestion from pastor C. S. Blackwell of Elizabeth City. It is in practical accord with the ideas set forth by Rev. N. S. Jones in his article, which his met with general approbation:—

"THE REGIONS BEYOND ROLL."

I suggest that the RECORDER put Bro. N. S. Jones' proposition (that every preacher in the State hold at least one protracted meeting this summer in some destitute place where the Baptist cause is not represented) into practical shape by opening a "Regions Beyond Roll." Print on this roll the names of the men and places where they will hold such a meeting. I believe two hundred preachers will send in their names and the places where they will hold such meetings, to be placed on such a roll of pledged and willing workerf. I believe God will go with such workers and give them two thousand converts to lead into the waters of baptism. I will hold a meeting in Hyde county where there is no Baptist church. Brother preachers, select your places and send in your names.

CALVIN S. BLACKWELL.

The Roll begins next week, and we hope hope Bro. Blackwell will send the date of his meeting as soon as he arranges it. We expect to have a long list to publish in a few weeks. This time of year has not been notable for meetings heretofore; and we think that the fruits of this movement will not be most apparent until summer. However, names can be sent as soon as definite plans have been arranged, and dates later. If there is a pastor without a destitute point in view, let him send his name; the Lord knows there are enough places for all. We hope every volunteer will see that an account of his meeting is sent to the RECORDER.

We do not want the laymen to be left out of these plans. One of the objects of the movement is to arouse them to activity. A few have been notably blessed in similar work, and we have reason to believe that the Lord will bless many more. Let no one say he is too busy, a poor speaker, or unworthy. Come on and do your best, and God will remedy any defects. Paying other people to do personal work has sapped the spiritual life of many a laymen.

It must not be forgotten that this is a movement for volunteer work, without money and without price, in hope of souls for hire. The work is to be done where otherwise it would not have been done. Of course contributions should be taken for expenses, whenever it seems wise to do so.

A movement so apostolic cannot fail to do good. We believe that the Lord will be with the workers from the beginning, and we hope and pray that there will be such an outpouring of the Holy Spirit that many souls will be brought into salvation and many waste places made glorious and lovely with the light of Christianity.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....The Levering Bros., Baltimore, have given $2,000 toward the Foreign Mission debt.

....Rev. G. P. Hamrick has changed his location from Boiling Springs to Henrietta, N. C.

....The Reidsville Baptist is a newly-started paper in the interest of our Reidsville work.

....Rev. J. C. Hiden is preaching in special services to the students at the University of Virginia.

....The last Convention seems to have considerably reduced the co education fever in South Carolina.

....It has been definitely decided that the anniversaries of our Northern brethren will be held at Saratoga this year.

....The receipts for the various objects of our Convention were omitted last week. We publish them for two weeks in this issue.

....Copy was scarce in the office of the excellent Baptist and Reflector. Our fertile Bro. Folk wrote half a column on the big snow.

....We are glad to know that Rev. M. A. Jenkins, of Waynesville, has returned from his vacation sufficiently restored to health to occupy his pulpit.

....The Baptist Book Concern has sold out its stock and fixtures, but it will continue to handle books and promises to make cheaper prices than ever.

....Charity and Children reports that the Orphanage withstood the cold spell in good condition. The children are said to be doing well. And we are glad.

....The sermon preached in Charlotte by Dr. Pritchard on "Christian Union," will be printed in the RECORDER. It is one of the ablest of the Doctor's efforts.

....February 25th the venerable Presbyterian, Dr. Hoge, of Richmond, will celebrate the 50th anniversary of his pastorate of the 2d Presbyterian church of that city.

....Rev. G. W. White desires to have it announced that his name was unintentionally omitted from the list of ordained ministers in the minutes of the West Chowan Association.

....The Oxford Orphan Asylum expended $25 last year for Sunday school literature. Will the Orphan's Friend kindly tell us the nature of this literature, by what company published, and the names of its editors?

....The Moravians will be required to pay back taxes for seven years on their "Reservation" property at Winston-Salem, and to pay regular taxes on it hereafter. The property is not used for church purposes.

....The salary of the president of South Carolina College (which was the "University of South Carolina," has been reduced from $3,000 to $2,500 and that of the professors has been reduced from $2,000 to $1,900.

....The Methodist of the South have lost two great men lately, Dr. W. P. Harrison, and ex-Chancellor Garland of Vanderbilt University. Both of them had spent long lives in faithful service, and their deaths are distinct losses to all who knew them.

....The able Prof. H. H. Harris of Richmond, Va., President of our Foreign Mission Board and an editor of the Baptist Teacher, will deliver a series of lectures at the Seminary, Louisville, in March, on Missions.

....Now that the weather is clearing, we hope many pastors and friends, who have been kept in doors, will make an effort as soon as possible to get the RECORDER more thoroughly into their congregations. We are doing our best to make this possible.

....Dr. N. D. Hill is to succeed the late famous Prof. David Swing of Chicago. The latter had a seperate and distinct church of his own, having had to separate from the Presbyterians on account of his doctrines. It has been thought that his congregation cannot be kept together.

....A lot of women met in Washington City the other day with a petition against liquor selling with nearly two million names, representing forty nationalities. They made their speeches and came back again. They seemed to be more interested in "Woman's Rights" than in Temperance.

....The Missionary Union (Northern Baptist) will have to raise $483 607 23 to meet current appropriations and cancel last year's debt, and only seven weeks remain before the books of the Union are closed. The churches that support this Union are of that progressive class which advocates institutional churches, women speaking and the B. Y. P. U. A.

....We have arranged to publish a series of articles in support of the Baptist position on the Sabbath question, to appear in March. They are intended to supplement the exhaustive discussion of Annihilation which recently appeared in these columns.

....Secretary R. J. Willingham is travelling throughout the length and breadth of our Convention in the interest of our Foreign Board. He is making mighty efforts to lift the burdensome debt. He has been to Washington, Baltimore, Atlanta and Little Rock, Ark.

....Secretary Rucker will please accept thanks for a copy of the minutes of the fifty-fourth session of the Green River Baptist Association, which met at Big Level church. The delay in getting out the minutes was due to failure of a job office to receive a shipment of type.

....Can we not have during March and April the most general and largest collections for Home and for Foreign Missions ever known in this State for these objects? The needs of the work call for it. Only two months and the reports to Southern Baptist Convention must be closed.—C. Durham.

....All the Canadian provinces, except Quebec, have voted for prohibition. The Supreme Court however, has decided that the provinces cannot take such action. The English government, with its established religion, may force whiskey on her provinces as she forced opium on China. Shame.

....Rev. J. F. MacDuffie desires us to announce that Mt. Zion S. S. Association will meet with Olive Branch church Friday before the fifth Sunday in March. Let other Sunday school Associations send us announcements of their next meeting, with programs, as soon as possible.

....Rev. C. L. Dowell has resigned the pastoral care of Black Creek church, South Carolina, after a five years' pastorate, to take charge of Society Hill church in the same State. Bro. Dowell and his wife are North Carolinians, and we are glad to know that they are happy and successful in the work.

....At Statesville, according to the Landmark, Bro. E. F. Jones, of Gastonia, has been holding successful meetings in the Baptist church, and the aggressive pastor Church has been preaching on the streets in order to reach those who will not come. Such zeal will be rewarded with God's blessing.

....We have read a well considered article in the Central Baptist, entitled "Churches Prefer Young Pastors," by Rev. J. A. Stradley of Oxford. It concludes thus: "Let the churches 'covet earnestly the best gifts,' whether among the young or old people." Men as thoughtful as Bro. Stradley generally speak wisely.

....We are glad to hear that the valuable Cleveland Springs properly will remain the possession of Bro. Wilkinson; and we sincerely hope he may come out on top of his physical and financial troubles. It would be a positive loss to the State if he and his wife could not be found at Cleveland Springs making home for weary people every summer.

....We were grieved to learn that Bro. N. S. Jones, of Salisbury, had lost his estimable mother, whose death occurred at the residence of Bro. Jones. Sister Jones lived most of her years in Wake county, where she will long be remembered by those who knew her, as a pious, God-fearing, faithful Christian. With a large circle of friends we extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

....A committee of the Protestant Episcopal church will recommend to the General Convention of that church that a "Primus" (another name for Pope) be elected by the Bishops, to reside at Washington. Bishop Potter, the president of a club that sells whiskey on Sunday, is spoken of prominently for the place. A new Rome is at hand. Look out for "The Church of America" next.

....Our Baptist friends began building a chapel on West Depot street, opposite Miller Bros. machine shops, sometime ago. Owing to the blizzard of the past few weeks, work necessarily was suspended. Soon, however, we presume the chapel will be completed, and will prove, we trust, not only a convenience, but a source of much good to that neighborhood.—Winston Republican.

....The faithful little band at Washington has spent $365 on remodelling their house of worship. They need about $200 more, and must look to the other churches to aid them. This is a most worthy object. Rev. Duncan McLeod, their pastor, is doing a good work in Washington, and if the churches will come to his aid, the house of worship in Washington will soon be completed.—C. Durham.

....Mrs. Caroline E. Lougee died at her home in Raleigh on the 20th instant, after a short illness. She was well known and sincerely loved, and though more than eighty years of age, she was active in good doing until the end. The Tabernacle Baptist church at Raleigh, of which she was a member, was the center of her religious interests, she having been a large contributor toward building and remodeling it. Our sympathy goes out to her mourning relatives and friends.

....Rev. J. K. Fant writes to the Courier, S. C., from Littleton, N. C., Feb. 18th, I am to remain here. I wanted to go to Barnwell. The noble church made me a most generous call, satisfactory in every respect; but I seemed to be doing good here, and these good brethren and sisters so entreated me to stay with them, that, after prayerful consideration, I felt it was the Lord's will that I should do so. You see all my capital, i. e., my influence, is invested in Littleton; and, for a time at least, I could do more good here than elsewhere. And the Lord is greatly blessing me, and continuously showing me tokens of good. Blessed be his holy name!

....A prominent advocate of Young People's Societies has sent out letters to a number of country pastors, with the purpose of preparing an article for the RECORDER on the Y. P. movement from the country pastor's point of view. It will be interesting.

....The King's Daughters have been pushing a bill in the Legislature for an appropriation for a school for imbecile children. Let the King's Daughters run their own private affairs, and if the State needs an institution for imbecile children, let it have one all its own. Since the King's Daughters have assumed to administer one of the ordinances, they ought to be looked upon as a sect of themselves, or at least as a branch of a sect that is too broad to respect the ordinances.

....Let the committees send in their Union meeting programs as soon as possible. We hope to have them all in by March 2d; and if they are not, we will have to wait until March 13th before we publish them. The Union meetings have not been as largely attended or as interesting as they ought to be. We have arranged to publish two articles on the subject, one from a country pastor, the other from a city pastor; and we hope to have active, useful spiritual meetings the last days of March.

....The following brethren have our gratitude for sending new subscribers to the RECORDER in spite of the weather: D. J. Whichard, Greenville, N. C; J. L. Shinn, Morganton, N. C.; R. L. Byrd, who is pastor at Abbottsburg, N. C.; B B. Price, Clerk of the Superior Court McDowell county; Rev. J. A. Stradley, of Oxford; Dr. H. T. Chapin, of Pittsboro; Rev. G. W. Harmon, of Ramseur; F. M. Norris, Holly Springs; Rev. B H Matthews, Plymouth, and sister M. J. Blackwood, of Blackwood, N. C., who is ever on the alert to do good. The good weather leads us to hope that many more of our friends will avail themselves of the first opportunity to urge our trial offer upon some one.

....A brother at Bridgewater asks "What constitutes marriage?" and says he wishes to know "whether the pair were termed man and wife (in the Bible) before the officiating ceremony." Ceremony was necessary, although it was not like the ceremony now most common. Marriage is a civil and religious contract. It is frequently a great parade of finery; in Israel it was a solemn contract. The ceremonies of Sampson's and Jacob's marriages lasted a week. In Israel Church and State were so interwoven that a marriage was at once of the church—religious, and of the State—civil. Now it must be civil, and may be sanctioned by a church. Scripture bearing on the subject can be found in Gen. 1: 28, 2: 18-24; Mal. 2: 14 15; Matt. 19: 3-11; Eph. 5: 22, 23; 6: 1-4; 1 Cor. 7: 2-39.

....Prof. G. P. Moore, in a very profoundly philosophical article in the Religious Herald, asks: "But here may not one be permitted to suggest that it is in regard to the divine aspect as dynamic that the relations with the material, finite universe are affirmed to be intimate, and even indissoluble, so long as the cosmos exists?" To which we answer, Of course; go ahead and suggest it all you please. We have not the dimmest idea what it means, but so long as it is offered as a simple suggestion, no one should object. If only Prof. Moore should lay it down as a dogma now, the case would be different. Let us by all means encourage our philosophers to indulge in suggestions. Suggest away, then, you Monists, or Christocoemists, or Genetists, or whatever other sort of ists you may happen to be; suggest away to your heart's content; and if stupid mankind do not know what you are talking about, why then you have the consolation of knowing that such has been the fate of all philosophers.—Western Recorder. Professor Moore is a teacher in Furman University, South Carolina. If his students follow his example they will be as unfit for useful life as a Chinaman who speaks only his own language would be in a North Carolina pulpit. Some one ought to tell Prof. Moore that it is both vulgar and vain to use his words.

....The BIBLICAL RECORDER is one among our valued exchanges. It is always fresh and newsy: and, barring its very hackneyed discussion of the subject of baptism, is quite attractive. It is getting time that a great newspaper representing a numerous branch of Christians, should learn to discuss a subject upon its merits and withhold such offensive phraseology as "Baby Sprinkling," etc. If there had been Baptists in the days of Abraham and Moses (and there must have been if we are to accept the teachings of the RECORDER), what would they have called the circumcision of infants? "Baby butchering," no doubt. Of course they would have used some irritating phraseology, and hurled it against the Almighty who commanded it to be done. Ridicule is the last resort of a forlorn and hopeless cause. We have no taste for religious controversies over such trivial things as the mere method of performing an ordinance; but we feel that so far as Methodists and Baptists are concerned Judah and Ephraim should cease to vex each other.—N. C. Christian Advocate.—First, Bro. Advocate, the RECORDER is not of the opinion that to call baby sprinkling by its name is ridicule; in all seriousness we deny that the term is one of ridicule. That Pedobaptists do sprinkle babies is a known fact. To call this rite baptism would be poor diction, since baptism, according to the standard authorities, is a dipping. Second, your allusion to circumcision in this connection is rather significant. Third, we would like to know in what number of the RECORDER you found it teaching that there were Baptists in Abraham's day. The Advocate is pardonable for having "no taste for religious controversies over such trivial things." But really, while we can find where God commanded circumcision, we would thank the Advocate to tell us where He commanded the sprinkling of infants, and we do not mean any offence by the term.

Home Missions.

North Carolina is not doing much for Home Missions. The total amount contributed from the meeting of your Convention in December to February 13th, is only $270 66. This is an average of little more than $100 00, per month or $100 a year from the whole State.

Dear brethren, it would be criminal in us not to pay our missionaries who are suffering such privations this hard winter, but how can we unless you help us?

Your brother,

I. T. TICHENOR.

A Suggestion.

In order to relieve the pressure on the Home Mission Board, I beg to suggest that every church in the State which has not taken a collection for Home Missions under Dr. Tichenor's recent appeal, set apart the first Sunday in April for that object. Brother pastor, should your church not meet for worship on that Sunday, please arrange to take your collection on the first meeting time thereafter, unless it should be the fourth Sunday. In this case take the collection the fourth Sunday in March, as otherwise the amount could not be forwarded before the Secretary's report is closed for the year.

And let the treasurers of the churches please observe: when money for this object comes into your hands forward at once to J. D. Boushall, Raleigh.

Brethren, the Convention year is rapidly closing. Only March and April are left, and North Carolina's apportionment for the Home Mission Board is still far short; but one good pull together will lift our obligation. What say you, brethren, to my suggestion?

R. T. VANN.

We can do it. We all ought to do it. By the Lord's help, we will do it. Yes, Bro. Vann, to your suggestion I say, Amen.

C. DURHAM

A Layman on Bro. Jones' Xian.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am not a subscriber to your paper; the reason why I am not is because I am not able. I am a poor man with a large family, but my father is a subscriber and I happened to get hold of a copy of his paper and read a communication from Bro. N. S. Jones in which I heartily concur. Not ministers only, but there is a work for every member of the church to do, there is no time for idleness in the vineyard of the Lord. When we meet a neighbor in the road, if he is not a Christian we should approach him about salvation and try to point him to Jesus. We should not miss one opportunity of doing good. Some people seem to think that the church will carry them to heaven, that after they join there is nothing more to be done but go to heaven on flowery beds of ease. I tell you, dear brother, I fear that if judgment day should dawn many church members would go down the sides of the bottomless pit. The good Book says, "by their fruits ye shall know them." Go to the ball rooms; you can't tell them from the world. Same thing in the bar rooms and gambling hells. Christians should come down severely on all such, and if they do not leave off such places, expel them from the church. Let us cut loose from all such, and from all things that bind us to this earth, and take a bold stand to the front for Christ, having our loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and being shod with the preparations of the gospel of peace, and take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the spirit and press forward toward the mark of high calling, ever looking to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, and thereby be a true soldier of the cross of Christ. Let us think more religion, talk more religion, act more religion, and in short, let us live nearer to each other and nearer to God in the future than we have ever done in the past.

But to return to Bro. Jones, I think his suggestions are good. Ministers and lay members may go two and two, hold revivals, preach the word, be instant in season and out of season in the work of an evangelist, and thereby accomplish a great deal in saving souls from endless woe. My every day prayer will be that God will be with you and bless you in that great and noble work. A great deal can be accomplished in this way, and many a poor soul that is now groping will be brought into the marvelous light and liberty of the gospel.

I am no preacher (would to God that I were) but about fourteen months ago another brother and myself started a prayer-meeting. We went about from house to house every Sunday, sung, read the Bible and told the old, old story the best we could, and God blessed our efforts. Sometimes it would seem as if the heavens would open and the blessed Saviour would come down and stand in our midst. We could feel his presence so plainly that it would seem as if we could almost put our hand on Him. It is a common thing for us to have six or eight converts at a meeting, and one night we had a large congregation and every sinner in the house professed but one. This, I think, was the grandest meeting I ever saw in my life. Our meetings are still going on every Sunday, large crowds are flocking to them. Old and young are being converted to God. Since we commenced ninety-three souls have been happily converted and nearly all of them have joined the church, living consistent members and are on the road to heaven. Pray for us that God will more abundantly bless us in this great and glorious work.

If these few sentences are worthy of a place in your noble paper, you are at liberty to insert them. But tell Bro. Jones to go forward by all means in his noble work.

I remain your brother in Christ,

C. N. RIGGAN.

Resolutions Respecting Rev. R. Van Deventer.

The following resolutions were adopted by the B. Y. P. U. and C. C. class of Henderson:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Father in Heaven to call to another field of labor our beloved pastor, friend and teacher, Rev. R. Van Deventer,

Resolved 1, That while we sincerely lament his departure we submit as obedient children to His holy will, praising His name that for eight years He has granted us the services of so wise, faithful and enthusiastic a leader.

Resolved 2. That we will follow the plans he has marked out for our instruction and guidance; that we will study the Word and strive to make it the "Man of our counsel," believing that He who has said, "They that seek me early shall find me," will bless our humble endeavor to learn of Him and to promote His cause.

Resolved 3. That we will gratefully remember his interest in the young people, his care for them and his earnest efforts for their advancement in the Christian life.

Resolved 4. That we commend him to the good people of Burlington, as an "Israelite indeed in whom there is no guile," and beg that they tenderly care for him and faithfully follow his wise training, and we pray God that His richest blessings may rest on him and his church.

Resolved 5. That these resolutions be sent for publication to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Henderson Gold Leaf; the same having been spread upon the minutes, and a copy forwarded to Rev. Robert Van Deventer.

Thanks to "Old Man."

I want to join with others in thanking "Old Man" for his wise and timely statements in regard to some hurtful features of modern revivals. Old men may go too slow in some things, and young men may go too fast. It is well to have old men, whose experience teaches them where danger is, to put on the brakes and check the speed on dangerous tracks. "Old Man" sees danger, has put on the breaks, and is trying to flag us down, to save us from being wrecked. For years I have felt we were getting on dangerous ground in regard to new revival methods. Improvements have been made in many things, but very few in revival methods. The old is better.

I agree fully with "Old Man" except, perhaps, on one point. If I understand him, I think he is a little sceptical on the conversion of young children. After pastoral work and observation for thirty years, I am satisfied that many of our best Christians were converted when young. "Old Man" says that when one or two girls or boys go forward for prayer, or to confess Christ, many others often follow, not because of conviction for sin, or evidence of conversion, but simply because they see others going. I have often seen this same thing, and have feared at this point.

But ministers conducting revival meetings should be very explicit and guarded in the invitations they give. They should be so guarded as to prevent, if possible, even young children from acting from wrong motives. Then, too, parents ought to instruct their children in private, and advise them not to go forward for prayer unless they feel they are sinners and desire to be Christians, and not to give the hand as a professor unless they felt sure of their conversion. Parents should carefully examine their children at home, and if there is room to doubt their conversion, they should advise them to wait and examine themselves before joining the church. In this way, it seems to me, "Old Man's" difficulty respecting young children might be largely avoided, and sincere children not hindered.

I am becoming more and more dissatified with modern revival methods. I have by observation and inquiry learned the results of great meetings held of late years in South Boston, Va., and in Durham, Oxford and Henderson, N. C. Not one-fourth of the professed converts in these meetings are today consistent church members.

Will some one keep an eye on the many converts in the recent great meeting at Chapel Hill, and report twelve months hence how many earnest, consistent Christian workers are found in churches as the result of that meeting?

I believe in revivals wisely conducted. But may the good Lord deliver us from the high-pressure, easy-going, hard shaking religion. It pleases the Devil, misleads sinners, and injures the churches.

Notes from Virginia.

North Carolina is usually much interested in Virginia Baptists, at least ought to be when the number of North Carolinians now filling pastorates in Virginia is taken into consideration. Hence, I venture again a few notes which may be of interest.

RICHMOND COLLEGE.

Things have been, and to some extent are yet in a great "muddle" in and around this important institution.

The election of Prof. Boatwright was a great surprise and provoked a great deal of criticism on the part of many of the leading Baptists of the State. He is a young man of ability as a teacher, but from what many who know him best say, he possesses very limited qualifications for the important position of President of a great Baptist College. Just what will become of the "muddle," I'm not prepared to say. Several of the best professors will leave, among them Prof. H. H. Harris, one of the best Greek teachers in the South. It is just to Dr. Harris, to say also that he was not in any sense a candidate for the presidency. It is to be hoped now that the matter will quiet down, and that these good men can in some way be induced to remain. North Carolinians should be glad that they have been spared any such trouble, and that they have the best College President in the South.

THE HOLY GHOST MEETING.

This is suggested for Richmond some time in the near future. It was originally proposed by D. B. Straus of Salem, and J. M. Gambril of Roanoke, two laymen—one a Lutheran and the other a Methodist. Rev. Jno. W. Daugherty of Richmond has done most of the correspondence. It is proposed to hold a ten days' conference with such speakers as Moody, Torry, A. C. Dixon, and George C. Needham. The subject for the entire session is "The Holy Ghost." Some few criticise the idea just as there are men who criticise everything that does not originate in their own brain or the brain of their own crowd. It will be a great meeting and everybody who can should be there.

IN NORFOLK.

The Baptists are growing in Norfolk. Dr. J. J. Hall is now arranging to build a very handsome church. His Park Avenue brethren are a noble set. They have just had a very gracious meeting in spite of the worst weather for forty years. Rev. Leu. G. Broughton of Roanoke was with him for seven days, and was called away by death in his church. Dr. Hall is doing well.

ROANOKE.

Perhaps no city in Virginia is making such progress along Baptist lines as Roanoke. Pastor Broughton of Calvary has built one of the best church houses in Virginia in the past fourteen months, and has just closed one of the greatest meetings in the history of Roanoke. Over 150 professions of faith in Christ were made. His noon meetings for business men at the Y. M. C. A. lecture rooms have been made permanent, and now at noon the rooms are filled with business men for three quarters of an hour every day. Calvary church has nearly doubled its membership in fourteen months. The other churches there are also making rapid gains.

RICHMOND.

In Richmond, of course, things are getting along well among Baptists. They know just how to do things in Richmond. A prominent L. L. D. said to your correspondent the other day that W. L. Wright, D. D, was the greatest preacher in Richmond in many respects; they say, however, that he will talk about "old Montgomery" in spite of his D. D., which he carries with so much dignity. Pastor Broughton from Roanoke is to hold meetings with him in April. They expect a great meeting.

We are looking for the results of your fight on education. We will have to deal with the question in Virginia soon.

B.

From J. L. Shinn.

Dear Recorder:—Owing to the snow and ice I have been shut in for some time. I have not been able to reach my churches for nearly a month. I never disappoint, when it is in my power to go. Let us bow with reverence to His will. My field is in a good condition. I have been on a part of my field eight years. I have good workers at each point. With such brethren as S. E. Poteat, Feddie, Joel and Mike Huffman, F. E Cook, Timothy Smith and many others at Pleasant Hill. D. C. Stroup, W. M. Hilberbrand, Jessie Huffman, Rev. P. A. Whitener, R. C. Whitener and many more at Mt. Home; J. R. Williams, A. L. Talent, J. N. Clontz, Willie Pless and others at Hopewell. Robert Patton, J. J. and Jas. Bendfield, J. H. McFalls, with a host just like them at Zion, with many, many working sisters at each church, all working for the Master. Results will follow. "When Z on travaileth, she brought forth sons and daughters." I love to preach among these people, and may my poor, feeble efforts ever receive the blessings of God.

I rise to second Bro. N. S. Jones' proposition. I extend my hand across the hills and valleys that intervene between the brother and myself, and say that I will, by grace from the Master, be one to go to destitute places this year, to tell the sweet story of salvation. Let us have the gathering of pastors and others at a time and place best suited.

The cause in general is looking up. Morganton has called Bro. R. L. Patton for the year. Glen Alpine has no pastor. So far as I know all the other churches of the Catawba River Association have pastors. The RECORDER gets better as it grows older.

Thirteen Missionaries Rescued.

The Charlotte Observer printed a telegram Sunday, saying that the U. S. war-ship, Yorktown, arrived at Chefoo, China, Feb. 23d, after having received thirteen missionaries off the coast of the Shantung promontory. We are under the impression that some of our "Gospel Mission" brethren have been laboring in this region. But the fact that the Yorktown was on hand is good assurance that Americans were respected by the Japanese and Chinese. The former have taken Fort Wei-Hai-Wei, a Chinese stronghold in this region.

From Rev. J. R. Page.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The last six or seven weeks has been bad weather in this section for church going. I intended talking RECORDER to my people, but rain, hail, sleet and snow has kept me from seeing the brethren and sisters. It will be such a pity for the Baptist and all other people not to read "The Divine Origin of Baptist Churches," and "Christ a Baptist," and also "The Rise of the Roman Catholic Church." I believe the Bible and the BIBLICAL RECORDER are indispensable to a true Baptist.

WE NEED THIS BOOK.

We ought to have by all means put in one little book, "The Divine Origin of Baptist Churches," "The Weapons of Our Warfare," by Rev. T. J. Taylor; and "Close Communion," by Rev. C. A. Jenkens. If some one will put this in book form I will be one to try to put it in every Baptist family in the State, and as many others as possible. What say you brethren? The people need this book, and they ought to have it by all means. Well, I would like to be rich long enough to give or sell every family in the land a copy of this book.

Whitakers, Feb. 19, 1895.

The president of the Evangelization Society, the advertising agency for pulpit aids, seems to be dissatisfied with this child of his intellect, and is now to run a "Whosoever Home and Farm." He owns a 300 acre farm in Virginia, where he owns also the Evangelization Society's stamping ground; it (the farm) will be entirely undenominational, not unlike other ordinary farms, and he proposes to give work not only to children, but to others, which seems to include tramps. The farm will be maintained, says the Baltimore Evangel, entirely by free will offerings,—which is not to be doubted.

Attention Chaplains!

Rev. A. D. Betts, Newbern, N. C., has been chosen to write the history of the Chaplain service among the N. C. Troops during the late war. He requests each Chaplain to write and tell him when his service began and ended, and to what church he belonged, giving also something of his experience and work during and since the war. Friends of dead Chaplains are requested to send information of them.

We Beg His Pardon.

I try to keep on good terms with printers and keep them in good humor with me, for they are very useful people, but there are some errors in my little slip on Sunday-schools, RECORDER of Feb. 20th, that are intolerable. For, "I have given my views and influence," read "my voice." For "enterprise" read interprises. And the following caps the climax: "The yearly meetings have become to large and handsome," read too large and burdensome. They may be too handsome also, but I have not heard of it.

They also publish other popular books.

We cannot afford to select a school of this sort for our young women, if they are to be of the greatest service in our church and denominational work.

PEDOBAPTIST COLLEGES.

Nor can our denomination furnish collegiate advantages for another denomination. If the doctrines of any denomination are so distinct that it is necessary to withdraw from all other denominations, and be organized as a church, elect officers and call a pastor to preach its distinctive doctrines once or twice each week, I cannot see how that church can afford to put its young women under another teacher (who is frequently a preacher) as distinctively different in his views of very important doctrine, for five days in each week, during ten months in each year, with all the influence of Sunday-school teaching thrown in. While you are reading these lines you are thinking, What narrowness! Well, I did not expect you to agree with me on this point—you are a Baptist. The Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, and many other denominations, agree with me most heartily. They have shown much wisdom in this respect Only under very peculiar circumstances will they patronize other than their own colleges.

The college life rarely fails to enter into the Christian life. We may wish it were not so, but it is so just the same. It is a sorry college that fails to write itself on the lives of its pupils, when it has a good opportunity. We cannot estimate the loss our denomination has sustained by patronizing other than Baptist colleges. One of two results is the rule; there are exceptions, of course. Our young women have either left our denomination, to join the Roman Catholic church, the Episcopal church, the Methodist church, the Presbyterian church or the "non sectarians," or they have become so "liberal" in their views of doctrine as to be of very little service to any church. So far as our young women are concerned, we can as well afford to employ Pedobaptist pastors for our churches as to try to do with Pedobaptist colleges.

We cannot afford to jeopard those principles for which our fathers bled, and which are dearer to us than life. It is unwise to put our young women under influences of any sort that will cause them to be less intense as Baptists. O. L. STRINGFIELD.

How to Teach the Lesson.

1. That which must be done before anything else can be done is to gain the attention of the class, and this must be won or attracted, not compelled or forced. In order to do this: 1. Get in position to see every member of the class, and so that they can see you. Never sit on the same seat with your class. 2. Look steadily at each scholar until the look is returned. 3. Refer to the last lesson, linking it with the one being taught; relate some incident bearing on the lesson, or ask some question likely to excite their curiosity. Other plans will suggest themselves to the thoughtful, earnest, and faithful teacher.

2. Endeavor to keep every scholar thoroughly interested from beginning to end. Keep all busy and on the alert. Draw out by well put questions all the leading facts of the lesson, with the important geographical and chronological connections. There is no true way of teaching except by question and answer.

3. Having previously selected what you regard as the most important spiritual, doctrinal, and practical truths, impress them with all earnestness upon the minds and hearts of the scholars. Bring to bear the illustrations, scriptural and otherwise, which you have collected during the preparation of the lesson.

4. Always make a solemn and tender appeal to the consciences of the scholars. As you love your Saviour and the souls of your scholars, do not fail to impress upon them the importance of personal religion and the duty of immediate repentance. "A heart wholly consecrated to Christ is the great source of Christian power." Then

Be earnest—salvation's the prize;
Be patient the cross thou must bear;
Be holy, be gentle, be wise;
Be constant, be fervent in prayer.

—Rev. T. C. Boykin, in Kind Words.

Man's Helplessness.

A young man entered a pastor's study on Monday morning, with some excitement and earnestness, and said: "You preachers seem privileged to utter palpable contradictions in the pulpit. You yesterday declared the inability and helplessness of the sinner, and then turned right around and urged him to repent and believe, under the penalty of final perdition."

The pastor understood the case well, had been all over the ground before, and without raising his pen from the paper on which he was writing, said quietly to the young man: "Well, if you can repent of sin without any help from God, all I have to say is, go and do it."

Instantly the confession burst forth from the young man's lips: "I have been trying to do it all the morning, but I cannot."

"Then," said the minister, as he laid aside his pen, "let us go to Him who can and will help you do it." And they knelt in prayer before him who is able to take away the stony heart, and give a heart of flesh, a heart that can repent and believe.

That young man surrendered to God then and there, and has been now for thirty years or more preaching the gospel of gracious help to sinners perishing in their helplessness, and perishing, too, because they do not know, and are unwilling to acknowledge their lost and helpless condition, and call upon God for help.

The doctrine of man's helplessness, and utter dependence upon Divine grace for salvation, ought to be preached in every pulpit.—Central Baptist.

A Thing Worth Knowing.

No need of cutting off a woman's breast or a man's cheek or nose in a vain attempt to cure cancer. No use of applying, burning plasters to the flesh and torturing those already weak from suffering. Soothing, balmy, aromatic oils give safe, speedy and certain cure. The most horrible forms of cancer of the face, breast, womb, mouth, stomach; large tumors, ugly ulcers, fistula, catarrh; terrible skin diseases, etc., are all successfully treated by the application of various forms of simple oils. Send for a book mailed free, giving particulars and prices of oils. Address Dr. BYE, Indianapolis, Ind. [Cut this out and send to some suffering one.]

Putting off Salvation.

The steamship, Central America, on a voyage from New York to San Francisco, sprang a leak in mid-ocean. A vessel, noticing her signal of distress, bore down toward her. Seeing the danger to be very great, the captain of the rescue ship spoke to the Central America:

"What is amiss?"

"We are in bad repair, and going down; lie by till morning," was the answer.

"Let me take your passengers on board now."

But as it was night, and the commander of the Central America did not like to send his passengers, lest some might be lost; and thinking the ship could be kept afloat a while longer, replied:

"Lie by till morning."

Once more the captain of the rescue ship cried, "You had better let me take them now."

"Lie by till morning," was sounded back through the trumpet.

About an hour and a half afterward her lights were missed; and though no sound had been heard, the Central America had gone down, and all on board perished, just because it had been thought they could be saved better at another time.

How much this reminds us of the fate that may await those who persist in putting off the claims of the gospel! Jesus cries, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Alas! the folly of those who answer, "Not now; wait; 'when I have a convenient season I will call for thee.'"—Sel.

Contemplating the End.

Whilst it is not wholesome to be always thinking of death, it is more unwholesome still never to let the contemplation of that end come into our calculations of the future, and to shape our lives in an obstinate blindness to what is the one certain fact which rises up through the whirling mists of the unknown future, like some black cliff from the clouds that wreath around it. Is it not strange that the surest thing is the thing that we forget most of all? It sometimes seems to me as if the sky rained down opiates upon people, as if all mankind were in a conspiracy of lunacy, because they, with one accord, ignore the most prominent and forget the only certain fact about their future; and in all their calculations do not "so number their days" as to "apply" their "hearts unto wisdom." "Go thou thy way until the end." And let thy way be marked out with a constant eye towards the end.

Therefore, dear brethren, tremendous importance attaches to each fugitive moment. Therefore each act that we do is weighted with eternal consequences. If we will put our trust in Him, "in whom also we obtain the inheritance," and will travel on life's common way in cheerful godliness, we may front all the uncertainties of the unknown future, sure of two things, that we shall rest, and that we shall stand in our lot. We shall all go where we have fitted ourselves, by God's grace, to go; get what we have fitted ourselves to possess, and be what we have made ourselves. To the Christian man the word comes, "Thou shall stand in thy lot." And the other word, that was spoken about one sinner, will be fulfilled in all whose lives have been unfitting them for heaven: "Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place." He, too, stands in his lot. Now settle which lot is yours.—Rev. Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

"Did you pay your car-fare?" "No, I'm that much in; the conductor didn't ask me for it; it is his business to ask me for it." The person was well-dressed, respectable—a respectable thief!

THE DOCTORS FAILED.

Them Jenks Studied Up His Own Disease and Cured Himself.

(From the Providence, R. I., Bulletin.)

There are but few diseases that puzzle physicians more than rheumatism. There are a great many theories as to its cause, and a great many theories as to the best means of curing it, most of which are absurd.

One of the greatest sufferers of rheumatism known in the annals of medicine is John G. Jenks, of Riverside, R. I. He became the victim of rheumatism while in the army, and the disease seems to have given him a taste of all its various tortures. Physicians and medicines failed to give him any relief, until at last he effected his own deliverance from the bonds of pain.

"Rheumatism!" said Mr. Jenks, when the subject was broached by a reporter who went to hear his story. "Well, I should say I do know something about it; all learned by actual experience, too. I first contracted rheumatism in the army, and I have had every variety of the affliction since, and have suffered such agony with it that at times death was a pleasant thought to dwell upon. Take medicine? Enough to stock a drug store, and none of it did me any good. Then I began to study the disease myself. I made up my mind to get acquainted with the enemy and fight it on different lines. I had a theory of my own and began to look around for a remedy that was calculated to have the desired effect. One after another was tried until at last I hit upon Pain-Killer, which I applied freely. Almost with the first application came relief. I kept on using it and the rheumatism was soon knocked out. Neither have I had any return of the trouble.

"I also used Pain-Killer internally for the ague, another war relic. It did what pounds of quinine couldn't do.

"Pain-Killer keeps guard in my house against all ills, and it has never yet slept at its post of duty."

SECURE A POSITION.

Wanted; for office work, on salary, in most every county in the south and west; a young lady or gentleman. Those from the country also accepted. Experience not necessary; in fact, prefer beginners at a small salary at first, say to begin, from $30 00 to $60 00 a month.

Chances for rapid promotion GOOD. Must deposit in bank cash, about $100 00. No loan asked; no investment required. It is a salaried and permanent position. (Strictly office work.) The enterprise is strongly endorsed by bankers. Address P. O. Box 433, Nashville, Tenn. (Mention this paper.)

Children Shrink

from taking medicine. They don't like its taste. But they are eager to take what they like—Scott's Emulsion, for instance. Children almost always like Scott's Emulsion.

And it does them good.

Scott's Emulsion is the easiest, most palatable form of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda added to nourish the bones and tone up the nervous system. The way children gain flesh and strength on Scott's Emulsion is surprising even to physicians.

All delicate children need it.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

The Helpful Way.

The only way in which the Christian can take hold of things rightly and do the will of God is the helpful way. A decent, respectable, outward observance of the laws that control social affairs will not shield you from the penalty that will surely follow a handling of things in a wrong spirit. It is your duty to use life in a helpful way. "They helped every one his neighbor, and every one said to his brother, Be of good courage." This is the Bible rule. It is not a matter that you can treat in an indifferent or careless manner. A simple failure to obey the law of helpfulness may bring about hurtful results where there is no set purpose or desire to do mischief—

"Evil is wrought by want of thought
As well as by want of heart."

Whoever is seeking the will of God and follows Christ must come out of the condition of apathy, indifference and carelessness, and earnestly take hold on life in a helpful way. It is this spirit that casts out selfishness, irritableness and fault-finding from the atmosphere of the home and fills it with the light of love, strength and joy. It gladly shares the burdens and enters into the plans that may improve the material, social and moral welfare of the community. Who can measure the blessing and good that follow the life of faithfulness in discipleship that is ever ready to do the duty that lies nearest in the home, the community and the church in the helpful way.—Great Thoughts.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" are the simplest, quickest and most effectual remedy for Bronchitis, Asthma and Throat Diseases.

"For Jesus."

Out of her scanty store a woman laid by her penny each week as the Lord's money. She had not decided what to do with it, when she sickened and was about to die.

A friend came to care for the sick one, and when she saw how ill she was, sent for a minister. He came, and talked and prayed with the woman, and was about to leave, when she remembered her little store of money, and asked the woman who cared for her to find it in a box and bring it. Handing it to the minister, she said: "It is for Jesus. I wanted to save more; but I am going to Him now."

After the woman's death the little sack was opened, showing seventeen pennies.

The minister was so deeply impressed with the sacredness of this little trust, which had been laid by amidst the deepest poverty, that he desired to have more added to it, and use it as the foundation for some noble work.

Telling his congregation of it, a responsive feeling grew within the hearts of many, and an encouraging collection was made on the spot. Others, hearing, still kept adding, until enough was raised to start a mission which was needed upon the frontier. Can we not all do something "for Jesus."—American Messenger.

It Cost a Soul.

"How much is that estate worth?" said one friend to another, as they passed a beautiful mansion and extensive and highly cultivated grounds.

"I do not know how much it is worth," was the reply, "but I know what it cost its owner."

"How much?"

"His soul," was the startling reply; and then he proceeded to narrate how exclusively the owner had lived for one object—to build himself a home on earth, utterly careless of the home on high; and had died impenitent and suddenly.—Sel.

SUBJECT FOR FEBRUARY: MISSIONS IN SOUTHERN STATES.

"Enlarge the place of thy tent." Number of missionaries, 357. Laboring throughout the entire South in all destitute places among Indians, Colored People, Foreign Population, the poor of large cities, the mountain regions, and out on the frontier.

STUDY TOPICS.—The many new industrial enterprises in the South attracting emigration—many people of many kinds. Let us not neglect the needs of their souls. The obligation resting on the highly favored to establish Sunday-schools and churches in less favored localities. The publications of the Sunday-school Board of the S. B. C. important factors in the work.

Mountain Region People.

"The most effective and economical method of helping this vast body of Baptists is by denominational schools, conducted by men and women who sympathize with their needs and are fitted to stimulate their desire for higher attainments and a nobler life."

Before many years the Board hopes to see this whole region from Alabama to Pennsylvania dotted over with schools, where science shall serve the more clearly to show that Jesus is the world's Redeemer, and that the voice of Christianity is the voice of God.

Our Native White Population.

Our native white population is after all the greatest mission field of the Board. It is greater, not only in the numbers to be reached, but in the world-wide influence that will result from its evangelization. This country, inhabited by this restless, aggressive, enterprising, grasping Anglo-Saxon race, is the greatest mission field of the globe. To subject it to the will of the Master is to provide for the speedy conquest of the world.

Let the enlightening influence of the gospel from these Southern States go to all places where the cotton grown out of the soil now goes, and it will enswathe the world in the life-giving power of our blessed Christianity. If the thorough evangelization of America means, as it surely does, the evangelization of the world—if writing "holiness to the Lord" upon the hearts and the possessions of this people means the enthronement of Christ over the nations, it is impossible to use words too strong or a devotion too absorbing in our advocacy of missions at home

The Penitentes.

"Oh! what a dreadful picture!" exclaimed Oscar, lifting a photograph from the pile at which he had been looking. "Did you see any people like that!"

Oscar's father and mother had just returned from a long visit to New Mexico, and the photographs were among the mementos they had brought home; Oscar and his mother were now looking them over together.

"Yes, dear," she replied, "and it is a very unpleasant sight to see people beating themselves in that way."

"I think they're very silly to do it. Won't you tell me about them?"

"Yes, Oscar, I will tell you, but it is not a very pleasant story.

"These men are Mexicans who belong to a sect of Roman Catholics, and are called 'Penitentes.' You can easily see that the name signifies 'repentant.' They really believe that if they inflict terrible torture upon themselves their sins will be forgiven. They have not yet learned that Christ died for their sins, and they have only to accept him as their Saviour in order to be forgiven."

"What are some of the things they do to torture themselves?" asked Oscar.

"In the first place, when they join the society they are obliged to endure great suffering; but their hardest practices are gone through at Easter time. On Good Friday they dress themselves in white cotton trousers, their feet, back, arms, and chests bare. Two crosses are planted in the ground an eighth of a mile apart. A heavy cross is placed on the shoulders of each Penitente, and he drags it back and forth between the two standing crosses. If one faints or sinks from exhaustion, the companion following behind walks over him, dragging his heavy cross after him.

"I do not like to tell you any more, dear; it makes my heart ache to think of those poor people."

"Oh! please tell me more. What do they do next?" begged Oscar.

"Do you really like to hear about them, Oscar? I do not see how you can endure it."

"Well, I don't think it is a very nice story, but I like to know about the people who live in my own country," he replied.

"I suppose you are right. After they have borne their crosses, the Penitentes go into their lodge to rest, returning in a short time to prepare for another exercise, which they call 'Bearing the crown of thorns.'

"A young man is chosen, and on his back between the shoulders is bound a bunch of thorny cactus. Another, bearing a large wooden doll representing the infant Jesus, heads the procession. Then follows the man with the crown of thorns on his shoulders, and behind him are grouped the Penitentes. The procession moves slowly over the same track between the two standing crosses. One of their number plays a weird strain on a fife, repeating it over and over until it becomes a most doleful wail.

"Behind the Penitentes follows a large company of old men, women, and children. When the music ceases the procession stops and the followers fall on their knees, with their heads bent forward almost to the ground, and remain so until the music is again heard, and the procession moves forward two or three rods. When the music again ceases, the procession stops, and the followers drop into the same position as before. And so they keep on, moving from one cross to another and returning.

"As they approach either cross, they circle around it, bowing as in adoration, and the young man with the cactus between his shoulders leans with his back to the cross and throws his entire weight on the cactus, resting against the cross. Sometimes he faints from exhaustion and the loss of blood."

"In the picture they seem to be whipping themselves," said Oscar.

"Yes, they beat themselves with a whip of soap weed. The leaf of the soap seed plant is about a foot long and two or three inches wide, with a point like a needle. These leaves are braided into whips, with the sharp points protruding from every part."

"Did you see all these things?" asked Oscar.

Oh, no, indeed! but your father saw it all and told me about it. Sometimes a Penitente allows himself to be tied to a cross, in imitation of our Saviour, thinking that if he can endure the suffering for hours he will be forgiven all the sins he has committed or will ever commit."

"How awful to think of such things being done in the United States! Why are they allowed?"

That question I cannot answer, my dear; but the best way to overcome such evils is to educate the people and bring them out of their superstition, and that is what our dear home missionaries are trying to do.—Over Sea and Land.

These Two

Men had a bet. What it was we would tell you, only we do not want to add to the loser's misfortune. If you look at the picture you will see that he has all that he can bear up under now. It was but yesterday that this man was an object of envy and wonder. His was a well stored mind in a boiled-shirted body—you know lots of fellows like him. He knew everything, almost, from the time that man was a protoplasm till the hour that Baby Esther Cleveland got her last new tooth. He answered questions in B. C. History with an off-hand "for-goodness-sake-don't-you-know-that" air that was as biting as a northern blast to less favored mortals.

So the boys in the store where he worked put up a job on him. All of them read The Observer regularly and one day a special announcement suggested a great scheme to them. They saw within their reach a source of information that would give them a

Whole Army of Facts

Where their "know-it-all" friend had only an "awkward squad." They secured it and then that innocent-looking chap you see in the barrow got into a discussion in history with the man with the mind.

Soon the latter was terribly shocked to hear these awful words come from the fat and rosy face before him:

"Old man I think you are wrong."

At once a bet was made. The man with the mind lost of course for his fat friend had primed himself for the contest from the new up-to-date Encyclopaedia Britannica, a set of which the boys had purchased. The bet was paid the following day, just as you see it in the picture.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

NEWS SUMMARY.

North Carolina.

Two men, a woman and a child were frozen to death in a boat on Pamlico river recently.——The Newbern Fair last week was a success, attendance being good.——North Carolina is threatened with a school-book row on the order of that in Virginia which brought about unparalleled vituperation and recrimination, and a suit for libel, for $50,000, by State Supt. of Pub. Instruction, J. E. Massey, against Sam Small, editor of the Pilot, Norfolk. W. J. Peele, Esq., has suggested in his address before the Educational Committee of the North Carolina Assembly that all North Carolina State Superintendents for several terms have been unduly (though not consciously) influenced by the American Book Company. The matter will culminate this week; the chief effort being to change the system of selecting text-books for the public schools.——A negro named Ferron shot and killed Deputy H. C. Owen near Cleveland the 20th. The murderer is in jail.——The Presbyterian Synod will raise $600 to pay for a pastor of the N. C. Waldenses.——Wm. Gladden, drunken, was burned to death at a distillery in Gaston county, recently. London Hall, negro, drunken, was frozen to death in Rowan county. These men were probably advocates of the warming influence of whiskey.——Rose & Leak assigned at Fayetteville for $40 000; Jno. R. Ervin, at Charlotte, for $8,000.——Another cotton mill will be established at Salem; and Winston will have a new—its fourth—cigarette factory.——Senator Ransom has been appointed Minister to Mexico, at a salary of $17,500 a year, and his appointment has been confirmed.

A Year's Work at Fordhook Farm.

This is the title of a new book published by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., the well-known seedsmen, of Philadelphia. It is superbly printed on coated paper, and illustrated with fifty beautiful half-tone engravings from photographs. It is intended to present in an attractive manner, by the united efforts of pen and camera, an exact, comprehensive, and impartial picture of Fordhook precisely as it appears to the average man or woman visiting the Farm. The following extract from the author's introduction gives an idea of the scope of this little volume:—

"Mr. Burpee would be only too glad if every one of the thousands upon thousands of the firm's customers from all over the globe could go to Doylestown and see Fordhook with their own eyes; but as this is a manifest impossibility with the larger proportion of them, this little book has been prepared as a sort of humble mirror which will reflect, at least, a feeble likeness of Fordhook and its doing to the uttermost parts of the earth, and make all peoples acquainted with the system and process which have made this one of the greatest seed farms in the world, and the source of one of the most flourishing business enterprises in the United States."

Although the price is 10 cents, W. Atlee Burpee & Co. will be pleased to send a copy upon receipt of two 2 cent stamps to the address of any planter who desires to consult it before purchasing this season's supply of seeds. It is a book well worthy of a careful reading.

General Assembly.

FEBRUARY 18.

SENATE.—Cook introduced a bill to revise and digest laws of the State; Francks, to amend Constitution, so as to prohibit use of R. R. passes by public officials. Numerous unimportant private or local bills passed second or third reading. Ratification of the bill to protect holders of life and fire insurance policies was announced.

HOUSE.—Speas offered a resolution to reduce salaries and fees of all State and county officers. Brown introduced a bill to compel tax-payers to list their solvent credits; Lusk, to provide for a public school tax in the several school districts of the State; and to regulate salaries and fees of sheriffs in certain cases; Fleming, to repeal the bastardy law; Nelson, to regulate the sale of Jamaica ginger; Crews, for the relief of negro widows whose husbands were wounded in the war. About sixty other bills of limited significance were introduced. The rest of the day was occupied with discussion of the Senate bill limiting the rate of interest to six per cent., which finally passed third reading by vote of 75 to 15.

FEBRUARY 19.

SENATE.—Dowd, a bill to amend Constitution to prevent members of the Assembly from holding other public office; Hurley, also introduced a bill relating to office holding. The temperance bill was taken up, discussed two hours, when the opposition voted to adjourn, probably not knowing what course to pursue. On several test ballots the vote was 21 to 21, the President inclining to Temperance; but nothing could be done, and the matter lay over until next day.

HOUSE.—McKenzie, to require bicycle riders to dismount when they meet a vehicle; Currie, to protect owners of sheep and goats. The new election law bill was then taken up, and after much discussion, passed second reading. A resolution to take holiday Friday and go to the Newbern Fair passed. The members were carried free by the railroad. Bill to pension widows of soldiers passed third reading. Bill to prohibit killing fish with dynamite passed.

FEBRUARY 20.

The Temperance bill came up as unfinished business. Amendment after amendment was offered until Moody offered one that neutralized the effect of the bill, and it passed. Those who opposed this Temperance law are: Messers. Abell, Belamy, Brown, Carver, Cook, Dula, Forbs, Fortune, Fowler, Green, Herbert, Long, McCaskey, Moody of Haywood, Rice, Sharp, Shaw, Sigmon, Starbuck, Taylor, Wall, White of Perquimans—22. Those for it: Messrs. Adams, Ammons, Black, Chandler, Dalby, Dowd, Farthing, Grant, Hamrick, Hoover, Hurley, Lindsay, Mewborne, Moody of Stanly, Norris, Paddison, Saunders, Snipes, Westmoreland, White of Alamance, White of Alexander—21. Many excuses were made—one man was impudent enough to say that he was a temperance man, but could not support this bill. The other excuses were less impudent, but no whit better. The Senate refused to join in with the House in the free trip to the Newbern Fair. White, introduced a bill to enforce equal and just payments of debts of insolvents.

HOUSE.—The Temperance law was unfavorably reported Sutton introduced a bill to regulate sale of malt and fermented liquors. Senate bill to reduce tobacco warehouse charges, making the auction fee 15cts. on piles of 100 pounds or less; ten cents a hundred on all piles of more than a hundred pounds; commission on gross sales not to be more than two and a half per cent. The bill passed third reading. The election law bill passed third reading.

(The House held a night session the 20th. None but unimportant bills were considered.)

FEBRUARY 21.

SENATE.—Cook introduced bill to provide for election of Justices of the Peace, "to restore local self government." Bill passed third reading to pay Rev. Solomon Pool $2 400 interest on $4,000 (which has been paid him) said to have been advanced by him to the State University in the reconstruction period. Bill to extend to Farmers' Alliance insurance privileges passed third reading, introduced by Hoover. Pure food bill passed second reading; it requires food stuffs on sale to be labeled, so that ingredients may be known; passed third reading next day.

HOUSE.—Bill to create office of Superintendent of Printing, salary $1,500 a year, introduced. A committee was appointed to find a railroad bill, which was referred to the Judiciary Committee, but has mysteriously disappeared. Resolution to adjourn in respect to the dead mulatto, Fred. Douglas, passed. To prohibit fishing or hunting on land of others without permission, passed third reading.

FEBRUARY 22.

SENATE.—Rice, New Hanover, introduced a bill that is aimed to prevent prohibition of liquor selling in the vicinity of certain churches. Adjourned at 1 o'clock in respect to Washington.

HOUSE.—Pease introduced a bill making county officers responsible for lynchings. To require railroads to redeem unused tickets passed third reading. Adjourned in honor of Washington.

FEBRUARY 23.

SENATE.—Mewborne, a bill to encourage horticulture. Bill to loan $10,000 for the completion of the Confederate monument was defeated. There was much speech-making.

HOUSE.—Private and local bills occupied the time.

Of all Fevers

the worst and most serious is Dengue or break-bone fever. Called "break-bone" because one's bones are not only racked with pain, but feel as if they were tightly held, as by a vice.

At times one feels that the pain is almost unbearable, and many are brought to Death's door by the terrible prostration which follows this grievous complaint.

All persons should know that

is the one medicine which relieves this extreme weakness and brings the patient back to sound health by it's well-known medicinal qualities. From the first bottle the improvement is marked and permanent recovery is but a matter of a short period.

DIED.

BORDEAUX—Died at his home in Pender county, N. C., on Jan. 7th, 1895, Empie W. Bordeaux, in his twenty-second year. He was a consistent member of Sharon Baptist church. He knew he was going to die, and said he was ready to go; and when his brother spoke of leaving him on Sunday before his death next day, he told him not to leave him until Wednesday, then he could go home. The next day he died, on Tuesday he was buried, and on Wednesday his brother did go home. He was a lovable boy. May the Lord console his brother and relatives, and may they prepare to meet him where parting is no more. A. J. BORDEAUX.

LOVE—David Love departed this life from Elizabeth City for his heavenly home Feb. 2d, 1895, in the sixty-first year of his age. For many years he had been a member and a deacon in the Baptist church of Christ. He was held in the highest esteem by his brethren in Christ and by the community generally. He left three sons and one daughter, one of whom is Rev. J. F. Love, the honored pastor at Suffolk, Va. Another is deacon W. L. Love of the church here. Brother Love bore his ten years of affliction with great faith, fortitude and cheerfulness. Not a murmur escaped his lips during all of his physical torture. All of his children were with him during the last week of his illness. A large concourse of citizens attended his funeral from the church in a pelting snow storm.

"Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season," Job 5: 26, was Pastor Blackwell's text for the funeral sermon. C. S. B.

HUNT—Mr. James A. F. Hunt departed this life at his residence near Laurinburg, Richmond county, N. C., Nov. 14th, 1894. He was about seventy years of age. He had been confined to his room for five years, so his death was not altogether unexpected. He suffered much during the last years of his life; but his suffering was borne with meekness and Christian fortitude. He manifested great faith in Christ his Saviour. It gave his family much joy to know that he was ready and waiting the summons when his blessed Master saw fit to call him.

He leaves a loving wife and six devoted children to mourn their loss; but our loss is his eternal gain. His wife and children can think of heaven as being nearer and dearer to them since he has gone up there. God giveth his beloved sleep.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. W. B. Arrowood, after which the remains were buried in the quiet cemetery at Laurinburg, N. C. May the Lord comfort the bereaved family. W. E.

BROCK—Our beloved brother John Brock, Jr., the son of our well known and highly esteemed John Brock, Sr., departed this life January 18th. He was twenty-one years and seven days old when he died. He has ever been faithful to his church since his connection with it, and a dear lover of the Sunday-school, serving as teacher for several years. He was always ready and willing to assist his dear father who has served as superintendent of Powell's Point for a number of years. It has been my privilege to associate with this dear family a great deal during the past five years. I have never known the deceased brother to do anything unbecoming to a Christian. I have yet to find the young man that I prize more highly for his deep human piety and thoughtfulness to the cause of Christ than I did Bro. Johnnie Brock.

His father is senior deacon, and Johnnie was clerk of Powell's Point Baptist church.

Weep not, dear parents, brothers and sister, but strive to meet the son and dear brother in heaven. The golden harp strings must be touched in order to make melody to Jehovah's praise. N. P. S.

SAVAGE—On Feb. 13th, 1895, Bro. James M. Savage (brother-in-law of the late Rev. R. R. Savage) died of pneumonia, having nearly reached his fifty-sixth year. He suffered much, but bore his sufferings patiently and uncomplainingly. He desired to get well, but was ready to go, saying "the will of the Lord be done."

In early life Bro. Savage professed faith in Christ and was baptized into the fellowship of Great Fork Baptist church. He afterwards transferred his membership to Middle Swamp church, but four years ago moved it back again to Great Fork. He served his church a number of years as deacon. The writer was his pastor nine years, and can testify to his faithfulness in the Master's service. He was a willing worker, ever ready to bear his part of the burden, and to do his part of the work. He will be missed much in the church and in the Sunday-school, but most of all in his home. He was a kind and affectionate husband, a loving father, an obliging neighbor, a warm and generous friend, a good man. He leaves a widow and two children and a large number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. But we are confident that our loss is his eternal gain.

May the Holy Spirit comfort the bereaved ones, and minister unto them grace sufficient for every need. W. B. WAFF.

Tributes of Respect.

Mt. Energy Lodge, No. 140, A. F. & A. M., mourns the loss of one of its oldest and best members, in the person of Nathaniel E. Cannaday, who was a charter member, and

WHEREAS, His virtuous and useful life entitle him to more than a passing notice, his many virtues having raised him above and made him superior to those about him; for in him we beheld what was said of Christ's ancient disciples whose name he bore, "an Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile."

A Christian of the genuine scriptural type, a churchman without sectarianism, a patriot and a politician without demagogism. For more than a half century he was an active, successful leader of the people in morality, in religion and in politics, and such was his standing in his native county that his fellow citizens would have placed him in the highest position possible. It is only occasionally that such a man appears upon the arena of life, and it is probable that his place will not soon be supplied. This man after having realized the fulfillment of the promise of "long life and of seeing many days," was gathered to his fathers. Now, therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of the deceased the church, the community and the country have sustained a very great loss.

Resolved, That we do sincerely sympathize with the family and relatives, and as a token of our high appreciation of the character and standing of the deceased, we will wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and these resolutions be presented to the family, also inscribed in our journal, and a copy sent to The Orphan's Friend, with the request that the BIBLICAL RECORDER and the North Carolinian copy.

Could We But Know.

Could we but know
The land that ends our dark, uncertain travel
Where lie those happier hills and meadows low—
Ah! if beyond the spirit's inmost cavil
Aught of that country could we surely know—
Who would not go?

Might we but hear
The hovering angel's high imagined chorus,
Or catch, betimes, with wakeful eyes and clear,
One radiant vista of the realm before us,
With one rapt moment given to see and hear,
Ah! who would fear?

Were we quite sure
To find the peerless friend who left us lonely,
Or there, by some celestial stream as pure,
To gaze in eyes that were love lit only—
This weary mortal coil, we are quite sure,
Who would endure?

—E. C. Stedman.

God holds the key of all unknown,
And I am glad;
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if He trusted it to me,
I might be sad.
What if to-morrow's cares were here
Without its rest?
Better that He unlock the day,
And as the door swings open, say,
"My will is best."

—Rev. John Parker.

Curious Indian Games and Sports.

We had some quiet plays which we alternated with the more severe and warlike ones. Among them were throwing wands and snow-arrows. In the winter we coasted much. We had no "double rippers" nor toboggans, but six or seven of the long ribs of a buffalo, fastened together at the larger end, answered all practical purposes. Sometimes a strip of basswood bark, four feet long and half a foot wide, was used with much skill. We stood on one end and held the other, using the inside of the bark for the outside, and thus coasted down long hills with remarkable speed.

Sometimes we played "Medicine Dance." This to us was almost what "playing church" is among white children. Our people seemed to think it an act of irreverence to imitate these dances, but we children thought otherwise; therefore we quite frequently enjoyed in secret one of these performances. We used to observe all the important ceremonies and customs attending it, and it required something of an actor to reproduce the dramatic features of the dance. The real dances usually occupied a day and a night, and the program was long and varied, so that it was not easy to execute all the details perfectly; but the Indian children are born imitators.

I was often selected as choirmaster on these occasions, for I happened to learn many of the medicine songs, and was quite an apt mimic. My grandmother, who was a noted medicine woman, on hearing of these sacrilegious acts (as she called them,) warned me that if any of the medicine men should learn of my conduct they would punish me terribly by shriveling my limbs with slow disease.

Occassionally we also played "white man." Our knowledge of the pale-face was limited, but we had learned that he brought goods whenever he came, and that our people exchanged furs for his merchandise. We also knew, somehow, that this complexion was white, that he wore short hair on his head and long hair on his face, and that he had coat, trousers, and hat, and did not patronize blankets in the daytime. This was the picture we had formed of the white man. So we painted two or three of our number with white clay, and put on them birchen hats, which we sewed up for the occasion, fastened a piece of fir to their chins for a beard, and altered their costume as much as lay within our power. The white of the birch bark was made to answer for their white shirts. Their merchandise consisted of sand for sugar, wild beans for coffee, dried leaves for tea, pulverized earth for gunpowder, pebbles for bullets, and clear water for dangerous "fire water." We traded for these goods with skins of squirrels, rabbits, and small birds.—Dr. Charles A. Eastman, St. Nicholas.

To nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a priceless boon, for it not only strengthens the mother, but also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child. For those about to become mothers, it is even more valuable for it lessens the perils and pains of childbirth and shortens labor. Of all dealers.

Cold Water.

An enthusiastic writer on temperance says:

"Cold water is the most suitable beverage for man or beast; it cools, thins and clears the blood; it keeps the stomach, head and nerves in order, and makes men cheerful, serene and healthy. Then give me reviving, purifying, and fertilising water!—the rill, the stream, or the torrent which flows from the bright sides of our cloud crested mountains—the gush, cool and clear, that bubbled up before Hagar and fainting Ishmael, that followed the stroke of the prophet's rod from the rock of Horeb, and that watered the garden of primeval Eden. Give me the pure water that Jacob drank from the pitcher of Rebekah, and the Saviour tasted at the well of Jacob; that cheered the spirits of the favored Israelites, the valiant Oldonites, the noble Nazarites, and the honored Rechabites; that quenched the thirst of the mighty Samson, the holy Daniel, the fearless John, and the youthful Timothy! Give me of those cheering streams, those flowing brooks, and those crystal rivers, whose transparent surface reflects all that is dark, or soft, or bright in the beautiful firmament above. Give me those gentle streams, those ever-allaying waves, in health and sickness, and when the keen thirst of the expiring pang shall seize my vitals, give me those waters untainted and free, until I drink of that river, the streams whereof shall make glad the City of God."

The Cultivation of the Love of Beauty.

I do not believe there is any girl who will read these pages who has not felt the thrill of the spring woods or the autumn sunsets or the starry sky; but there are a great many girls who take very little time to look at these things. They sit over their crochet work when the twilight sky is flushed with rose and violet, and the great planets are shedding their golden light through the veil of colors, and think it is provoking that it is growing dark. On the rocks by the sea-shore they read a flimsey novel. I am afraid most of us must remember beautiful scenes which we have made commonplace—and worse—by gossiping conversation. The trouble with us is not that we cannot feel beauty, nor that it is not lying all about us, but that we are not willing to choose it before the trivialities which interpose to hide it from us. I do not mean, of course, that we are not to laugh and talk in the open air.

"Is this a time to be gloomy and sad
When our mother nature laughs around?"

I do mean that we ought to take the time to see the glory of the world, that we ought to rejoice that it is our duty to take time to see it, and that we ought not to let our meaner selves obstruct our vision. Those of us who have time should take every day—not simply for the sake of our health, but expressly to see the wonderful sky and wonderful earth. And who has not time? There are unhappy women crowded in city garrets, who must work for their lives, who can hardly lift their eyes to see the sunset shining in at their attic windows; but those of us who can read a book need not plead that we have no time to see beauty.—From "Chats with Girls on Self Culture."

How a Man Goes to Sleep.

"Order is Heaven's first law," and the old truth is manifested even in the process of going to sleep. When a man drops off to sleep, his body does not do so at once, so to speak. Some senses become dormant before others, and always in the same order. As he becomes drowsy, the eyes close, and the sense of seeing is at rest. It is quickly followed by the disappearance of the sense of taste. He next loses the sense of smell, and then after a short interval the tympanum becomes insensible to sound, or rather the nerves which run to the brain from it fail to arouse any sense of hearing. The last sense to leave is that of touch, and in some hypersensitive people it is hardly ever dormant. Even in their case, however, there is no discriminating power or sense of what touched them. This sense is also the first to return upon awakening. Then hearing follows suit; after that taste, and then the eye becomes able to flash impression back to the brain. The sense of smell, oddly enough, though it is by no means the first to go, is the last to come back.

The same gradual loss of power is observed in the muscles and sinews, as well as in the senses. Slumber begins at the feet, and slowly spreads up the limbs and trunk until it reaches the brain, when unconsciousness is complete, and the whole body is at rest. This is why sleep is impossible when the feet are cold.—New York World.

Overeating.

Half the people I know have violent attacks of indigestion, because they will persist in eating hearty meals when in an exhausted condition. They seem never able or willing to realize that there are times when the system is in no fit state to grapple with a full meal. They come in tired and hungry, almost ravenous, not thinking that maybe a good deal of what they consider hunger is gastric irritation, then sit down to a table covered with the substantials of life, and deliberately go to work to overtax the already strained vital powers. No person should eat heartily when very tired. The wisest thing to do is to drink a cup of hot water with three tablespoonfuls of milk in it, sit down for five minutes, and then begin slowly to eat, masticating thoroughly. In a little while the vigor of the stomach will come back, and all will be well. If this course were followed, there would not be one case of dyspepsia where there now are a dozen. It seems to be the most difficult of all things properly to control the appetite. It seems to be their master. It requires will power to get it under control. When once mastered, something important has been accomplished in self discipline.—Journal of Hygiene.

UNAPPROACHABLE in every way—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. In everything that makes one medicine better than another, these little Pellets stand first. They don't seem like medicine, to tell the truth. They're so small and so pleasant to take, and their action and effects are so natural.

Dullness, drowsiness, weariness, loss of appetite, furred tongue, frequent headaches with or without dizziness, chilly sensations, and occasional nausea show you that you need Dr. Pierce's Pellets. That is Biliousness. And in Biliousness, as well as every disorder of the stomach and bowels, they'll give you a lasting cure.

UNION MEETINGS.

BY REV. J. A. STRADLEY.

We do not mean by the above heading Christians of different religious denominations uniting in religious meetings, for such meetings, in our judgment, do not always yield the best results. It is a sad day for christianity when Christians engage in such unions as require them to suppress a part of Bible truth in order to please men rather than God.

But we mean by union meetings the gathering together of Baptist workers—ministers and laymen—for the purpose of discussing questions pertaining to the development of Christian life and Christian work. Such meetings, wisely conducted, are very helpful, and ought to be kept up.

Some suggestions as to how to make these meetings profitable are here presented.

And first, churches somewhat centrally located should invite these meetings to be held with them, so that representatives of many churches could conveniently come together. But one hindrance in the way of these meetings is, that the churches shrink from entertaining them. But the benefit of these meetings far outweigh what little trouble and expense they are. Churches ought cordially to invite and entertain these meetings. By so doing they will get good and do good. The mission of churches is to do good.

Another important matter is, to have judicious committees to prepare suitable subjects for discussion. These committees should be well acquainted with the needs of the brethren and churches within the bounds of these union meetings, so as to present subjects for discussion that would meet these needs. There are hundreds of subjects pertaining to Christian life and growth, Christian work, Bible doctrines and church ordinances that need to be better understood by all our people. It might be well for thoughtful church members to suggest to these committees such subjects as have impressed them as needing discussion. These subjects should be worded so as to make their meaning clear, so that all the brethren can understand them and be prepared to talk on them.

Again, the subjects presented for discussion should be thoroughly studied at home. It is chilling to the interest of a meeting for a brother to say: "I have been appointed to speak on this subject, but I hardly know what it is. I have not studied it, but I will try and say something about it."

Each Christian owes it to himself and his fellow-man to carefully study his duty to himself and others, and to be ready to support what is right and oppose what is wrong.

Union meetings that have the best thoughts of thinking brethren are always interesting and beneficial.

A large number of Christians, perhaps, a majority of them, are dependent, some mainly, others entirely, for their knowledge of Christian duties and doctrines, on what they learn from preaching and hearing talks in religious meetings. Many of them cannot read the Bible or any other book. Others read so imperfectly that they do not understand many important Bible teachings. It is a task for them to read; therefore, they do but little of it; and understand but little of what they read. Others can read very well, but do not take time to read and study on their religious duties. To all such persons union meetings are exceedingly helpful. They can attend these, and those who have studied important Christian duties can explain them so that all can understand them and be impressed with their binding force.

Teaching by the living voice always has been and always will be the most effective and direct way of teaching. The printing press is a mighty agency for good, but it can never take the place of the living voice.

There are many Christian duties that are imperfectly understood or entirely neglected, that might in these union meetings be explained and enforced so as to double in a short time Christian knowledge and usefulness.

Union meetings are immensely helpful, not only because they help our intellectual and spiritual natures, but because they are unions of Christians where the social and brotherly side of our natures can be cultivated. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Christians greatly need to be drawn closer together in brotherly love. This can only be effected by them often coming together for religious work. Each member of every church ought to meet on each Sabbath for preaching, Sabbath School or prayer meeting. These meetings should be held at the church on Sabbath mornings, and then if there is work in the surrounding country that needs to be done the workers should go and do it in the evening. And then, all the churches ought to meet together in union meetings three or four times a year.

Few of our brethren attend our Baptist State Conventions; the great mass of them do not go to our Associations, and, therefore, know but very few of their brethren outside of their own church. And so, if there is strength in union they miss much of this strength. Union meetings go far towards supplying needed opportunities for extending christian fellowship and brotherly love.

These meetings can be made pleasant and profitable by brethren preparing themselves to do their work, and then being present to do it. Speeches should be short, pointed and spirited. As many brethren as possible should be induced to speak. The exercises should be interspersed with singing and frequent praying. A good sermon or two would add to the interest of these meetings.

The great object of these meetings should be to gain and impart Christian knowledge, to extend and strengthen brotherly love, to promote a more thorough consecration of heart and life to the work of the Lord.

[CONCLUDED.]

Notes by Church-Lover.

One of the best records I have heard of for faithfulness was made by Bro. E. T. Rawlins, Superintendent of the Oxford Baptist Sunday-school. He did not miss a single Sunday during last year. His rule was always to be there, and if there were no one else present, he would teach the sexton.

Another good record was made by a country pastor. He served four churches as pastor, distant ten, twelve and twenty-one miles. He only missed one appointment during the year.

PASTORAL CHANGES.

Some pastors seem to be fond of changing from one field to another. Their motive may be to get where they can be more useful; or, perhaps, it may be to get more notoriety, or better pay, or an easier place. If moved by the latter motives, it is well for them to change often; so that churches may not be burdened long at a time with such pastors.

But there are pastors who do not like to change fields. They prefer to stay where the Lord put them to work. They are willing to study hard, and put freshness and force into their pulpit work. They are willing, if need be, to do hard work, and live on small pay; because the Master has a work to be done there. Then, too, he has been on the field until he knows it, and the work that needs to be done. He has also learned tenderly to love the members of the church, and to feel a deep, personal interest in the salvation of the unsaved of the community. An overwhelming majority of the church and the community tenderly love the pastor. But a few, and often a very few, drive the pastor away. They imagine that something he has said or done is against them, and they work up discord enough to drive him out. A good pastor rarely ever leaves a church by the wish of the majority. A minority, composed often of only a few members, makes the situation so unpleasant that the pastor must leave, and the majority must yield to them for the sake of peace. The theory of Baptist churches is, that the majority must rule, but the practice, in many important matters, is for the minority to rule. It is hard for a pastor who loves his brethren, his church and his work, and who is trying to do good work for the Master, to be obliged to leave such a field. It is hard for an overwhelming majority of a church, who loves a pastor devotedly, and believes he is serving them faithfully, to have to give him up to please a few who can give no solid reason for their course.

HOW TO BEGIN A PRAYER OR TALK.

Often brethren feel like they would like to pray or talk in public; but they are kept back by this feeling: "I have not lived right. I have been guilty of wrongs that I know and others know. If I talk or pray, it will do more harm than good. People have not much confidence in me." Well, if you have lived as you say you have, and if you begin your prayers and talks by telling the Lord and the people how good you are, as is often done, the people will not and ought not to have much confidence in you. But if you are conscious of your sinfulness and feel sorrow for it, and if you are longing for a better life, then begin your prayers and talks with sincere confessions of your sinfulness and unworthiness; tell God and the people that you mean to keep up the fight against the evil within you until you get to be a better and a more useful man. Do this and show that you mean what you say, and the people will believe in you.

A GRIEVOUS WRONG.

A report gets into circulation that Bro. A. has been guilty of unchristian conduct. The other members of the church take up the report and circulate it as eagerly as a starving man would eat bread. They tell it to all the other members and to all the neighbors. At the next church conference a brother arises with a sad face and a solemn voice, and says: "Brother Moderator, I am sorry to say that a report is in circulation detrimental to the Christian character of Bro. A; and I move that a committee be appointed to investigate this report." A committee is appointed, and public work begins. The report, whether true or false, is talked of now more than ever. All this is done, and perhaps not a single member of the church has been to Bro. A. privately, in a brotherly, Christian-like spirit to talk with him about the report. As soon as you heard the report, before saying a word about it to any one else, you ought to have gone to Bro. A. and said something like this: "Bro. A., I am truly sorry to hear the report that is in circulation against you. I have come as a Christian brother to talk with you about it. If you are innocent, I would be glad to know the evidence of your innocence. If you are guilty, I hope you will confess it, be forgiven, and forsake it. I sympathize with you, and want to do what I can to help you out of your trouble."

If this kind and brotherly treatment had been given Bro. A. (which he ought to have had), he would have felt that his brethren loved him still, and wanted to help him; and if innocent of the charge alleged against him, he would have confessed it and asked forgiveness. Then there would have been no need for tattling, committee, or church trial. It is a grievous wrong to talk to everybody else about a brother's sin before you first talk to him about it as a Christian brother.

that there are some young men to be proud of already in the arena of public life; but one may go to our State Library and look upon the pictures of the public men of another generation, or turn the pages of United States history, or search the files of old time weekly papers, and he will realize more and more that our contemporaries are not such as there have been. We have no Macon, no Badger, no Vance.

Speaking of the fact that Gladstone, Lincoln, Darwin, Tennyson and Holmes were born in the same year, 1809, one recalls that Schiller has said that immortals never appear alone; and although these five were born far apart, the distinction of men born in their sections just before or after this propitious year would give to Schiller's assertion a meaning larger than one merely of time. The galaxy of New England men of Letters was composed of cotemporaneous authors; but since Holmes died, the native lights of New England are no brighter than those of other sections of the original States; and the prospect is that it will have to shine a few years hence, for shine it must and will, with reflected light of suns gone down, or borrowed altogether.

An immortal sprung in a mediocre day and solitary of his land is an accident; but galaxies, like the constellations of the heav-

a discount; and the syndicate made a handsome profit. Now that looks treacherous. Why were not the bonds offered for public sale? Because, first, the public did not have the desired gold; and second, a public sale would culminate precisely as the two preceding had, with a low Reserve, the bondbuyers having drawn on it for the gold with which to buy. As it is, however, the discount was given to the syndicate on the express condition that it protect our Treasury and maintain the Reserve through the summer, whether the balance of trade be against the United States or not. With this arrangement, for several months the drain will be on the syndicate, and the Treasury can rest. Such service commands good pay.

Congress might have made it possible to do without a syndicate, or avoid a bond issue; might have done something besides piddle with the Nicaragua canal bill (on which agreement was not reached) and appropriations for clerks' salaries, etc.;—but that is another question. The reality is, it left the President to do the best that he could; and, with no alternative and without resources, he had to pay a syndicate to help him. If he erred, it was in holding that the Gold Reserve must be maintained; and that is a matter respecting which there are more opinions than one that it is not criminal to hold.

exhaustive and thoroughly trustworthy. They lived in villages or in remote country districts to avoid the immorality of the cities. At their head were presidents whom all were in duty bound to obey. Whoever desired to enter the order received three badges—a pick axe, an apron, and a white garment; he was not immediately received as a member, but was held upon probation for a year, then was admitted to the lustrations; then followed a further probation of two years; he could then partake of their common meals, after first taking a fearful oath to keep inviolably secret the doctrines of the order. Only adults could be members, but children were received to be trained in Essenian principles. Members who had grievously transgressed were after a fair trial excluded from the association. Among the Essenes there was absolute community of goods; those who entered gave up all their property to the common treasury so that all might be on an equality. They chose fitting persons as receivers of the revenue, and priests for the preparation of food. They had uniformity of dress—thick cloaks for winter and light overalls for summer-wear. A special officer was appointed in every town to care for the wants of his travelling brethren. The day began with prayer, then work for each was assigned by the presidents; at mid-day they reassembled, bathed,

System An Essential.

Dr. William Ashmore, grand old missionary, writes to the Watchman of systematical weekly giving to missions: "We are coming back to it. We have got to come back to it. It is essential to financial success." Dr. Warder, ten years from now, will probably see his plan in all its essential features adopted by all the States.

The Index is right. There is where the trouble begins: "We are satisfied that the very small attendance at prayer meetings is caused by a great decadence in personal and family worship." More family prayers is the great need to-day.—Ed.

"I never knew how it was," said Richard Baxter, "but I always seem to have the most come in when I give the most away."

Could We But Know.

Could we but know
The land that ends our dark, uncertain travel
Where lie those happier hills and meadows low—
Ah! if beyond the spirit's inmost cavil
Aught of that country could we surely know—
Who would not go?

Might we but hear
The hovering angel's high imagined chorus,
Or catch, betimes, with wakeful eyes and clear,
One radiant vista of the realm before us,
With one rapt moment given to see and hear,
Ah! who would fear?

Were we quite sure
To find the peerless friend who left us lonely,
Or there, by some celestial stream as pure,
To gaze in eyes that were love lit only—
This weary mortal coil, we are quite sure,
Who would endure?

—E. C. Stedman.

God holds the key of all unknown,
And I am glad;
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if He trusted it to me,
I might be sad.
What if to-morrow's cares were here
Without its rest?
Better that He unlock the day,
And as the door swings open, say,
"My will is best."

—Rev. John Parker.

Curious Indian Games and Sports.

We had some quiet plays which we alternated with the more severe and warlike ones. Among them were throwing wands and snow-arrows. In the winter we coasted much. We had no "double rippers" nor toboggans, but six or seven of the long ribs of a buffalo, fastened together at the larger end, answered all practical purposes. Sometimes a strip of basswood bark, four feet long and half a foot wide, was used with much skill. We stood on one end and held the other, using the inside of the bark for the outside, and thus coasted down long hills with remarkable speed.

Sometimes we played "Medicine Dance." This to us was almost what "playing church" is among white children. Our people seemed to think it an act of irreverence to imitate these dances, but we children thought otherwise; therefore we quite frequently enjoyed in secret one of these performances. We used to observe all the important ceremonies and customs attending it, and it required something of an actor to reproduce the dramatic features of the dance. The real dances usually occupied a day and a night, and the program was long and varied, so that it was not easy to execute all the details perfectly; but the Indian children are born imitators.

I was often selected as choirmaster on these occasions, for I happened to learn many of the medicine songs, and was quite an apt mimic. My grandmother, who was a noted medicine woman, on hearing of these sacrilegious acts (as she called them,) warned me that if any of the medicine men should learn of my conduct they would punish me terribly by shriveling my limbs with slow disease.

Occasionally we also played "white man." Our knowledge of the pale-face was limited, but we had learned that he brought goods whenever he came, and that our people exchanged furs for his merchandise. We also knew, somehow, that this complexion was white, that he wore short hair on his head and long hair on his face, and that he had coat, trousers, and hat, and did not patronize blankets in the daytime. This was the picture we had formed of the white man. So we painted two or three of our number with white clay, and put on them birchen hats, which we sewed up for the occasion, fastened a piece of fir to their chins for a beard, and altered their costume as much as lay within our power. The white of the birch bark was made to answer for their white shirts. Their merchandise consisted of sand for sugar, wild beans for coffee, dried leaves for tea, pulverized earth for gunpowder, pebbles for bullets, and clear water for dangerous "fire water." We traded for these goods with skins of squirrels, rabbits, and small birds.—Dr. Charles A. Eastman, St. Nicholas.

To nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a priceless boon, for it not only strengthens the mother, but also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child. Cold Water.

An enthusiastic writer on temperance says:

"Cold water is the most suitable beverage for man or beast; it cools, thins and clears the blood; it keeps the stomach, head and nerves in order, and makes men cheerful, serene and healthy. Then give me reviving, purifying, and fertilising water!—the rill, the stream, or the torrent which flows from the bright sides of our cloud crested mountains—the gush, cool and clear, that bubbled up before Hagar and fainting Ishmael, that followed the stroke of the prophet's rod from the rock of Horeb, and that watered the garden of primeval Eden. Give me the pure water that Jacob drank from the pitcher of Rebekah, and the Saviour tasted at the well of Jacob; that cheered the spirits of the favored Israelites, the valiant Gideonites, the noble Nazarites, and the honored Rechabites; that quenched the thirst of the mighty Samson, the holy Daniel, the fearless John, and the youthful Timothy! Give me of those cheering streams, those flowing brooks, and those crystal rivers, whose transparent surface reflects all that is dark, or soft, or bright in the beautiful firmament above. Give me those gentle streams, those ever-allaying waves, in health and sickness, and when the keen thirst of the expiring pang shall seize my vitals, give me those waters untainted and free, until I drink of that river, the streams whereof shall make glad the City of God."

The Cultivation of the Love of Beauty.

I do not believe there is any girl who will read these pages who has not felt the thrill of the spring woods or the autumn sunsets or the starry sky; but there are a great many girls who take very little time to look at these things. They sit over their crochet work when the twilight sky is flushed with rose and violet, and the great planets are shedding their golden light through the veil of colors, and think it is provoking that it is growing dark. On the rocks by the sea-shore they read a flimsey novel. I am afraid most of us must remember beautiful scenes which we have made commonplace—and worse—by gossiping conversation. The trouble with us is not that we cannot feel beauty, nor that it is not lying all about us, but that we are not willing to choose it before the trivialities which interpose to hide it from us. I do not mean, of course, that we are not to laugh and talk in the open air.

"Is this a time to be gloomy and sad
When our mother nature laughs around?"

I do mean that we ought to take the time to see the glory of the world, that we ought to rejoice that it is our duty to take time to see it, and that we ought not to let our meaner selves obstruct our vision. Those of us who have time should take every day—not simply for the sake of our health, but expressly to see the wonderful sky and wonderful earth. And who has not time? There are unhappy women crowded in city garrets, who must work for their lives, who can hardly lift their eyes to see the sunset shining in at their attic windows; but those of us who can read a book need not plead that we have no time to see beauty.—From "Chats with Girls on Self Culture."

How a Man Goes to Sleep.

"Order is Heaven's first law," and the old truth is manifested even in the process of going to sleep. When a man drops off to sleep, his body does not do so at once, so to speak. Some senses become dormant before others, and always in the same order. As he becomes drowsy, the eyes close, and the sense of seeing is at rest. It is quickly followed by the disappearance of the sense of taste. He next loses the sense of smell, and then after a short interval the tympanum becomes insensible to sound, or rather the nerves which run to the brain from it fail to arouse any sense of hearing. The last sense to leave is that of touch, and in some hypersensitive people it is hardly ever dormant. Even in their case, however, there is no discriminating power or sense of what touched them. This sense is also the first to return upon awakening. Then hearing follows suit; after that taste, and then the eye becomes able to flash impression back to the brain. The sense of smell, oddly enough, though it is by no means the first to go, is the last to come back.

The same gradual loss of power is observed in the muscles and sinews, as well as in the senses. Slumber begins at the feet, and slowly spreads up the limbs and trunk until it reaches the brain, when unconsciousness is complete, and the whole body is at rest. This is why sleep is impossible when the feet are cold.—New York World.

Overeating.

Half the people I know have violent attacks of indigestion, because they will persist in eating hearty meals when in an exhausted condition. They seem never able or willing to realize that there are times when the system is in no fit state to grapple with a full meal. They come in tired and hungry, almost ravenous, not thinking that maybe a good deal of what they consider hunger is gastric irritation, then sit down to a table covered with the substantials of life, and deliberately go to work to overtax the already strained vital powers. No person should eat heartily when very tired. The wisest thing to do is to drink a cup of hot water with three tablespoonfuls of milk in it, sit down for five minutes, and then begin slowly to eat, masticating thoroughly. In a little while the vigor of the stomach will come back, and all will be well. If this course were followed, there would not be one case of dyspepsia where there now are a dozen. It seems to be the most difficult of all things properly to control the appetite. It seems to be their master. It requires will power to get it under control. When once mastered, something important has been accomplished in self discipline.—Journal of Hygiene.

UNION MEETINGS.

BY REV. J. A. STRADLEY.

We do not mean by the above heading Christians of different religious denominations uniting in religious meetings, for such meetings, in our judgment, do not always yield the best results. It is a sad day for christianity when Christians engage in such unions as require them to suppress a part of Bible truth in order to please men rather than God.

But we mean by union meetings the gathering together of Baptist workers—ministers and laymen—for the purpose of discussing questions pertaining to the development of Christian life and Christian work. Such meetings, wisely conducted, are very helpful, and ought to be kept up.

Some suggestions as to how to make these meetings profitable are here presented.

And first, churches somewhat centrally located should invite these meetings to be held with them, so that representatives of many churches could conveniently come together. But one hindrance in the way of these meetings is, that the churches shrink from entertaining them. But the benefit of these meetings far outweigh what little trouble and expense they are. Churches ought cordially to invite and entertain these meetings. By so doing they will get good and do good. The mission of churches is to do good.

Another important matter is, to have judicious committees to prepare suitable subjects for discussion. These committees should be well acquainted with the needs of the brethren and churches within the bounds of these union meetings, so as to present subjects for discussion that would meet these needs. There are hundreds of subjects pertaining to Christian life and growth, Christian work, Bible doctrines and church ordinances that need to be better understood by all our people. It might be well for thoughtful church members to suggest to these committees such subjects as have impressed them as needing discussion. These subjects should be worded so as to make their meaning clear, so that all the brethren can understand them and be prepared to talk on them.

Again, the subjects presented for discussion should be thoroughly studied at home. It is chilling to the interest of a meeting for a brother to say: "I have been appointed to speak on this subject, but I hardly know what it is. I have not studied it, but I will try and say something about it."

Each Christian owes it to himself and his fellow-man to carefully study his duty to himself and others, and to be ready to support what is right and oppose what is wrong.

Union meetings that have the best thoughts of thinking brethren are always interesting and beneficial.

A large number of Christians, perhaps, a majority of them, are dependent, some mainly, others entirely, for their knowledge of Christian duties and doctrines, on what they learn from preaching and hearing talks in religious meetings. Many of them cannot read the Bible or any other book. Others read so imperfectly that they do not understand many important Bible teachings. It is a task for them to read; therefore, they do but little of it; and understand but little of what they read. Others can read very well, but do not take time to read and study on their religious duties. To all such persons union meetings are exceedingly helpful. They can attend these, and those who have studied important Christian duties can explain them so that all can understand them and be impressed with their binding force.

Teaching by the living voice always has been and always will be the most effective and direct way of teaching. The printing press is a mighty agency for good, but it can never take the place of the living voice.

There are many Christian duties that are imperfectly understood or entirely neglected, that might in these union meetings be explained and enforced so as to double in a short time Christian knowledge and usefulness.

Union meetings are immensely helpful, not only because they help our intellectual and spiritual natures, but because they are unions of Christians where the social and brotherly side of our natures can be cultivated. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Christians greatly need to be drawn closer together in brotherly love. This can only be effected by them often coming together for religious work. Each member of every church ought to meet on each Sabbath for preaching, Sabbath School or prayer-meeting. These meetings should be held at the church on Sabbath mornings, and then if there is work in the surrounding country that needs to be done the workers should go and do it in the evening. And then, all the churches ought to meet together in union meetings three or four times a year.

Few of our brethren attend our Baptist State Conventions; the great mass of them do not go to our Associations, and, therefore, know but very few of their brethren outside of their own church. And so, if there is strength in union they miss much of this strength. Union meetings go far towards supplying needed opportunities for extending christian fellowship and brotherly love.

These meetings can be made pleasant and profitable by brethren preparing themselves to do their work, and then being present to do it. Speeches should be short, pointed and spirited. As many brethren as possible should be induced to speak. The exercises should be interspersed with singing and frequent praying. A good sermon or two would add to the interest of these meetings.

The great object of these meetings should be to gain and impart Christian knowledge, to extend and strengthen brotherly love, to promote a more thorough consecration of heart and life to the work of the Lord.

UNION MEETINGS.

BY REV. O. C. HORTON.

Union, according to Mr. Webster, means uniting two or more things into one, and two are better than one—stronger and more helpful to each other—therefore efforts are made to bring people and churches together in the work of the Lord.

Union is desirable among God's people of every name, but it should be a union of faith, affection, agreement, will and spirit; and if these be absent, we have but a bundle of different sentiments tied together with a term which is only misleading to the superficial thinker.

The term union is often overworked in efforts to unite diversity of opinion, faith, fancy and feeling, and, while looking on federations and conglomerations wearing the name of union meetings, I have been brought into greater sympathy with a term so strained by misapplication. I would not have the name for our meetings changed, however, but rather that we strive the harder to deserve a name so desirable. We are of the same faith, the same mind on many subjects; are inclined to work together; we have the same spirit if we are Christ's; we love each other as brethren, too, but we may become better developed in all the Christian graces, and so be brought nearer to each other and nearer to God. Here is found one reason for our union meetings, namely, they give us an opportunity of getting acquainted with each other, and the general work—or the broad field of labor God has given his servants to seed, and cultivate, and harvest. By such a method of work we can hear from the several churches composing a union as often as quarterly, learn something about their spiritual condition, whether they have preaching, prayer-meetings, Sunday schools, etc. Our country churches have no regular appointments for the fifth Sundays, and we cannot afford to lose the opportunities of doing good, and getting good from Christian association. I think our unions should be organized so as to co-operate with our associational work. A correct record of what we do in our unions should be preserved, so as o be helpful to those who shall enter into our labor.

The several subjects for discussion, and those who are to speak first on each, should be arranged two or three weeks before the time of meeting, so those to open the discussions may be prepared to speak so as to instruct the people. A number of extra programmes to scatter among the people who come to hear, will beget interest in the themes under review.

There should be devotional exercises at the beginning of each session, in which the spirit's presence and direction should be earnestly invoked, and praise and thanksgiving duely rendered for past blessings. Most of our mistakes have been made just at this juncture, perhaps. "We have not because we ask not, or we ask amiss," seeking only power to display our ability or talents. We so much need ability to display our Saviour, His love for believers and for sinners, how He is waiting to be gracious and ever present to help. Preaching, prayer, praise, and a humble looking to God for help are all indispensable to the success of union meetings.

Union Meeting at Clayton.

DEAR RECORDER:

We do not know whether you have been informed that our union meeting has been appointed to take place here. It has been sometime since we have had the union meeting, and we are expecting and desire a full attendance. We give you all a welcome in advance, and will do our best to entertain you comfortably, all who may come. We are trying to do what we can to help on the Master's cause, and have no thought of slacking our efforts. And we feel strong and cheerful, which is saying a good deal, considering what a severe winter through which we are passing. But despite the drawbacks of snow, rain, sleet and storm, our Church has not missed a single service. Our pastor, Brother W. C. Newton, is not the kind to stay away because the weather is rough, and he has never preached to empty benches here. And we have also tried to look after the needy poor and supplied them with wood and food while the bitter days made outdoor work impossible. Still we need the union meeting to stir us up, and help us on, and we hope for fine weather and a good attendance.

Bertie.

The next session convenes with the Church at Bethlehem. Elder C. B. Williams preaches the introductory. Alternate, Elder Cole. To preach the Missionary Sermon, Elder Scarboro. Alternate, Elder Speight.

1. Practical subject. What course should the Church pursue in regard to its members who refuse to take part in the Sunday School work? Brethren A. J. Cobb, M. L. Tayloe and A. C. Vann to discuss.

2. What does the Scripture teach in regard to the Lord's Supper, and what should be done with members who refuse to observe it? Discussed by Elder Cree, Brethren C. W. Mitchell and W. P. Tayloe.

3. Is it not the tendency of too many of our Churches to receive into their membership unregenerate persons? Discussed by Elders Newton, Craig and Brother Albert Vann.

Green River.

Dear Brethren.—I just wish to say that the time is not far distant for the next meeting of the Green River Sunday School Association. We have a splendid programme, which should have been used in December, but the weather was so bad we had no meeting. I hope to be present in March and meet representatives from every church in the Association, and that we have a better meeting by having continued our programme. Of course we will meet with Bethel church, as they have had the two last and say they want the next one.

Our December meeting was not very expensive. They only had eight delegates to take care of and they were everyone from Big Level. Brethren, Big Level has set the example. Who will follow in March?

W. M. WHITESIDE.

Poplar Grove, N. C.

The Little River.

The next session of The Little River Union will be held with the Benson Baptist Church at Benson, N. C., commencing Friday, March 29, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

To preach the Introductory Sermon, Elder J. A. Campbell.

Subjects for discussion:

1st. How often should a church commune, and who should partake of the communion? To open discussion, Elder Allen Betts or Elder W. B. Harrell.

2d. What relation does the pastor sustain to the church, and the church to the pastor? Elder C. V. Brooks or Elder G. A. Bain.

3d. What object should one have in uniting with the church? Elder J. M. Holleman or Elder W. G. King.

4th. The responsibility and rewards of the Sunday School worker. Bro. R. G. Taylor or Bro. A. L. Byrd.

To preach the Missionary Sermon Sunday at 11 o'clock, Elder W. G. King.

The fourth and last subject is set apart for discussion Saturday night.

We hope as many brethren of the Association as possibly can do so will attend, and come filled with the work which lies before us, praying God's blessings on the work at Benson.

Mount Zion.

The Mount Zion Sunday School Association will meet with Olive Branch church Friday before the fifth Sunday in March, 1895. A full attendance is desired. Bro. O. C. Horton, of East Durham, will preach the introductory sermon.

We want to make this session of our Union more interesting than any previous meeting. Come, brethren, and help us make it so.

Fraternally,
J. F. MCDUFFIE, Chairman.

South Yadkin Sunday School Association.

This body will convene with the Farmington Baptist Sunday School at Farmington, Davie County, on Friday before the fifth Sunday in March.

Introductory sermon by Rev. D. W. Pool.

PROGRAMME.

1st. What do the Scriptures teach as to our responsibility in teaching the Word in our Schools? D. W. Pool to open.

2d. Who ought to engage in the Sunday School work? Give scriptural instruction thereon. W. J. Wyatt.

3d. Is there Scripture warrant for regarding the Sunday School as an evangelizing agency? Dr. J. N. Stallings.

Other brethren will be expected to speak on the questions above, and it is hoped that every church and Sunday School in the bounds of the Association will send three delegates with the Superintendent to represent them in this meeting. Every child of God should begin to feel the importance of this work and lend a helping hand to those that are in the destitute sections of our counties. It is in these meetings that we are to learn of those places, and through the instrumentality of God's people it must be done. W. F. REECE, Sec.

Sigma, N. C., Feb. 7, 1895.

Scuppernong.

At Creswell church Saturday, March 30.

Introductory sermon by Rev. A. W. Burfoot.

1. What is the secret to successful church work?

2. The best ways to develop church members spiritually.

3. What is the teaching of the Bible on usury?

4. When is a Sunday School a success?

BLAKELY H. MATHEWS.

Liberty.

Which convenes at High Point Baptist Church March 29th, 1895.

1. Whose fault is it that our Sunday Schools are not more efficient? Speakers—J. D. Newton, R. C. Charles and C. W. Wall.

2. Report of Executive Committee and of missionaries. Speeches on same—J. M. Hilliard, H. P. Snider and S. W. Hall.

3. What ought to be our attitude toward the Mormon missionaries and their doctrine? Speakers—J. Lorring, J. A. Summey and C. W. Davis.

4. Ought we to inculcate the spirit of missions more in our Sunday Schools? If so how? Speakers—Thomas Carrick, Wilson Miller and Rufus W. Weaver.

Very respectfully,
JAMES SMITH,
Moderator.

THE Fifty third Congress has adjourned for good. It has done nothing of considerable importance. Its chief work, the tariff law, was shadowed with scandal in the beginning, and since it went into operation, has not affected any class sufficiently for better or worse, if we except the Louisiana sugar planters, to elicit decided approval or disapproval. And this is a time when halfway measures are held in contempt. A tariff for revenue only was asked for. Since the present law has been in operation more revenue has been derived from internal sources than from tariffs on imported articles; and, moreover, it is evident that the tariff does protect many industries. It can be said that this law is preferable to the McKinley law,—and this is worth saying. The people, however, would have tolerated the McKinley law a year or two longer, if something for the relief of financial conditions had been brought about.

It is a shame that Congress turns its face once more to the people without having done one thing. A section of a country has no right to expect its favorite scheme to be adopted by a Congress of all sections; but all sections do have a right to complain when nothing at all has been done. There is no doubt, it is true, that to have done nothing is better than to have done some things; but this does not palliate the selfishness, the indifference, the headstrong adherence to individual predilections, the incompetence, or at least, inability, whatever one may call it, that has spent two terms of Congress without carrying out pledges or even taking action asked for by any part of the country, or any compromise of the several "demands,"—and that, too, when action of some sort was sought and prayed for and demanded from one end of the land to the other again and again, when all the Nation was chafing with the existing conditions and dread or desire of contemplated changes.

We do not say that Congress could have relieved the Nation; but we do know that it ought to have done something, as an experiment, even though it was unable to discharge the pledges on which it was elected.

We hope to see the day when North Carolina Congressmen will command considerable recognition. For several years the general papers have not known them well enough to announce their arrival in a city. North Carolina is not without able men; we do not say they are in politics, fearful, perhaps, that we may be put to to name them. That she ought to send her ablest to Washington is undeniable; but it is also undeniable that as a mother of great men our State has no reason for pride, if her public men are her best evidences.

A contemporary has hopefully pointed out that there are some young men to be proud of already in the arena of public life; but one may go to our State Library and look upon the pictures of the public men of another generation, or turn the pages of United States history, or search the files of old time weekly papers, and he will realize more and more that our contemporaries are not such as there have been. We have no Macon, no Badger, no Vance.

Speaking of the fact that Gladstone, Lincoln, Darwin, Tennyson and Holmes were born in the same year, 1809, one recalls that Schiller has said that immortals never appear alone; and although these five were born far apart, the distinction of men born in their sections just before or after this propitious year would give to Schiller's assertion a meaning larger than one merely of time. The galaxy of New England men of Letters was composed of cotemporaneous authors; but since Holmes died, the native lights of New England are no brighter than those of other sections of the original States; and the prospect is that it will have to shine a few years hence, for shine it must and will, with reflected light of suns gone down, or borrowed altogether.

An immortal sprung in a mediocre day and solitary of his land is an accident; but galaxies, like the constellations of the heavens, are their own proofs of a higher origin.

New England blood was pure, though lowly, seventeen decades before Bryant was born. The section was thoroughly its own; its customs, habits of thought and religion, were of a kind peculiar to New England, and yet not quite inflexible, and by no means incapable of wholesome, gradual development. New England is now a manufacturing section; ten different languages are spoken by the rabble in Boston's tenements: there is no uniformity of anything, no, not even of pride; and the aristocracy of Letters has become a club of snobs. Immigration has vitiated the life, out of which Bryant, Emerson, Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes, Lowell and Hawthorne sprang, and smothered the spirit that ministered to their growth.

The author of the biography of Jno. Sevier, "commonwealth builder," made bold to say that North Carolina was first successfully settled by refugees; and he chose to have that imply, fugitives of the law. It is a fact that there were fugitives among the early inhabitants of this State, outcasts of the establishment of religion in Virginia; but further than this, evidence is lacking. Good people came to North Carolina, and some bad ones along with them, of course. For many years there was a wholesome flow of desirable immigration, until the State became fairly well settled. Then sons of North Carolina began to develop the great South and West; and to day her sons and son's sons are probably more honored and more of them are honored abroad than in the old mother State. During all these years of new State making, during which the State often gave her best, there has been a very gradual increase of population in North Carolina, mostly native, but some foreign; and although Georgia is greater, and several other States are heard of oftener, she has a white population purer than any Southern State; and her atmosphere is peculiarly her own.

We were just now speaking of the debasing influence of general immigration and, on the other hand, the value of purity and uniformity. It is clear to us that one is as against the making of great men as the other two are essential. North Carolina ought to produce the makers of the South's Literature and the writers of her History, and her sons, according to the experience of New England, ought to become the lights of this region, also in oratory and law and politics.

NO GOOD can come of the habit some papers and people have gotten into, of charging the President with every ill that is. He is not Cæsar. But if he were, it would be unreasonable to berate him for everything he does, not to say for what he has not done or cannot undo. If any one were author of an hundredth of the crimes that have been charged to the President, he would have been stripped of power in three months. One may hear it said on every hand, seriously and angrily, that the President betrayed the Nation to Wall Street and England when he agreed to the contract of sale of the latest issue of bonds. We do not approve bond issues; but we know better than that. Grant that the Gold Reserve ought to be maintained at $100,000,000, and we will clear the President and the Secretary of the Treasury; and it is not hard to find wise and honest people who think that the gold reserve ought to be kept up to this mark,—anyway, the President and his advisers do. There is no way to get a large amount of gold, except by exchanging something for it; and having nothing so readily exchangeable, a nation usually borrows it with bonds. This Nation had borrowed twice, only to find that those from whom it borrowed could drain and did drain their loans straightway back again, leaving the Reserve as low as ever. A remedy must be had. There was but one, outside of Congress, which could have made others possible; but urged as it was, and probably aware, too, that it could take all-sufficient action, it did nothing. Thus the President was reduced to the necessity of selling the bonds to a syndicate at a discount; and the syndicate made a handsome profit. Now that looks treacherous. Why were not the bonds offered for public sale? Because, first, the public did not have the desired gold; and second, a public sale would culminate precisely as the two preceding had, with a low Reserve, the bondbuyers having drawn on it for the gold with which to buy. As it is, however, the discount was given to the syndicate on the express condition that it protect our Treasury and maintain the Reserve through the summer, whether the balance of trade be against the United States or not. With this arrangement, for several months the drain will be on the syndicate, and the Treasury can rest. Such service commands good pay.

Congress might have made it possible to do without a syndicate, or avoid a bond issue; might have done something besides piddle with the Nicaragua canal bill (on which agreement was not reached) and appropriations for clerks' salaries, etc.;—but that is another question. The reality is, it left the President to do the best that he could; and, with no alternative and without resources, he had to pay a syndicate to help him. If he erred, it was in holding that the Gold Reserve must be maintained; and that is a matter respecting which there are more opinions than one that it is not criminal to hold.

PART III.

As the Pharisees exercised the popular tendency, so, on the other hand, the Sadducees were the aristocracy par excellence; they were the wealthy, the people of rank, that is to say, they belonged chiefly to the priesthood, for from the Persian period it was the priesthood that governed the Jewish State and constituted the nobility of the Jewish people. The origin of this sect remains in even greater obscurity than of the Pharisees. The general opinion reached by the best of German scholars is that the Sadducees derived their name from Ziddok, the priest, whose family had exercised the priestly office in Jerusalem since the time of Solomon. Ezekiel (xl., 46 and elsewhere) awards to these Ziddokites alone the right of officiating as priests in the temple at Jerusalem, and it is evident that this family formed the chief element in the priesthood during the post exilian period. Hence a party which attached itself to the aristocratic priests might well be called the Ziddokitian or Sadducean. Under the early Maccabees this aristocracy was necessarily in the background; but during the reigns of John Hyrcanus, Aristobulus I., and Alexander Jannæus, they came forward in great power, and, notwithstanding the great drawbacks they suffered by the overthrow of the Asmonean dynasty and Herod's vengeance on the nobility, he held a formidable influence in the State and the priesthood at the time of Christ. With the fall of the Jewish State, the Sadducees disappear altogether from history. The chief point of distinction in the tenets of the Sadducees from those of the Pharisees consisted in their acknowledgment of the written law alone as binding and in their rejection of the traditionary interpretations of the Scribes. Not all took the extremely radical standpoint of rejecting all the traditions, but they did all deny the obligation of fulfilling these enactments and reserved the right of private opinion. Hence, the Sadducees stopped with the written law. They differed from the other sect also in refusing to believe in the resurrection of the body and retribution in a future life; they denied the existence of angels and spirits; they furthermore maintained that good and evil are at the choice of man, and consequently God exercises no influence upon human actions. Though in many of their views the Sadducees preserved a pretty full adherence to the old conservatism, still it must be acknowledged that their doctrines were partly due to the infiltration of a certain degree of worldliness and to the influence of the political and philosophical systems of the Greeks. Hence, the degeneracy of the priesthood under the later Asmoneans and the increasing tendency of the aristocracy toward Hellenism tended to widen the breach between the two great Jewish parties and caused that perfect animosity which prevailed between them in New Testament times.

The Herodians formed a considerable political party at the time of Christ. These were the adherents of the Herodian family. They were more inclined to Grecian customs than attached to national usages, and thought it best for the interests of the country to remain quietly under the protection of the Roman emperors.

Besides these parties there had arisen among the Jews a very peculiar community of men called Essenes; they exercised a considerable influence upon the later history of the Jews, and have unquestionably affected in some degree the customs of the Christian church, especially in the growth of Puritanism. They were called by the Greeks both Essenoi and Essaoi, and the meaning of this name even is veiled in obscurity; the most probable explanation is that it is derived from a Hebrew word signifying "pious." The origin of this sect is also very obscure. Josephus first mentions their existence in the times of Jonathan the Maccabee, about 150 B. C. At the time of Josephus they were reckoned at about 4,000 individuals. Schuerer's description of this sect is very exhaustive and thoroughly trustworthy. They lived in villages or in remote country districts to avoid the immorality of the cities. At their head were presidents whom all were in duty bound to obey. Whoever desired to enter the order received three badges—a pick axe, an apron, and a white garment; he was not immediately received as a member, but was held upon probation for a year, then was admitted to the lustrations; then followed a further probation of two years; he could then partake of their common meals, after first taking a fearful oath to keep inviolably secret the doctrines of the order. Only adults could be members, but children were received to be trained in Essenian principles. Members who had grievously transgressed were after a fair trial excluded from the association. Among the Essenes there was absolute community of goods; those who entered gave up all their property to the common treasury so that all might be on an equality. They chose fitting persons as receivers of the revenue, and priests for the preparation of food. They had uniformity of dress—thick cloaks for winter and light overalls for summer-wear. A special officer was appointed in every town to care for the wants of his travelling brethren. The day began with prayer, then work for each was assigned by the presidents; at mid-day they reassembled, bathed, and partook of a meal, again resumed their labors till the time for the evening repast. Their chief employment was agriculture, and they were forbidden to trade. They carried morality to its highest point, condemned sensual desires, were abstemious in their meals, and did not throw away clothes and shoes until they were absolutely worthless. Perfect freedom prevailed; not a slave was to be found among them. They forbade all swearing and anointing with oil. Ceremonial purity was strictly observed; even contact with a member of a lower order required a purifying bath. They wore white raiment at all times. They were vigorously modest in all their actions. They as a rule condemned marriage, but a very small minority permitted this, according to Josephus. They sent gifts of incense to the temple, but offered no animal sacrifice. Their meals were always held in common and consisted of only two dishes, one of which was bread.

They were exceedingly strict in their observance of the Sabbath; on that day they were not allowed to move a single vessel from its place, nor to perform any act that could in the least degree defile them. They had an implicit belief in Providence and a high regard for the Law; they were strong believers in the existence of angels; they held also to the doctrine of future rewards and punishments, and even exercised the gift of prophecy. The consensus of modern scholarship holds the opinion that Essenism is "Phariseeism in the superlative degree"; this is shown by their strict adherence to tradition, their rigorous observance of the Sabbath, and their care for ceremonial cleanliness. To preserve the exclusiveness of their community an equal division of good was very essential, and their repudiation of marriage arose from the desire to attain the highest degree of purity. Their rejection of animal sacrifices and apparent worship of the sun were probably due to Greek influences, with the view of realizing an ideal akin to Pythagoreanism, but with an adherence to its Jewish foundation. It is also possible that Phariseeism had some effect upon the development of these usages.

Before I close this account, I beg leave to call attention for a moment to the Messianic expectations contained in the writings of this interbiblical period. Out of the large number of religious works of this time, the greater part have no distinct allusions to the coming of a Messiah. In Ecclesiasticus, I. Maccabees, and the Wisdom of Solomon there are some shadowy pointings to the advent of a great prophet and reformer. A more important work is the Sybilline Oracles, probably written in Alexandria about 160 B. C.; in this a more vivid prediction is made of the appearance of a Saviour, of the coming reform, and restoration of all that is right and good; it was possibly from this work that Virgil devised his conceptions of the Golden Age as given in his famous Fourth Eclogue. In these Oracles, however, the personality of the Messiah is still surrounded by mystery. More direct references to the coming Christ are made in the so called Book of Enoch, a work which was brought to light during the first part of the present century, and a part of which has been attributed to a writer of the first century before Christ. The personality of the Saviour is here more strictly emphasized; he is called the Messiah, the Son of Man, the Elect One; "he is the staff upon which the righteous shall lean, the light of the nations, and the hope of all who mourn in spirit." This Messianic conception is still clearer in that collection of hymns called the Psalter of Solomon, composed about 50 B. C. The coming Christ is called the Son of David, who shall rule as King over Israel; he will be a perfect and righteous ruler and free from sin; he will bring blessings to his people, and break down his enemies by the word of his wrath, purify Jerusalem and judge the nations. The rabbinical literature of this time abounds in references to a coming Messiah, and in the Talmud, according to Edersheim, there is an actual account of his birth in Bethlehem of Judea. The whole Jewish church waiting in expectation for his coming, and there were some like Simeon and Anna, who passed their lives in earnest anticipation of the appearance of him who was to be born King of the Jews. None of these prophecies possessed the full vividness and potency of inspired revelation, but this light shining with ever-increasing brightness along the horizon of the Jewish church foretold the rising of the glorious Sun of Righteousness.

[CONCLUDED.]

System An Essential.

Dr. William Ashmore, grand old missionary, writes to the Watchman of systematical weekly giving to missions: "We are coming back to it. We have got to come back to it. It is essential to financial success." Dr. Warder, ten years from now, will probably see his plan in all its essential features adopted by all the States.

The Index is right. There is where the trouble begins: "We are satisfied that the very small attendance at prayer meetings is caused by a great decadence in personal and family worship." More family prayers is the great need to-day.—Ed.

"I never knew how it was," said Richard Baxter, "but I always seem to have the most come in when I give the most away."

Notes by Church-Lover.

One of the best records I have heard of for faithfulness was made by Bro. E. T. Rawlins, Superintendent of the Oxford Baptist Sunday-school. He did not miss a single Sunday during last year. His rule was always to be there, and if there were no one else present, he would teach the sexton.

Another good record was made by a country pastor. He served four churches as pastor, distant ten, twelve and twenty-one miles. He only missed one appointment during the year.

PASTORAL CHANGES.

Some pastors seem to be fond of changing from one field to another. Their motive may be to get where they can be more useful; or, perhaps, it may be to get more notoriety, or better pay, or an easier place. If moved by the latter motives, it is well for them to change often; so that churches may not be burdened long at a time with such pastors.

But there are pastors who do not like to change fields. They prefer to stay where the Lord put them to work. They are willing to study hard, and put freshness and force into their pulpit work. They are willing, if need be, to do hard work, and live on small pay; because the Master has a work to be done there. Then, too, he has been on the field until he knows it, and the work that needs to be done. He has also learned tenderly to love the members of the church, and to feel a deep, personal interest in the salvation of the unsaved of the community. An overwhelming majority of the church and the community tenderly love the pastor. But a few, and often a very few, drive the pastor away. They imagine that something he has said or done is against them, and they work up discord enough to drive him out. A good pastor rarely ever leaves a church by the wish of the majority. A minority, composed often of only a few members, makes the situation so unpleasant that the pastor must leave, and the majority must yield to them for the sake of peace. The theory of Baptist churches is, that the majority must rule, but the practice, in many important matters, is for the minority to rule. It is hard for a pastor who loves his brethren, his church and his work, and who is trying to do good work for the Master, to be obliged to leave such a field. It is hard for an overwhelming majority of a church, who loves a pastor devotedly, and believes he is serving them faithfully, to have to give him up to please a few who can give no solid reason for their course.

HOW TO BEGIN A PRAYER OR TALK.

Often brethren feel like they would like to pray or talk in public; but they are kept back by this feeling: "I have not lived right. I have been guilty of wrongs that I know and others know. If I talk or pray, it will do more harm than good. People have not much confidence in me." Well, if you have lived as you say you have, and if you begin your prayers and talks by telling the Lord and the people how good you are, as is often done, the people will not and ought not to have much confidence in you. But if you are conscious of your sinfulness and feel sorrow for it, and if you are longing for a better life, then begin your prayers and talks with sincere confessions of your sinfulness and unworthiness; tell God and the people that you mean to keep up the fight against the evil within you until you get to be a better and a more useful man. Do this and show that you mean what you say, and the people will believe in you.

A GRIEVOUS WRONG.

A report gets into circulation that Bro. A. has been guilty of unchristian conduct. The other members of the church take up the report and circulate it as eagerly as a starving man would eat bread. They tell it to all the other members and to all the neighbors. At the next church conference a brother arises with a sad face and a solemn voice, and says: "Brother Moderator, I am sorry to say that a report is in circulation detrimental to the Christian character of Bro. A.; and I move that a committee be appointed to investigate this report." A committee is appointed, and public work begins. The report, whether true or false, is talked of now more than ever. All this is done, and perhaps not a single member of the church has been to Bro. A. privately, in a brotherly, Christian-like spirit to talk with him about the report. As soon as you heard the report, before saying a word about it to any one else, you ought to have gone to Bro. A. and said something like this: "Bro. A., I am truly sorry to hear the report that is in circulation against you. I have come as a Christian brother to talk with you about it. If you are innocent, I would be glad to know the evidence of your innocence. If you are guilty, I hope you will confess it, be forgiven, and forsake it. I sympathize with you, and want to do what I can to help you out of your trouble."

If this kind and brotherly treatment had been given Bro. A. (which he ought to have had), he would have felt that his brethren loved him still, and wanted to help him; and if innocent of the charge alleged against him, he would have confessed it and asked forgiveness. Then there would have been no need for calling committee or church trial. It is a grievous wrong to talk to everybody else about a brother's sin before you first talk to him about it as a Christian brother.

We forget the sunlight when we [illegible] the shadow.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

A GOOD brother writes: "More than twenty churches nearest me have pastors who live from twelve to forty miles from them, except three that cannot agree on any one from any distance." This is a very undesirable state of affairs. Pastors and flocks should in the very nature of things live as closely together as possible. We know, however, that in some instances it is not possible for them to be in the same vicinity. The late bad weather prevented preaching in—well, we are afraid to try to estimate how many churches, in which preaching occurs only once a month. At all events, churches should not do without a pastor because they cannot agree, that is, there ought to be too much of the spirit of unity in them to permit anything of this kind.

THE quick response of the public with money and plans to finish the Confederate monument, as soon as the vote against an appropriation was made public, furnishes a practical illustration of the claim of advocates of the voluntary system of education. The monument people were claiming with loud protests that an appropriation of ten thousand dollars was absolutely necessary. A statement was given to the press that the statuary would probably be sent to some other city, unless the appropriation were made. There was no other course, the ladies said; and they seemed to be speaking with the advice of the contractor. But when the Legislature declined to make the appropriation, money commenced coming in, plans were submitted, and there was a general awakening in behalf of the monument. The statuary was brought up from the depot, and it was announced that the monument would be completed.

When the State withdraws aid from the schools of higher learning, a similar awakening in behalf of general education will occur.

AN eastern weekly paper has been saying severe things about the Baptists and their position on the State-aid matter,—mostly about the Baptists. It was this paper that printed a statement saying that Dr. Taylor was constantly in Raleigh lobbying, when in fact he had not spoken to but two legislators, and they were former students. This is a fair sample of the eastern paper's knowledge of things in general, and of the question of How Far Should a State Educate. In a recent issue this same eastern paper, apparently defending State aid, spoke of a certain most prominent alumnus of the University, who has out stripped all his University class-mates, as a "humiliation," a man "all whose instincts are low, vulgar, demagogic and anarchistic," "despised," "without intelligence or acquirements." A University graduate, now mind you, is all this, according to the eastern paper. We would like to know if the State is paying to send out any more of his kind, and how long it is going to keep at it. But this is nothing more than the eastern paper's only and constant mode of argument,—abuse heaped up.

As for this eastern editor's abuse and misrepresentation of the Baptists, it is hardly possible for one so clearly in his dotage or deliberately indifferent to facts, to do any harm. "Let the heathen rage."

IT HAS been surprisingly difficult to get the facts of the Armenian-Turk Kurd troubles in Asia Minor. Strange enough, Boston seems to be headquarters for distributing news of this particular subject; and several letters from that city have been sent out through the press. It is certain that the Turks and Kurds sacked and razed thirty villages, ruthlessly slaughtering several thousand Armenian men, women and children, the number being variously reported, as low as six thousand and as high as sixteen thousand. At best, then, it is horrible to think about.

If the powers of Europe could decide which shall have the booty, the Turks would be put under a respectable government; but, so long as Russia is jealous of England, and France and Germany on general principles envious of every other power, and Italy ready to protest and make alliances, the Turks will continue to shock civilization with horrible massacres of Christian Armenians.

It is alleged in weak justification of the Turks that the Armenians were in a state of inactive rebellion. And it is also alleged that they have largely brought these troubles on themselves, with the purpose of arousing universal indignation against the Turks, so that they will be stripped of their power. The Armenians are not to be blamed, if they were in silent rebellion; and the latter allegation is hardly to be seriously entertained.

THE RISE OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—NO. 5.

The Scriptures well characterize the marvellous performances of Romanism as "lying wonders," a few of which we record below.

1. Rome claims to sell salvation; for redemption is locked up in her baptisms, masses, and indulgences. Outside of the Holy Catholic Church is no forgiveness, since the successor of St. Peter holds in his apostolic hands the destinies of men, turning the keys of heaven or hell at will. Rome does everything and anything for money. In Ottawa, Canada, it costs one dollar to get a baby sprinkled, while not far away from that city it cost five dollars, in one instance, for the same performance. Thus infants are quite costly in some parts of the country, and their baptism is more expensive than their wardrobe. It does not matter that the rite is valueless to the child, it is quite an item in the priest's pocket—and that's the main thing with the priest. Then comes a traffic in the mass. What is that? "In brief, they say that the consecrated wafer becomes the body, blood, soul, and divinity of Jesus Christ, and this they sell for a price." Low mass sells at from twenty-five cents to a dollar; high mass at from, say, ten to twenty-five dollars. In this way they sell the Saviour in cakes for money, according to the ability of the purchaser; equalling Simon Magus in wickedness, and Judas Iscariot in treachery. Then come the Indulgences. An indulgence is a remission of the penalties of sin. They are supposed to be helpful all along the journey of life, especially to the priests who pocket the money paid for them, and sell at different prices. If a poor sinner buys a good, fat indulgence, he can laugh at morality, sow his wild oats, live a pagan, and, according to the word of the priest, escape the horrors of many a purgatorial fire. Thus has Rome added Purgatory to her empire, claiming the power to help her devotees through the floods of brimstone, provided the friends of the deceased pay down a fair sum. Pope Boniface IX. sold these indulgences, which he withdrew and sold again—a transaction that does not savor of first class honesty—but then, bad morals were no bar to papal infallibility. Henry IV. of Castile received as a profit on the indulgences sold in his domain in four years, the enormous sum of one hundred million dollars—quite a good business for those who sold, not so good for those who bought. Said the Pope in effect: "Fill my pockets with your money, and then serve the world, the flesh and the devil with impunity." It is clear that salvation has a commercial value with the priesthood; and then—the priests are the bankers!

2. Another of Rome's modest wonders is the preservation of ancient relics, such as pieces of the crib and cross of our Lord. It has been estimated that enough of the veritable cross of Calvary has been sold to build a small hotel. Paul feared "lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect;" but Catholics have no such anxiety, for they have gone into the lumber business, and have converted the cross into money. Rome claims that once a certain saint, even one uncertain St. Veronica, wiped with a handkerchief the Saviour's face, which was imprinted on that article in perfect likeness. Now this in itself seems to be a good size wonder; but what are we to conclude when seven different cities, among them Rome, Turin, and Milan, make the modest claim to the possession of this one self-same handkerchief? But Rome cares nothing for impossibilities. Why there is John the Baptist; while he lived he had but one head, and that one was taken from him at an early date; but after he died, the Catholics discovered three heads, and to day exhibit them in three different places as the property of the great Baptizer. The body of the Apostle St. Bartholomew is claimed entire by both Rome and Benevento. Besides these two entire bodies, there are three heads, about a dozen arms, to say nothing of teeth, skin, and hair in twenty other places. Thus Bartholomew became quite numerous after death. Why do Catholics delight in relics? Because relics bring money. Not long ago in New York the relic of St. Anne brought the church sixteen thousand dollars. Some of the saints get to be very valuable after they die.

3. Another wonder on which great stress is laid by Catholics, is the dogma of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary, declared an article of faith by Pius IX., in 1854. Though the Scriptures teach clearly that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God, and death passed upon all men, the Romanists declare that the Virgin was born without the least taint of sin, and was pure like Christ himself.

4. Quite a marvel became an article of faith in 1870, when Pius IX. was declared by an Ecumenical Council to be infallible. And so, in Rome's estimate, infallibility passed upon all the popes. Now, be it remembered, that, if there is any truth in history, these same popes were often blind, sensual, devilish; a first-class set of rogues, accomplished liars, unchaste, and taken all in all, as grand a brood of scamps as ever disgraced old mother earth. But this is the Catholic idea of perfection.

5. It remains for us now to chronicle Romes culminating wonder—marvel of marvels, lie of lies! In the ninth century, the dogma of Transubstantiation was conceived, and was declared an article of faith in 1215. Faith is a hobby with Catholics; they can believe almost anything except the gospel. Now the New Testament expressly assures us that, "we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." And again: "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." But Rome cares nothing for such antiquated authority, and says in her catechism, treating of the Lord's Supper: "The substance of the bread is changed into that of the body of Jesus Christ, and the substance of the wine is changed into that of his blood." This miracle is called transubstantiation, and, according to the catechism, "It is effected through the almighty power of the words of Jesus Christ spoken by the priest in mass." Thus a little ignorant, superstious, besotted priest, can manufacture Christ, and hand him out to be swallowed by the people. Well, some folks can swallow anything. Ten thousand priests in ten thousand churches every Sunday make ten thousand Christs. They create their God, and then eat him up.

Of this delusion an eloquent voice has said: "Around this as their sun, revolves all the rest of the papal system. If there is no propitiatory sacrifice but through the eucharist, if the priest controls it, and has it in his power to make Christ, or to refuse to do so, every worshipper is bound to the priesthood by his every hope of salvation." Remember further that Rome loves money, and that these masses are sold to secure the repose of the dead in purgatory. Purgatory is an expensive place to reside in.

In our next we may have something to say of Romanism in Protestant churches.

ENTHUSIASM AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

Bro. Van Deventer has undeniably good ideas about "Enthusiasm" in his article on the fourth page of this issue; but, as he suggests, trouble occurs when we come to say what enthusiasm is and what should be its source. Enthusiasm is zeal intensified. But the hilarity of silly yells, State songs and handkerchief-waving salutes, is not any kind of zeal; it is a frothy abomination. If Baptist churches had depended for their growth on these things, or had depended on their progress, they would be now just where they were at the beginning. Think of Paul going to Toronto for enthusiasm, nay, think of the young converts of the apostles separating themselves, electing officers and having a big trip every year for enthusiasm!

There is an intensity of holy zeal that is holy enthusiasm. It is born of love, and grows with knowledge,—knowledge of God's mercies and realization of man's need of his loving kindness. There are very enthusiastic pastors in North Carolina, men who would give their lives to further the Christian religion, who indeed are giving their lives faster than they think. Now imagine one of these men going to the Southern Baptist Convention for enthusiasm, imagine one going to the State Convention for enthusiasm. They go to these occasions to transact business, to make acquaintances, to learn of general affairs; but they go to their Bibles and their sense of duty and love of service for enthusiasm.

We believe the so-called "zeal" or "enthusiasm" of the great gatherings called Young People's Conventions is largely that of the crowded cars on an excursion day. We know the holy fire of young Christians meeting as often as possible, talking of Jesus, studying the Word, and planning how they can best follow him in well doing, is of Love; we know that this enthusiasm is not created by anticipation or recollection of a big trip or anything of the kind, and it will not die when there is no trip, nor because they cannot have a State President, Secretary, etc., etc., and the excitement of electing them.

Conventions and associations are largely business affairs; their officers are chosen because business expediency demands it. The young people can have their local meetings and be as truly zealous or enthusiastic in them, and do far more good with a great deal less noise and friction, by leaving what business there may be to the older heads, and doing their work through their church and in the name of the Great Head of the Church.

Young people ought to arrange to meet every week locally. They ought to study the Bible and religious work generally and they ought to pray more and talk more; and they ought to be enthusiastic in these things, which they will be, if they do them with the right spirit. But these things are minor matters at Young People's Conventions in which "big" speeches, State songs and yells and salutes take up most of the time.

It is reassuring to know that the young people of North Carolina are led by such consecrated men. We had good reason to fear evil leadership at one time, but we are satisfied now they will not go wrong. We do not believe these men will approve a Southern Union at Washington, though newspapers may unscrupulously make use of their willingness to have a conference on the subject. The fact that one approves a conference, however, does not imply that he will sanction its action, although it is clear to us that this Washington conference is planned with a view to taking the Southern Baptist Convention by storm.

With our present arrangements respecting the young people, local organizations and a general meeting for conference and culture and work, annually with our Convention, and under supervision of a committee of the Convention, we submit that we have all the best features of young people's activity, with every means of enthusiasm, and yet within safe bounds. On the other hand, State officials and Southern Union would estrange the young people from the churches and the Convention and the Boards, starve them spiritually and sap their usefulness.

Enthusiasm is good,-it is mighty; but it must be the right kind, must be of God.

NEW TRIAL OFFER

Our trial offers have been so successful that we propose another. Any new subscriber who sends fifty cents will get the RECORDER from March 1st to July 4th, and an Almanac thrown in, if the supply has not exhausted.

Back numbers can be furnished, if desired, as we have about thirty copies of each RECORDER since January 9th, to spare.

HELP the Home Board. We are sadly behind. Arrange to take collections as soon as expedient, and pray the Lord to call forth many gifts.

....Let there be general observance of the woman's week of self-denial for the benefit of Home Missions. The week begins March 10th; and there will be observance of it in all the States of our Convention.

....According to John Aspland's Register of Baptist churches in North America, completed 1790, there were in North Carolina at that time 94 Baptist churches, 77 ordained Baptist ministers and 7,503 church members.

....We hope Rev. W. R. Gwaltney will allow the RECORDER to publish his recent lecture to the Wake Forest "Bible Bands" on the "Relation of the Ministry and Teaching of John the Baptist to the Christian Dispensation."

....We are sorry to announce that Bro. J. H. Hutchinson of Six Forks, Wake county, is very sick. Bro. Hutchinson is known all over the county as a great man for revivals, and there are many who will pray for his early recovery.

....Let every young minister or candidate send to Rev. A. T. Robertson, Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., for his monograph, "Advantages to College Men offered by the Elective System of Theological Study."

....Rev. W. A. Humphrey has accepted pastoral care of churches in the vicinity of Marion C. H., South Carolina, and changes his address from Orrum to Marion C. H. We hope to hear of blessed work by our good brother in his new field.

....We thank Bro. C. A. G. Thomas for a copy of his sermon "From the Pulpit to the Poor House"; it makes a neat sixteen-page tract, and as no price is named, we assume it is for free distribution. It is in behalf of our Ministerial Relief Board.

....The Seventh Day Baptists would soon go out of existence, if some town mayor did not regularly come to their relief by arresting one of them for working on the Lord's day. This always gives them something to preach and write about and excite sympathy.

....Mrs. W. H. Brown returned home last Monday from Kinston, where she was called on account of the illness of her son, Rev. B. W. Spilman. Rev. Mr. Spilman accompanied her home. We are pleased to learn that he is improving.—Roanoke News.

....The vigorous young editor of the Southern Index, Rockingham, N. C., Bro. Settle Dockery, was a pleasant visitor to our office recently. Bro. Dockery is the son of Bro. H. C. Dockery, one of the most substantial laymen in the Pee Dee Association.

....Miss Alberta Newton, a missionary to Africa, who is well known in Durham, will be married on the 15th of April to Rev. J. D Lutcliffe, a Wesleyan missionary to the same country. The marriage will take place in Manchester, England.—News and Observer.

....Any subscriber who pays subscription up to Sept. 1, 1895, within the next two weeks, will receive a Baptist Almanac free. Any 50-cents nineteen-weeks subscriber will receive a copy of the Almanac free. This is the last offer we shall make on almanacs, as we expect to exhaust our supply right away. Send quick.

....Letters for the Gospel Mission workers in China should all be addressed "care of the Gospel Mission Box, Shanghai, China," we have been requested by brethren Bostick, Herring, Crocker and Blalock to say. We will publish a letter from Bro. Bostick next week, written Jan. 1st, 1895, when all were well.

....Bro. A. Johnson, editor of the Red Springs Citizen, writes: "We are trying to induce the S. S. Chautauqua to come here next summer. Bro. Kesler is a most popular preacher, preaching to large crowds at every appointment." An effort was made also to have the S. S. Chautauqua meet at Roaring Gap, we believe.

....A lady died in Raleigh last week and left $10,000 to the State University. It has been announced in the papers that a $50,000 Y. M. C. A. building will be erected at Chapel Hill, and that $5,000 for this purpose has been subscribed, mostly at Chapel Hill, within the last few weeks. And yet the institution will crumble to dust, if its hold on the State is broken. Truly no better thing could happen to the University than to cut off State appropriations by degrees, and give it a self-perpetuating Board of Trustees.

....The richest railway in the world, the New York Central, has discontinued the ministerial half-rate privilege. Some one has said that as a hardener of the conscience, wealth is a far greater agency than want.

....The meeting at the Baptist church still continues. The pastor, Rev. J. G. Pulliam, has preached every evening and night during the week. Mr. Pulliam is a speaker of unusual earnestness and power and always holds the closest attention of his audience.—Smithfield Herald, Feb. 28.

....The following young men have been chosen to "dress up" themselves, and the Memorial Hall, with the aid of the young ladies, wait on the band, show the people the way in, and do other difficult things next Commencement at Wake Forest: (1) W. H. Carter, J. W. Carlton; (2) C. Watkins, J. Y. Mangum; (3) W. T. Carstarphen, J. E. Dowd.

...."Woman in the Christian Assembly, Her Privileges and Her Limitations" is the title of a five-cent tract, an inductive study, by A. W. Lamar, D. D., Galveston, Texas, As the author takes the middle ground, he fails to brings this question any near to a biblical settlement. The Bible does not take "the middle ground."

....The U. S. Congress has capped the climax of several months of doing nothing by holding in session on Sunday, March 3rd, on account of pressure of business! By the way, Congress has voted to decrease the appropriations to the Indian schools (mostly Roman Catholic) by one-fifth. This is a step in the right direction.

....Rev. J F. Love of Suffolk, Va., was in Raleigh about ten days recently, holding meetings in the West End church, where Bro. Hunter is pastor. Bro. Love's work here a year ago was the occasion of many conversions. This year there were not so many conversions, but the membership was awakened, strengthened and uplifted. We were glad to have Bro. Love in Raleigh. Brethren Hunter and Pullen are continuing the meeting.

....As organ of a windy Southern B. Y. P. U. A., the Religious Herald is making desperate efforts to fill the bill; and it will be a sad pity if it does not overcome its several B. Y. P. U. A. copyright rivals, after having shown so clearly that it is second only to the national organ of the original B. Y. P. U. A., Chcago, when it comes to making much ado about nothing. Meanwhile the Atlantic Baptist should rise to the occasion and represent the Virginia Baptist churches.

....Rev. C. B. Justice, whose resignation as pastor of the Rutherfordton Baptist church, was accepted some three months since, has been recalled by this church. He has accepted the recall, and will, we trust, continue to minister to our people.—Cor. Charlotte Observer. Bro. Justice has served our Rutherfordton people a very long time—more than twenty five years, we think; and we are sincerely glad to know that he will remain with them. They could not get a more satisfactory man.

....Rev. J. G. Pulliam of Smithfield has been unanimously called to the pastorate of our Selma church, occupied with so much success by Bro. O. C. Horton, now of Durham. Bro. Pulliam was a Western North Carolina boy, getting his education at Judson and our Louisville Seminary. He preached with success in the far West several years, but returned to North Carolina last fall, and since January 1st has been occupying the Smithfield field with general satisfaction. Bro. Pulliam was in Raleigh Monday and he told us he would accept the call. We congratulate Selma.

....Seldom a day passes but that some subscriber renewing asks for a receipt. To send receipts consumes a great deal of time and makes an annual expense of at least two hundred dollars. None of this is necessary, as the label on your paper shows when your subscription expires; and if it not changed, as it ought to be, two weeks after you send us a remittance, let us know by postal card, and we will trace the error. Those who send money for other people have some reason to desire a receipt, and we will always be glad to accommodate them, if they will enclose with the remittance a postal card or a stamp.

....Hon. Thos. W. Mason of North Carolina has accepted an invitation of the Wake Forest Literary Societies to deliver the annual address next Commencement. Dr. H. M. Wharton of Baltimore will deliver the sermon. With these two men to head the list we are sure the next Commencement will be a brilliant one. Dr. Wharton's fame as a preacher is national, and still growing. He never fails to make a favorable impression. Of Capt. Mason we could say a great deal without saying anything too good for him. He is the foremost orator in the State; is a whole man, entirely qualified to inspire students to higher aims. We could not approve the selection of any other so heartily.

....Rev. J. E. Greene, Ronda, took the first opportunity of seeing his Elkin flock, staying with them just one day, and got five subscribers. We are not surprised that he is pleased with so responsive a field; and that his excellent Academy is in fine condition. Rev. B. H. Matthews, who has been sending new subscriptions ever since he took charge at Plymouth, sends another and a renewal. We are glad to know that Plymouth is pleased with Bro. Matthews and has called him for another year. We thank other brethren for new subscribers: Revs. J. K. Howell, Rocky Mount; W. F. Fry, Grantsboro; C. W. Blanchard, Cary; W. A. Humphrey, Marion C. H., S. C.; J. J. McLendon, Wolfsville; Dr. J. D. Hufham, Shelby, and J. B. Harrell of Wilmington, who sends four, and thus further assures us that he is preparing to do a great work in his new pastorate. He says he hopes to send others soon. At any rate, we hope to have him send us the Wilmington news as often as he can.

....The last instalment of Professor Gorrell's thorough treatment of an interesting period of Israelite history appears this week. The series of articles contains an unusual amount of information, and it was written in a pleasing style. The more one knows of Israel and the Old Testament, the clearer and more interesting is the Bible.——Church lover's notes are sound and timely. These notes are by a safe and substantial pastor who is not afraid to use his name, who loves to write, but like "the disciple whom Jesus loved," is averse to putting his name in print.——Bro. Stringfield represents his worthy cause with a stirring article.——Bro. Van Deventer tells what the right kind of enthusiasm will do.

....Rev. Jno. S. Hardaway has been at work several weeks with a view to preparing articles especially for the RECORDER, discussing the Sabbath question thoroughly. The first of the series of four articles will appear next week. Pastors who desire extra papers will please let us hear from them as soon as possible. Rev. Jno. T. Albritton discussed "Annihilation of the Wicked," in a highly satisfactory manner in the RECORDERS of Jan. 16th, 23d, 30th. Extra copies of these numbers can be supplied. Until the supply is exhausted, we will send this set of seven papers to any one on receipt of thirty cents in stamps. We purpose publishing other articles of this nature, covering disputed points of Baptist doctrine from time to time.

....We had a pleasant visit from Bro. John Mitchell, the Secretary of our useful Board of Education. He is trying not to increase his debt, but as the monthly bills fall due, he will surely get behind unless there is more activity with respect to this object. The Board is helping thirty three young men, the most promising set the Board has ever had. Bro. Mitchell says: "Money given to this Board will come back again in more senses than one: the beneficiaries will pay the cash back, and they will pay for it many times over by good doing." Bro. Mitchell contemplates going to Mt. Moriah, Smithfield, Goldsboro, Newbern, probably to Morehead and Beaufort and Greenville, and also to Durham, in addition to giving to the Raleigh brethren and sisters opportunity to help his worthy and needy work.

....The State of North Carolina furnishes free of charge, crop and farm-experiment bulletins to any one who desires them. The current bulletin treats of fertilizers, hog cholera, the ox warble or heel fly, cotton seed feed, influence of the moon, top dressing for clover, building a silo, and cutting oats for feed. There are many people who think this entire department is a farce. But if it is, it is a rather expensive one, and is costing as much as if it were most useful; and so, we advise our readers who are interested in such matters to send for these bulletins and for the fertilizer analyses for 1895, and make what they can out of them. A postal card with this request, and your name and address, sent to Dr. H. B. Battle, director, Raleigh, N. C., will be sufficient to get these things.

....People always attribute typographical errors, from which no paper is absolutely free, to the printers. An error is not the printer's ninety nine times in a hundred. If it is one of connection, something omitted or transposed, it is the copyholder's; if of the letters, bad spelling or punctuation or inverted letters, it is the proof reader's. It happened that there was no copyholder when a recent communication by Bro. Lansdell was read in proof. The RECORDER strives hard to keep out errors; every sentence that meets the reader's eye has been read once in manuscript and twice in proof. But mistakes will happen. It is said that the proof of a certain book was read by forty learned professors and was thought to be absolutely correct, but when the book had been printed, an error was found on the title page. Still this does not excuse one for overlooking an error.

....On account of the failure of all but twenty Union Meetings to send us their program in time, we were compelled to defer our Union Meeting supplement until next week. We trust, however, this will cause no inconvenience. If you have not sent us the program or date and place of your Union Meeting or Sunday school Association, please do so at once. We go to considerable expense to thus serve our meetings without interfering with our regular contents; and we ought to have the co-operation of the committees who have the programs in charge. We are very desirous of enlarging the usefulness of the Union Meetings and Sunday-school Associations. Every pastor and brother and sister ought to take a personal interest in them, and they ought to be attended as largely as the Associations. A great work of instructing, laying of plans and praying for guidance can be done through them.

....It does not make any difference, but we did think the Patron and Gleaner of Lasker would embrace the first opportunity to correct its misrepresentation of Dr. Durham's statement. Perhaps it is hard for our contemporary to understand the difference between school districts and townships. As Dr. Durham says, it is undeniably true that the money given to higher education in North Carolina from the public funds would maintain three schools in every township in the State three months. At last accounts our contemporary was publishing unsigned statements from nameless "poor boys" at the University. Even if the statements are not manufactured, they do not prove anything for State aid, as in nearly all of them it is said that help was obtained from the Deems fund, with which the State has nothing to do, and which would help poor boys at the Bostwick fund does at Wake Forest, whether State aid had ever been given or not. If State-aid were cut off, others would be encouraged and aroused to establish funds and increase the endowment of the University.

A More Important Warfare in China.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—You may think it a little strange that I write so little about the war. But there are several reasons why I do not. I am engaged in a much more important warfare which demands all my time.

We are so far removed from the seat of war, that we are not much more concerned about it than you are in the United States. The Chinese around us here seem to be very little interested in the matter. The Japanese are hyper-patriotic, while the Chinese have little or no patriotism. The war, too, is just in that state that a prudent prophet is afraid to risk his reputation by prophecying. So far, Japan has gained all the victories and seems to be having her own way. China has almost given away several very important places.

The two countries are now discussing terms of peace, but it is impossible just now to predict the result. A very short time may bring us peace, or it may bring us unconceived-of results. We will have to wait and see.

Our missionaries in North China have left Tungchow and are safe in Chefoo. We need to pray God's protecting care for the missionaries and native Christians in the north.

Whatever else may be the result of the war, it will bring about many changes in China. Any change will be for the better. Let us pray God to overrule it all to the advancement of his kingdom in China.

We are all well and working hard. Our work is encouraging. Many are hearing the Word, and some seem interested.

Sincerely, R. T. BRYAN.

From Lumberton.

Dear Recorder:—Here we are, safely and comfortably housed in Lumberton. It was with an aching heart that I laid down the work in my old field. Six years ago I went fresh from the Seminary to take the pastoral care of Rockingham and Lilesville churches. We had heard it spoken of (especially Rockingham) as the hardest field in the State. We were very agreeably surprised, and in many respects found the work delightfully pleasant. Some as noble brethren as the State contains belong to the churches on the field which we have just left. During the six years of our stay among them there was no carping nor fault finding indulged in, and if there was the least dissatisfaction on the part of a single member of either church, I did not hear a whisper of it. I am sure that we fully reciprocate their kindly feeling. On many occasions, beside the salary paid us, the brethren showed their appreciation in a very substantial way.

I thank God that we can leave the churches on the field united, harmonious, and free from debt, and pray that the Lord may send them a pastor who can lead them on to still greater things.

It had been the desire of my pastoral life to concentrate my efforts so as to spend more time in my study and less on the road. Up to this time, however, I did not feel warranted in giving up the work at Rockingham and Lilesville. But I feel now that we are following the leading of God's Spirit in coming to Lumberton.

We arrived here last Tuesday evening, and received a royal welcome. Some of the brethren and sisters met us at the depot and had us driven to the parsonage, when a number of the members were in waiting for us. Comfortable fires glowed in every room, giving us literally a warm welcome. In a few minutes we felt perfectly at home. The sisters had prepared an elegant supper to which they invited us, and then retired, leaving us to enjoy our sumptuous repast, and promising to return after supper. And they did return in great numbers, each one bringing a package, so that we had to put our wits to work to find places for depositing them. We hope we may be able, by our works, to prove more conclusively than by our words, that we appreciate the warm welcome extended us.

And now to the work that lies before us! God give us needed wisdom and grace to seize every opportunity that may present itself to advance the Master's kingdom.

Please send the RECORDER to Lumberton. Its smiling face will seem very familiar amid our new surroundings.

LIVINGSTON JOHNSON.

Lumberton, March 1, 1895.

With Bro. Jones.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The RECORDER of Feb. 6th, received yesterday, has an article from Bro. N. S. Jones in regard to evangelistic work. As soon as I carefully read the article I concluded to say a word to encourage the proposed work.

Since I have been trying to preach Christ and him crucified for the salvation of sinners, I have believed in evangelistic work. I believe it should be as it was in the days of the Apostles when the seventy were sent out two and two. It is as true now as then, as Jesus said, "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few." Luke 10: 2. I believe anything that was practiced by the Apostles in the work of the Lord should be practiced by the Baptists now.

I am sure that if the brethren in the ministry would unite in evangelistic work in the eastern part of North Carolina, and especially in Hyde county, and also in the counties of Beaufort, Tyrrell, Dare and Pamlico, there could be much good accomplished. As Bro. Jones says, let the work be done without money and without price.

I would be glad to unite with any of the preachers of our faith, and take them through Hyde county, and also through the other counties named.

Brethren, we should pray earnestly over this matter, and then earnestly engage in the work, in the name of the Lord, as David did in his conflict with Goliath of Gath. May God help us in this noble work is my prayer. W. R. CARAWAN,

Rose Bay, Hyde Co., Feb. 20, 1895.

North Carolina and the Home Board.

The contribution of North Carolina for 1894 was less than $2,500, far below her usual amount.

For this year, 1895, it is less than to the same date last year by $680. We have received but $1,680 from her since last May.

In January last when we had received but $900, we asked her to give us from that time to April 30th, $2,500. This amount would make her total contributions for the Conventional year but $3,400. That was the least proportionate amount we could assign her and avoid disaster to the work of the Board. Of the sum there remains nearly $2,000 to be raised. But what is $2,000 to the Baptists of North Carolina, if they had a mind to raise it? Two hundred of her churches giving $10 00 each would secure it.

Brethren, it can be done easily if you only will. Brother Durham says it will be raised, and I trust him. I know he will try, and if he don't succeed it will be because the pastors are indifferent to the cause. That I don't believe of such men as Hufham and Pritchard and Carroll and Carter and a hundred more whom I know and love and trust. It will be done.

I. T. TICHENOR.

Once Aided by the Home Mission Board.

Here is a partial list of the churches in North Carolina once aided by the Home Mission Board:—Asheville, Hendersonville, Newbern, Charlotte, Concord, Chapel Hill, Raleigh, Edenton, Goldsboro, Warrenton, Elizabeth City, besides a number of smaller towns, such as Bakersville, Hot Springs, Bryson City, Murphy, &c., &c. During the past year it assisted the churches in Washington, Concord, Tarboro, Newton, and Olivet church in Charlotte.

Brethren, read over the list and say whether North Carolina Baptists owe this Board their support.

OUR NEW SUGGESTION.

Would it not be a beautiful and graceful thing for the strong and prosperous churches mentioned above to remember the kindness of this Board in their time of need and make a special thanksgiving to their benefactor? What say you, pastors Blackwell and White and Ford and Pritchard and Carter and the rest? We still need $1,900 in order to make up our quota, and only two months are left us.

R. T. VANN.

Scotland Neck, N. C.

In the Mt. Zion Association.

The Master's work in this part of his vineyard (Mt. Zion Association) is moving onward. One can observe, on almost every hand, brethren who are willing to make sacrifices in order that the kingdom of God may be established in the hearts of men. This spirit was clearly seen at my last appointment at Bethel church, when they extended a call to me to preach for them another Sunday during each month. There are those as elsewhere upon my field of labor, who are full of zeal and who lend a helping hand to every good work. They have the good of the Master's cause at heart. We hope and trust that a day of greater spiritual results will soon dawn upon that church as an outcome of their having preaching twice a month. The different churches are doubtless feeling the powerful influence of the meeting held last year. One, who witnessed the manifestations of the Spirit's power in the conviction and conversion of souls, and rekindling a flame of sacred love in the hearts of others, would be struck with wonder and amazement, should he discover that the flame of God's love has died away so soon. A tidal wave for good was set in motion which, we trust, will not stop its onward movement until the words be spoken, "Time shall be no more."

We had the assistance of brethren Rufus King, L. L. Starrette, and R. Van Deventer. We, being constrained by the love of God, fully realized what it is to be laborers together with God. While it is true we cannot even approximate the good accomplished, yet there are some visible results which give us great encouragement and create within us a greater anxiety to do more faithful work than ever.

The Lord's name be praised and magnified above every other name for having permitted me to baptize sixty eight into the fellowship of the different churches under my charge.

We had a gracious revival at Antioch such as had not been seen there for a number of years, which resulted in the addition of twelve members by experience.

At Cane Creek, in the presence of a large congregation numbering more than a thousand, the ordinance of baptism was administered to twenty-three.

The membership at Swepsonville was increased by nine.

Great was the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the hearts of the people around Bethel. Several were restored and twenty-four related their experience and were baptized.

On the first Sunday in April the care of Swepsonville church will cease to be upon me, God having given me other work, I hope soon to enter upon it with renewed zeal and energy. When I think of those whose hearts beat as one and who are ever ready to co-operate with their pastor, it animates me and inspires my soul to press with vigor on. With the united effort of the brethren, God being our guide, good results are expected during the year.

Respectfully, J. W. WATSON.

Chapel Hill, Feb. 27, 1895.

Wilmington Notes.

Dear Recorder:—Please allow me space for a few notes concerning the Master's cause in Wilmington.

Bro. Poole is succeeding well at the Brooklyn church. He is held in high esteem by the members of his church and by the entire community. He is considered in these parts certainly as one of our strongest and most original preachers. He has just closed a good meeting with his church, in which he had the efficient aid of Bro. J. H. Hildreth. The bad weather was against them the most of the time, but the Lord was with them, and as a result he reports the church greatly revived and a number of sinners converted. I don't know yet how many have joined the church.

Bro. Oliver, by his unceasing energy and perseverance, continues to make things lively at the First church. They think they have one of the best preachers in the land for their leader. He is much devoted to his work and is succeding admirably well, as is evidenced by the large and increasing congregations that wait on his ministry. He tells me that just now there are several among the unconverted in his congregation who seem much concerned on the subject of religion.

A Pastors and Deacons' Conference has recently been organized, which meets every Tuesday morning. This is increasing in interest, and I believe is going to be helpful to all concerned.

The Baptist Sunday-schools of the city have recently organized themselves into a convention. This will embrace all the Baptist Sunday-schools in New Hanover county that may desire to come into the organization, and is intended to bring about a greater unity and efficiency in our work.

The Lord continues to bless us at the South Side church. The congregations are increasing all the time. All seem to be encouraged and hopeful. Twelve have joined the little number since the present pastorate began. Two others have recently professed faith in Christ. Our Sunday-school is excellent and also growing in interest under the splendid management of our beloved superintendent. Bro. J. S. Cannady.

J. B. HARRELL.

Wilmington, Feb. 25, 1895.

The "Regions Beyond" Roll.

The following pastors and laymen agree to hold a meeting within the next few months in some destitute place where our doctrines are not preached,—at least, where our denomination is not regularly represented:

Rev. N. S. Jones, —— place; Rev. C. W. Blackwell, Hyde county; Rev. B. H. Matthews, ——.

It has been wisely suggested that a pastor, and a layman go together in this great and sacred work, but where this is impossible, let two pastors go together, in order to relieve one another, do more personal work and lead singing.

Destitute places desiring a meeting may make it known by writing to the RECORDER.

Any lamp with wrong chimney on it is unsatisfactory. Geo A Macbeth Co, Pittsburgh, Pa, will send you the "Index to Chimneys" free, if you write for it.

Sick Stomach for Forty Years Cured by the Electropoise.

RENSTON, N. C., Feb. 13th, 1895.

Dear Sir:—I am well pleased with the Electropoise, it having done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I had not known what it was to be free from sick stomach in forty years; but since using the Electropoise I have had little symptom of it, which alone is well worth the price of it. I loaned it to a neighbor, who was raging with neuralgia of the face, and he found great relief. Very truly,

MRS. M. A. TUCKER.

"A Chance to Make Money."

R. H. Woodard Company, of Baltimore, Md., have just published a very fast selling book: "Home of the Bible" by Marion Harland. 10,000 copies were sold in one week. One agent sold fifty-eight in eight days; another twenty-seven in three days. They wish to employ at once agents everywhere to sell this book. Freight is paid and credit given. Send them at once $1.00 for a complete canvassing outfit and full instructions, and you can make money rapidly.

Home Testimony.

WHAT N. B. BROUGHTON SAYS.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 26, 1894.

J. D. BOUSHALL, ESQ.,
Manager Ætna Life Ins. Co.,
Raleigh, N. C.

My Dear Sir:—I am to-day in receipt of the Company's check on the First National Bank of New York for one thousand dollars ($1,000) in full settlement of Policy No. 213,127 on the life of the late Lewis O. Lougee, Treasurer of Wake county.

Please accept the thanks of the family for this prompt and satisfactory settlement. Mr. Lougee died on the 10th Nov., 1894. The proofs were filed with you on the 17th. The check is dated Nov. 24th.

I take great pleasure in commending your excellent Company to those looking for safe and reliable insurance.

Yours truly, N. B. BROUGHTON,
Administrator, L. O. Lougee.

Enthusiasm.

"Against the hindrances of the world, nothing great and good can be carried without a certain fervor, intensity and vehemence; these joined with faith, courage and hopefulness make enthusiasm." This word used to convey the idea of excitement, extravagance, frenzy, passion, which is even now attributed to it. We are told now that this word has chiefly the meaning of earnest and commendable devotion, and in this sober sense we use it. I am quite sure the man that has been in demand and is now in demand is the man with enthusiasm. Two years ago the work of lifting the debt from our State Mission Board could not have been so easily done without the enthusiasm of our brave Leader. Men without it could have shown the necessity; but men without it could not have inspired the people to do it. The same characteristic is manifest in the Corresponding Secretary of Foreign Missions. He will succeed because he is putting the fervor of his soul, the intensity of his heart, the vehemence of his life and his faith in God in the effort, and may the Southern Baptists catch his spirit and come up to his help.

If enthusiasm is such a good thing, and can accomplish so much, why should we be so fearful of the young people's movement. If it is so desirable in the work, why is it to be regarded with so much distrust in this department. It does not seem to be simply an uprising of thoughtless, undisciplined youth, but it is led by trusted men in maturer years. We have only to call the names of R. T. Vann, H. A. Brown, J. W. Carter, C. A. G. Thomas, T. H. Pritchard, J. H. Edwards, and many others in the State, with those in other States, to make good our statement that this movement is in safe hands.

We are told of the dangers ahead, of the need to go slow, &c. We say the dangers that might threaten are largely diminished by the active co operation and lively interest of these brethren who are guiding the movement and giving it shape along existing lines.

Were this element conspicuous for its absence, would it be the best thing to let it alone because there were possibilities of danger?

Shall we say because there is danger in young manhood we will let it alone? For this very reason we must concern ourselves.

"The prudent man may direct a State, but it is the enthusiast who regenerates—or ruins."

There is a possibility for virtue or crime in youth, because there is danger we must direct this energy, for the sake of the virtue we must give shape to this activity.

It is possible for us to be so conservative that we may stand in the way of progress. Carey had to meet this difficulty. The churches had done nothing for the heathen, and when the time came to do, they concerned themselves about the ovation, and the consecrated cobbler received the cold shoulder till his red hot enthusiasm burned a way through their conservatism. The same difficulty in form of caste met him in India and was overcome there by the power of the gospel. We need only look in our churches to be convinced that the same trouble still exists.

The three hundred composing Gideon's band were the enthusiastic and self-sacrificing ones of the 32,000. They might not have been so forgetful of self had they been less enthusiastic. "Faint, yet pursuing" they were, because ardently attached to their homes, and would save their land from the oppressor. The pastor knows how the enthusiastic member can be counted on. He is ready to give up self for the cause, pleasure for duty. The enthusiastic ones do largely what is done. The 29,700 were somewhere waiting development, ready to shout victory or deprecate defeat, but doing nothing toward it. The men who see the needs, the opportunity, and the obligation, if they love the Lord, will do to count. If we find them in the ranks of the young let us be glad and encourage them to serve.

Good Lord, Deliver Us!

Lets us be thankful that we have not yet reached the point, however rapidly some are advancing thereto, that a Chicago paper notes: "Now and then we receive the manual of a church with so many societies in it that we know instinctively the pastor of that church must find life a burden. Such a minister always makes us think of a juggler in the old-fashioned circuses, where, besides the feat of balancing a barrel on his nose, he had to keep a dozen earthenware plates all going too. In fact, some ministerial brethren have told us that it used to be a good deal easier to run the church than it is now to have a dozen societies to run the church."—Western Recorder.

The blue-bird is hailed as a harbinger of Spring. It is also a reminder that a blood-purifier is needed to prepare the system for the debilitating weather to come. Listen and you will hear the birds singing: "Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla in March, April, May."

"Youth longs and manhood strives, but age remembers,
Sits by the raked up ashes of the past;
Spreads its thin hands above the whitening embers,
That warm its creeping life-blood to the last.

Dear to its heart is every loving token
That comes unbidden ere its pulse grows cold,—
Ere the last, lingering ties of life are broken,
Its labors ended and its story told."

Literary.

The Story of a Wheat Grain.—We have received a compact treatise on the chief ration of civilized man—the staff of life. It is illustrated with numerous engravings from microscopic views of the wheat grain. The information has high scientific value, as well as instruction for the average person.

The author is the veteran editor, the Rev. John J. Lafferty, who is also one of the Board of Visitors of the Medical College of Virginia. He has amused himself for years in scientific investigations, and given years to the question of a "complete flour." Theory and experiment went hand in hand. He utilized his mill at Crozet to test each step in the progress to a perfect milling output from the wheat kernel.

He submitted the outcome of his experiments to scientists of distinction, who gave full appreciation of his achievement.

Like men of his class, when success was secured he began to lose interest in the subject, until there was a pressure upon him to manufacture the article. He has invented machinery, and it will be installed by the new year at Crozet. Physicians of eminence have given assurance of unlimited demand. One remarked that no intelligent doctor would permit any other flour among his clients. The booklets (which is for free distribution) gives the story of the scientific research with the enchantment of a romance of chivalry.—Richmond Dispatch.

The American Historical Register, a monthly gazette of the patriotic, hereditary societies of the United States of America, "is devoted exclusively to American historical matters in general, and to the curiosities, autographs, book plates, antiquities and rare portraits and unprinted literature of American history, and prints the proceedings and current news of all the American patriotic associations, whose membership is hereditary." Welcome to this bright, spirited, truly American magazine. The contributors are eminent American writers, and will interest the educated and the cultured. It is well printed. The price is $3 per year.

Several articles which are an outcome of Julian Ralph's voyage to China, undertaken in the interest of Harper's Magazine and Harper's Weekly, will be published in the Magazine during the summer months. The first of the series will be entitled "House-boating in China," and will appear in the June Harper's. In all there will be three articles or more, amply and beautifully illustrated from drawings by C. W. Weldon, who accompanied Mr. Ralph to the interesting points in China which are described.

The Forum for March, which by the way begins volume 19. will contain four articles particularly timely—"The Business world vs. the Politicians," by the Hon. J. H. Eckels, Comptroller of the Currency; "Our Blundering Foreign Policy," by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge; "The Constitutionality and Justice of the Income-Tax," by Professor E. R. A. Seligman, of Columbia College; and "The Antitoxine Treatment of Diptheria," by Dr. L. Emmett Holt, one of the best living authorities on children's diseases.

The fiction contained in the February number of the Southern Magazine makes entertaining reading—four short stories in all, including "A Woman of Thirty," by Blanche Carr; "Charlotte," by Josephine Compton; "Death of the First Born," by F. P. Kopta; and "The Empress Carlotta's Fan."

In our Christian pilgrimage, it is well, for the most part, to be looking forward. Forward lies the crown, and onward is the goal. Whether it be for hope, for joy, for consolation, or for the inspiring of our love, the future must, after all, be the grand object of the eye of faith.—Spurgeon.

THE POSTMASTER'S LETTER.

T. H. EDMUNDSON.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir - I had been an invalid for nineteen years and had all the doctors in our country prescribe for me, but they could not say just what ailed me. When I wrote you giving the history and symptoms, you diagnosed my case as disease of the blood and kidneys, and advised me to try your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pellets," and I feel confident your medicines saved my life, and I hope all sufferers from kidney and blood diseases will try your valuable medicine.

T. H. EDMUNDSON, Postmaster,
Home, Marshall Co., Kans.

The muscular system, the Heart, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, all do their work with constant difficulty for every weary, thin or thin-blooded person. Fatigue comes early, is extreme, and lasts long. The demand for nutritive aid is ahead of the supply, and poisonous materials accumulate. This is the reason pale people are always tired. Certain it is that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures and builds up just such sufferers. To the weak and the nervous, Pierce guarantees A CURE.

Half Price to Ministers!

Sermons, Addresses and Reminiscences,

BY

Rev. THOS. E. SKINNER, D. D.

In order that every minister in North Carolina may have an opportunity to place this valuable and interesting book in his library, and for the purpose of introducing it, we offer it to ministers, by mail, postpaid, for sixty five cents (65).

Fifty cents for the book and fifteen cents for postage.

The book contains 450 pages of clear print, on good paper, and is handsomely bound in cloth. The regular price of the book is $1.15, by mail, and is considered very cheap at that.

Our offer to ministers is to send the book by mail for 65 cents. We shall keep this offer open for a limited time. If you want the book, send your order at once. Address,

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON,

Publishers, Raleigh, N. C.

Read What is Said of the Book.

Dr. Charles E. Taylor says: "A most valuable contribution to the religious literature of North Carolina. If the book shall have the wide circulation which it deserves, I believe it will be used of God for the awakening and conversion of very many."

Dr. J. B Gambrell, President of Mercer University, Georgia, has the following to say in "The Index": "The whole book is juicy, soulful and helpful toward a wider range of things and a better spiritual life. It is a good Sunday book. The Sermons deal with matters of life and death, and the Addresses touch on many practical topics, while the Reminiscences, especially of the author's conversion and spiritual life, are rich with a heavenly flavor."

"Every pastor and especially every young Baptist preacher in North Carolina, ought to have a copy of Dr. Skinner's book. If I had the means it would be a great pleasure to me to send a copy of it to every young preacher in the State."—C. Durham.

Consumption

is amenable to treatment. Hope, courage, proper exercise, and from the inception of the disease the continual use of Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites, are absolutely necessary.

Keep up good courage, and with the use of this most nourishing and fattening preparation recovery is certain in the first stages, and may be accomplished even when the lungs are seriously involved. Stop the excessive waste (and nothing will do it like Scott's Emulsion), and you are almost safe.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

The Combination Oil Cure for Cancer has the indorsement of the highest medical authority in the world. It would seem strange indeed if persons afflicted with cancers and tumors, after knowing the facts, would resort to the dreaded knife and burning plaster which have hitherto been attended with such fatal results. The fact that in the last three years over one hundred doctors have put themselves under this mild treatment shows their confidence in the new method of treating those horrible diseases. Persons afflicted will do well to send for free book giving particulars and prices of Oil. Address DR. BYE, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Situation As I See It—No. 2.

The great question before us now is not whether our young women shall be educated, but Where? Before answering this question, I beg your careful consideration of a few thoughts I have had in my mind a long time. And though I cannot say them as nicely as others, on account of some experiences, which I do not care to repeat, I can say them well enough.

NORTH CAROLINA'S PETS.

Of the many inviting advantages in our State, there appears to me none greater than those offered to our young men. They seem to be the pets in society, in the church, and in the State. If they sin against society, they are forgiven without asking forgiveness. If they sin against the church, efforts are multiplied for their restoration. If they earnestly desire to secure a collegiate education, the denominational colleges of the State have made it possible for them. And, within the last few years, lest some indigent young men should be overlooked, the State has entered the field to look them up, and offer them collegiate advantages. These advantages are not second class by any means. Dr. Harper, president of Chicago University, says that our own Wake Forest College is the equal of any college in the South. With an endowment of one hundred and eighty-nine thousand dollars, a loan fund of eleven thousand dollars, with an arrangement by which young men may secure board at actual cost, I venture to say our young men have, what I call, a chance. With all these advantages, I do not say that it is an easy task for a poor young man to secure an education, for there are hardships to endure that a coward will not undertake. Yet, hard as it may be, it is a chance for which very many have been grateful. Indeed, Wake Forest College is the pride of every Baptist in the State, who has studied our denominational life. What could we have done without it? What progress could we have made without this grand old institution, whose influence has permeated every nook and corner of our State, and gone as a benediction to other States and nations?

"NEEDLESS EXPENDITURE OF MONEY."

At the time Wake Forest College was being established, there was a number of good schools in the State. The University at Chapel Hill could have accommodated a larger number of students than it had. Why not send our Baptist boys to these good schools, and save this needless expenditure of money? After the war, much having been lost, why should not our young men have been sent to Davidson, Trinity, or out of the State? Does it make any difference where a young man is educated? Are not Greek, Latin, Mathematics and some 'ologies' all of a young man's education? It makes so much difference where our young men and women are educated that the Lord has his chosen men and women to attend to this particular work—fixing a place for them. What names of earth are dearer to us than those who, under the most discouraging circumstances, in the face of opposition the most trying, established our college.

ANGELS LOOKING UPON US.

For our young women we have not one dollar endowment in the State, not one dollar as a loan fund, and only one scholarship! The Lord open our eyes to see where rests the responsibility of such neglect of the beings that mean so much to our Christian civilization. Angels are looking upon us. The opportunity is before us to establish a school for our women that will mean so much in time and eternity, for the glory of God and the elevation of lost humanity.

WHERE ARE OUR YOUNG WOMEN?

Our young women who are in college may be found at Hollins Institute, Virginia, Southwest Virginia Institute, Bristol, Va.-Tenn., The Womans' College, Richmond, Va., Norfolk College, Norfolk, Va., Southside Institute, Berkley, Va., Greenville Female College, Greenville, S. C., Salem High School, Salem, N. C., Greensboro Female College, Greensboro, N. C., State Normal and Industrial School, Greensboro, N. C., LaGrange College, LaGrange, N. C., Greenville Female Institute, Greenville, S. C., St. Mary's, Raleigh, N. C., Peace Institute, Raleigh, N. C., Oxford Female Seminary, Oxford, N. C., Chowan Baptist Female Institute, Murfreesboro, N. C., and at other colleges in or out of the State. With one or two exceptions, so far as I have been able to learn, these colleges are private or corporate enterprises.

PRINCIPLES DEARER THAN LIFE.

If we need a college for our young men, as we have at Wake Forest, is not the demand upon us equally great to provide an institution of like character for our young women? There is no question that so affects our denominational life as the training of our young men and women; and we can as well afford to neglect the one as the other. Are not the principles, which separate us from all other denominations, and which are dearer to us than life itself to be maintained and advocated by our young women as well as by our young men? The ministry excepted, what is the difference between the church and denominational work of our young men and women?

MEN WHO HAVE RENDERED VALUABLE SERVICE.

From the seacoast to the mountains may be found noble Christian women whose influence for good is seen in society, and whose worth in their homes is beyond comprehension. These were educated in colleges and seminaries presided over by Drs. McDowell and Royall of blessed memory, Profs. John B. Brewer, F. P. Hobgood, H. W. Reinhart, and Rev. J. N. Stallings, and others whose names are household words in the many homes blessed by the presence of their pupils. There are many other women without an education who under God have wrought inestimable good, and the more to their credit it is.

From the large number of our young women that are in other than Baptist colleges, and the still larger number that cannot reasonably hope to attend without aid, it is clear that existing facilities are not answering the demands of the Baptist State Convention. Any man who is at all interested in the education of our young women must realize the great necessity for establishing the school now contemplated—an institution that is destined to receive the largest patronage of any school in the State—YOUR SCHOOL, that shall be run in the interest of your daughters or sisters, where you can get advantages for them equal to those of any school in the South at actual cost. I am speaking as one of the trustees, and think I know the minds of the others in these two respects: first class advantages in every department, and at a cost within the reach of our people.

But we can do no better than the trustees of other female schools in advantages or cost unless we can secure an endowment fund, and a loan fund, besides the buildings and apparatus. So after all, the most important part of the work is upon you, brethren and sisters.

As I write I think of some of God's noble men and women who have so gladly made contributions to the work. One dollar will not endow the Woman's College, but it will help. God has plenty of money and property in the hands of his stewards to make this one of the grandest institutions in the land; and we are trusting that his servants will cheerfully make the investment that will pay so much in time and in eternity.

We are very anxious to open the school next fall for the large number who want to attend. Faithfully,

O. L. STRINGFIELD.

"Enthusiasm"

The Watchman objects to the silly "Chatauqua salute" of waving handkerchiefs, on the ground that it is unclean and unwholesome. The Christian Inquirer adds: "We object to the introduction of that salute into promiscuous assemblies on other and more serious grounds." But, brethren, think of the "enthusiasm," and cease your old-fashioned notions of cleanliness and refinement. —Western Recorder.

Dandruff is due to an enfeebled state of the skin. Hall's Hair Renewer quickens the nutritive functions of the skin, healing and preventing the formation of dandruff.

Shall aught beguile us on the road,
While we are traveling back to God?
For strangers into life we come,
And dying is but going home.

Who carried the least luggage into the ark? Answer: the fox and the cock, because they had only one brush and comb between them.

How to Save Trouble.

If you your lips
Would keep from slips,
Five things observe with care:
Of whom you speak,
To whom you speak,
And how and when and where.

If you your ears
Would save from jeers,
These things keep meekly hid:
"Myself" and "I,"
And "mine" and "my,"
And how "I do," or "did."

SUBJECT FOR MARCH: AFRICA.

Two new narrative leaflets, telling of the work of the Home Board, have been published and will be sent free on application to Miss Fannie E. Heck, Raleigh, N. C.

Although it has been urged that the Societies this month observe a Week of Self Denial to meet the pressing needs of our Home Board, this should in no way interfere with the study for the month. The study topics are so arranged that the same one comes around but once a year. It is, therefore, very important that each in turn be dwelt upon.

During the year the African Mission has suffered great loss in the death of Mr. and Mrs. Newton. Notwithstanding this, the late letters from our missionaries are full of hope and encouragement.

Rev. C. E. Smith says, "The English have practically taken the Yoruba country over," and from this fact he hopes for much more facility in reaching different parts of the country and the doing away with many of the most barbarous heathen customs.

He tells of four women baptized and adds, "I am looking constantly for converts every Sunday."

A Week of Self-Denial—March 10–16.

God plants thoughts in hearts and minds which ripen in time to meet emergencies unforeseen. When the Woman's Missionary Union, assembled in Dallas last May, voted unanimously to observe a week of self denial, none knew that the Home Mission Board, S. B. C., from the various circumstances enumerated in Dr. Tichenor's circular, would be in such dire need. Or, let us put it a step nearer the living reality, and say that none knew "our substitutes" on the frontier, from the failure of the Home Board to receive collections from the churches, would be reduced almost to starvation. This is the emergency which is upon us, and how shall we meet it?

With the W. M. U. pledge of $5,000 for the debt of the Foreign Board more than paid, and with the Christmas Offering for China completed, we plainly hear God's call in the direction of the Home Board's needs. Though the cry is voiced by the bodily and mental sufferings of our missionaries, by the mothers' anxieties for their children, and by the cold and hunger of these little ones, it is, nevertheless, God's appeal to us Southern Baptist women to arise and do something special as our answer to His call. And what shall it be? Does not the recommendation to observe a week of self-denial, accepted ten months ago in Dallas, seem to be a way by which each one of us can answer "I will" to this invitation of the Lord?

A week of self denial! How does that bear comparison with Christ's life on earth? Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might become rich. In view of this unmerited favor, let us give ourselves with deeper, truer meaning than ever before, to our self denying Redeemer; and then, with grateful eyes and mellowed hearts, we shall see ways of denying ourselves, and we shall be willing to follow those ways, to the glory of His name and the succor of His servants.

The London Missionary Society observed a week of self-denial, and $50,000 were poured into the Lord's treasury. The same year the Salvation Army, poor in pocket but rich in spirit, gave $300,000 by the same method. Have we not rich women among our membership—over 750,000—who could deny themselves of some costly luxury, some elegance of home or toilet, some entertainment or excursion, and coin the cost into food for hungry bodies and souls in our country. Are there not hundreds and thousands among us, who have all we need for comfort, who would honestly deny ourselves some of these things that the necessaries of life might be given to others? And the poor among us—many are poor, but they are always the most generous givers, according to their ability, and scarcely need to be urged. Let us, one and all, in whatever station placed by Providence, determine with David in his sacrifice to God, "Neither will I offer unto the Lord my God of that which doth cost me nothing." This resolve faithfully carried out will proportion our giving according to our ability. If we give as we are able, give till it costs us to give, who shall say what the amount will be?

Honestly, faithfully, tenderly, as unto the Lord, let each of us give the second week in March, beginning with Sunday, 10th, to this noble work of aiding Home Missions, in the hour of extremity. A richer spiritual blessing will be ours for sharing our temporal things,—it is more blessed to give than to receive.—Annie W. Armstrong, Cor. Sec. W. M. U.

The Pathway of Knowledge IS THE Road to Success

Victor Hugo

In speaking to young men, once said: "It is the learning acquired at midnight that will make your future bright and dazzling as midday." And in this terse epigram the great Frenchman stated a truth that applies equally to struggling, ambitious young men the world over.

Inasmuch as you have yet your place to make in the world, and will avail yourself of opportunities to increase your knowledge and improve your mind, so will you make your life successful and happy.

A man's brain is a garden given him to cultivate, and whose products will be his support.

Plant That Garden

with seed of knowledge and from the vines will grow the blossoms of financial gain and honorable preferment.

Never before in the history of the world have young men had an opportunity to fit themselves for the battle of life as it is now given them. In this, as in everything else, American push and public spirit lead the world.

All that the college graduate has been taught, and more, can be secured by the young man who gets a set of the Encyclopædia Britannica now offered to The Observer subscribers on the easy payment of 10 cents a day. But remember that our special introductory offer is for a limited time only.

Wanted.

Do you want to start the New Year in a good position that will pay you well provided you are a good salesman and collector?

We want live, energetic men to canvass, sell machines and collect. If there is an agent located in your community we can locate you elsewhere in a good section. We furnish a nice light-running wagon, agent to furnish horse and harness and make a $500 bond. We offer a good salary, or commission contract, one under which a live, energetic hustling man can make and save money. Men of character and good make-up do well to secure work with the Company, for if successful and the business entrusted is handled honorably, they will be promoted to more responsible positions of trust and responsibility, with increased compensation. General Assembly.

FEBRUARY 25.

SENATE.—Bill to appropriate $3 500 to the Lindley training school at Asheville was tabled. E L. Franck of Onslow, J. J. Long of Columbus, E. A. Aiken of Transylvania, were elected members of State Board of Agriculture. Bill allowing levies of special taxes for public schools passed second reading. Bill to secure equal payments of debts of insolvents, tabled. Bill to allow State and County officers to make bonds through trust companies passed third reading.

HOUSE.—Committee returned unfavorable report on resolution to reduce salaries of office-holders. Walker introduced a bill to provide Bibles for all prisoners of jails. Forty or more bills of no importance were introduced, notwithstanding that the Assembly ought to adjourn March 8th, and there are more bills in hand than can be considered. (For instance, Young introduced a bill to incorporate the G. U. O. of Galilean Fishermen!) A resolution by Lusk, disowning and virtually repudiating the Douglass adjournment, was passed! Bill requiring corporations that issue scrip or checks to redeem them in cash, unless otherwise agreed, passed third reading.

FEBRUARY 26.

SENATE.—About forty bills, of little or no account, were introduced, among them one for the protection of fish in Ahoskie swamp. Bills to recharter Wilmington and Beaufort passed third reading. A bill to transfer Mitchell county from the 8th to the 9th district passed under the lash of a caucus. In a colloquy the Senator from Sampson was patriotic enough to utter this sentiment, which ought to be every lawmaker's: "I will not be bound by a caucus to any action against the welfare of the people."

HOUSE.—About forty little bills were introduced, among them one "To make Chockowinity creek a lawful fence." The "lost" bill, referred to last week, namely, to "allow punitive damages as well as other damages when railways are guilty of negligence," passed second reading, when it developed that this was a substitute and not the original bill, which is yet lost. The substitute referred to Judiciary committee. Resolution to investigate the Shell Fish Commission, which is charged with doing a great deal of harm and squandering several thousands of dollars, adopted. Bill to make it lawful to appoint female notaries public, passed; bill to prohibit working female convicts on roads, tabled. (Consistent, though wrong).

SENATE (NIGHT).—Only local bills considered, of which several prohibiting sale of liquor in vicinity of certain churches were passed, we are glad to say.

HOUSE (NIGHT).—A hundred or more local or private bills were disposed of.

FEBRUARY 27.

SENATE.—Death of Senator E. L. Franck of Onslow, President of the Senate in the absence of the Lieutenant Governor, was announced. Bill abolishing criminal court of New Hanover and Mecklenburg and establishing a new criminal circuit court of the leading counties, passed third reading. And H. G. Ewart was elected judge, R. S. McCall solicitor, and W. A. Wilson, clerk, of the Asheville district criminal court. (Agreed to by the House).

HOUSE.—About twenty five bills were introduced, most of which will never be heard of. Bill to require a fair settlement of losses by insurance companies, by providing for selection of arbitrators, was passed. The office of insurance commissioner will probably be established. At night the public printing was discussed. A decision in this matter has not been reached.

FEBRUARY 28.

SENATE.—Bill to give $10,000 to Confederate monument, a similar bill having been defeated, was introduced and passed second reading, and third later; county government bill, which will jeopard certain eastern counties, passed.

HOUSE.—Bill giving the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts at Raleigh ten thousand dollars, and that at Greensboro five thousand dollars annually, passed. Bill reducing salaries of railroad commissioners, after the terms of the present commissioners expire, to $1,500 a year, passed. At night, a bill was passed to provide a special levy of tax to supplement public school fund and requiring this proposition to be voted for at every election until carried, twenty counties, more or less, being excepted.

In the House at night, bill to incorporate and other private bills only were considered.

MARCH 1.

SENATE.—Election law bill passed second reading and third next day. We will publish an outline of the bill later. Bill providing for election of justices of the peace by this Assembly, to fill present vacancies, and by the people hereafter, passed second reading. Report in favor of M. I. Stewart of of Winston for public printing was adopted.

HOUSE.—The morning was occupied with discussion of the rates of taxation. The rate will remain very nearly the same. At night a bill was introduced to appropriate $8,500 a year to the Soldier's Home. Bill to abolish board of directors of State Hospital at Morganton passed. Bill for selection of public school books by counties instead of by State adoption through State Board, passed third reading. In the Senate at night the bill to elect three additional magistrates in each township passed third reading.

MARCH 2.

SENATE.—Many minor bills were passed. Bill to revise Code, providing three commissioners at $2,000 each to do the work, passed second reading. Bill appropriating $10,000 annually to State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts passed third reading; as did also bill for $5.000 for institution for negroes at Greensboro. Paddison introduced a bill to abolish free tuition at the State University. Bill to increase appropriation to Asylum at Oxford for orphan negroes, from $1,500 a year to $3,000, passed third reading. Bill to appropriate $25,000 for building a reformatory for boys and $10,000 a year to maintain it, passed second reading. The Senators are unmindful of the difficulty their opponents had in explaining alleged extravagances, but those who foot the bills do not forget.

HOUSE.—About thirty small bills were introduced, although it is too late in the day to consider them. Bill to tax peddlers of drugs, nostrums, etc., passed. An amendment to the revenue bill, offered by Walser, to permit distillers to sell liquors by the quart instead of by the gallon, passed.

At night in the House, a bill to incorporate the North Carolina Teachers' Association, passed third reading, with a bill to amend charter of Asheville, and about fifty other private and local bills.

1,500 bills have been introduced in the House.

CALCULI DISSOLVED

By BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Spring No. 2.

Dr. C. H. Davis, of Meriden, Conn., in the "New Eng. Med. Monthly," for July, '90:

"Mr. R. L. Roys, of this city, consulted me about two years ago for Stone in the Bladder, from which he had been suffering for a number of years. On my suggestion he commenced the use of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER as he was very much opposed to operative interference. After using the Water for a short time, disintegration to a certain extent took place, and large quantities of stone were passed. For several days in succession, he passed as much as a teaspoonful of the debris, and at intervals for a considerable period he passed large quantities, and under the continued use of the Water, there was a constant passage of calculi until he was entirely relieved of his trouble.

"The photograph herewith sent is a correct representation, and exact size, of some of the largest specimens of Calculi discharged by Mr. Roys. A chemical and microscopical examination showed that they are Uric Acid with a trace of the Oxalate of Lime."

This Water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f.o.b at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

Connecticut Mutual Report.

From the forty-ninth annual statement of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, Hartford, and the report of President Jacob L. Green for the year 1894, appeared in "The Post" February 12th and their character deserves extended notice.

The operations of this company the past year demonstrate beyond question that when such institutions are founded upon correct principles and their business constantly conducted with conservatism, care and marked capacity, times of even severe depression in business do not affect their steady growth. Indeed the Connecticut Mutual is an institution of such a character that in times of business distress it becomes a sort of refuge for the provident among the people. This is shown by the fact that the number of persons insured last year was considerably larger than in the previous year, though the total amount of insurance written was slightly less.

A bare statement of the assets of this company and of what it has done for the insured in its history is sufficient to place it at the front of all financial institutions in New England. The gross assets December 31, 1894, were $62,234,925,33, while the amount required to re-insure all outstanding policies, net, at the company's high standard would be but $54,221,091. Its surplus has reached the enormous figure of $6,876,212.78 in spite of the fact that there were paid to policy holders in the year $6,198,991.52 for death claims and matured endowments, surplus returned to policy holders and lapsed and surrendered policies. The latter item was small, amounting to $659,701.33, only 3 67 per cent. of the amount of risk at the beginning of the year and less than in the previous year. This for times like these shows the favor with which the insured hold their policies and is in marked contrast to the methods of some of the competitive companies which write a large amount of insurance every year but have lapsed and surrendered policies amounting to even 30 per cent. of the insurance at the beginning of the year.

It proves the wisdom of an insurance business founded on correct principles and conducted with that conservative care which creates a faith among the insured and those seeking insurance. Col. Green has fought hard for his idea and the evidence is unmistakable that he has won a complete victory by the persistence in business of safe methods. The expense account is kept at a low percentage, only 9 94, making it possible for the company to write what really is investment insurance while the securities of the company are so gilt-edged that the loss from interest is inconsequential and the face value of the securities has increased during the year. In all its operations the company shows that it is beyond the influence of general adverse conditions.

The full report and secretary's statement gladly furnished by S. D. Waitt, General agent, Raleigh, N. C.

A telephone exchange will be established at Fayetteville.

A Good Suggestion.

I am enjoying those doctrinal articles, "The Divine Origin of Baptist Churches," as printed in the RECORDER. I have transferred every one of them to my scrap-book, as I do all such articles. I am saving everything that has doctrinal, historical or statistical value. Every Baptist home ought to be a semi-historical society. How few of our people save Baptist documents; even their Associational minutes are scattered and lost. HENRY SHEETS.

DIED.

BRISSIE—Sister Mamie Brissie died in Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 10th, 1895, aged sixteen years. She was baptized into the fellowship of Independence Hill Baptist church by Rev. J. A. Hoyle Aug. 10th, 1890, and lived a consistent life till the Master took her home.

UNCLE FRANK.

BLACKMON—James C. Blackmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Blackmon, was killed Nov. 7th, 1894, aged ten years and four days. He attended Sabbath school at Independence Hill Baptist church. He loved his class and teacher. He won the prize last year, but did not live to get it. God can more than fill the place made vacant. May he comfort and bless the sorrowing parents. A COUSIN.

HINSON—Mrs. Martha Hinson died at her home in Mecklenburg county, N. C., Feb. 11th, 1895, aged sixty-four years. She was a member of Independence Hill Baptist church. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her loss. Father and children, we would say the separation will be short if you only take her Saviour to be your Saviour.

A kind wife, a loving mother, a faithful member, is at rest. All is well.

NANNIE J. BLACK.

WHITEHURST—Maggie D. Whitehurst, the beloved wife of L. J. D. Whitehurst, departed this life at Elizabeth City Feb. 24th, in the thirty-fourth year of her age. Mrs. Whitehurst was a daughter of the late Mark Gregory of Camden county. She was greatly beloved by a large circle of devoted friends. Hers was a Christian character beautiful in its faith and devoutness. Many followed her body to the grave to bear tearful testimony of the sympathy for the living and bereft, and to manifest their love for the dead. She died in the Christian hope. She will arise in His likeness. C. S. B.

POPE—On Dec. 20th, 1894, our town was made sad by the death of sister Minnie F. Pope of Magnolia, N. C., wife of Mr. H. J. Pope of that place, and daughter of Bro. C. B. Gilmore of Mt. Olive.

Sister Pope leaves to mourn their loss a husband, five little children, mother and father, several brothers and sisters, and a host of friends, for all who knew her loved her. She was in the prime of life, only a little more than twenty-six years of age. About fifteen years since she was baptized into the fellowship of the Mt. Olive Baptist church by Rev. R. C. Sandling. She was up to the time of her death a consistent Christian, and died trusting the kind Saviour upon whose strong arm she had leaned during all her Christian experience. Her remains were interred in the Mt. Olive cemetery. May God richly bless and keep her little children, and comfort the loved ones left behind. A. A. BUTLER.

Mt. Olive, N. C.

BUNCH—Rev. Ephriam Bunch died at his home in Chowan county, Feb. 22d, 1895, that being his eighty-fifth birthday. Bro. Bunch had been an ordained preacher for many years. He never seemed to seek the pastoral care of churches, though he did have the care of some churches for a short while, but he seemed to love pioneer work. He preached in school-houses and under brush arbors. Churches were built in places where he labored and some are now strong churches. He made no report to any one of his labors, telling the number of miles travelled and sermons preached, visits made, prayers offered in families, &c., but was content to do the Lord's work as best he could and leave the results with God.

Bro. Bunch was a godly man, and the people loved him. A vast crowd gathered at his home on the 23d to pay their respects and to say good-bye.

A brother, sister, several children and grandchildren are left to weep. The Lord bless those who sorrow. A. W. B.

Hertford, N. C., Feb. 25, 1895.

Mr. Ed. D. Berry, a prominent citizen of Stanly county, was killed by an accidental discharge of a gun in his own hands, he slipping on the ice.

This remarkable statement, to which we direct special attention, is from a Tennessee farmer: My age is 63. I suffered intensely from Catarrh 10 years. Had intense headache, took cold easily, had continual roaring and singing in my ears. My hearing began to fail, and for three years I was almost entirely deaf, and I continually grew worse. Everything I had tried, failed. In despair I commenced to use the Aerial Medication in 1888, and the effect of the first application was simply wonderful. In less than five minutes my hearing was fully restored, and has been perfect ever since, and in a few months was entirely cured of Catarrh. ELI BROWN, Jackson, Tenn.

A Minister's Testimony.

DIXON, CALIFORNIA, Jan. 6, 1895.

Having used the Tahoe Kidney Cure, I can testify to its great merit as a remedy for kidney trouble. I obtained almost immediate relief, and I am convinced that it is a really remarkable medicine. My wife was speedily relieved of Leucorrhœa by its use, a few doses affording relief. I may add that I know of others in my congregation who have taken the Tahoe Kidney Cure with most gratifying results.

Responsibility.

No stream from its source,
Flows seaward, how lonely soever its course,
But what some land is gladdened! No star ever rose
And set without influence somewhere! Who knows
What earth needs from earth's lowest creature? No life
Can be pure in its purpose and strong in its strife,
And all life not be purer and stronger thereby!
The spirits of just men made perfect on high—
The army of martyrs, who stand by the throne
And gaze into the face that makes glorious their own—
Know this, surely at last! Honest love, honest sorrow,
Honest work for the day, honest hope for the morrow—
Are these worth nothing more than the hand they make weary,
The heart they have saddened, the life they leave dreary!
Hush! the sevenfold heavens to the voice of the spirit
Echo, "He that o'ercometh shall all things inherit!"
Lytton.

Two Millionaires.

I met them to day, but not in the same place. One of them was in a private parlor in a fashionable hotel. As he was an old acquaintance, we had a long and confidential conversation. He told me of his early struggles after he left the school where we were fellow-students, of his speculations, disappointments, and final sweep. He said: "You know, Obadiah, how poor our folks were. I was disgusted with poverty, and determined to be rich. I went to California, worked in the placers, and saved dust until I had enough to go prospecting. I staked out several claims, and thought that I had 'struck it rich' again and again. But the ore failed to pan out as I expected. At last, however, I did get on a quartz ledge that went five hundred to the ton. I worked it deep enough to make a show, then I organized a company and put the stock on the market. While it was booming I sold out and invested all that I had made in government bonds. Here they are. I brought them from my box in the safe deposit vault to cut off the coupons. They amount to a round million, and give me an income of forty thousand a year. I don't own a foot of real estate, or any kind of property. I have just this package of bonds (taking it out of his bosom), so you see I am free from care. My bonds are safe in the vault, and whenever I want any ready cash I have only to go and cut off coupons."

"But," I said, "that bundle of papers in your bosom which you say makes you a millionaire has no intrinsic value. Those bonds are only promises. Suppose the signer of them should fail?"

"Why man, they are United States bonds! The faith of the Government is pledged for their redemption. They are better than gold or silver. My only fear is that the Government may pay them at maturity. I would be glad to have them run as long as I live."

"So you are a millionaire by faith," I said "You don't see your real wealth or handle it, but only pieces of paper that represent it." "Yes, that is so, and while those pieces of paper represent the wealth and honor of the best Government in the world, I am satisfied."

The other millionaire I found in the county poorhouse. I used to know him, too, in former times. He was a good boy at school. He grew up a good man. But "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and this old friend had a succession of financial disappointments, followed by broken health, until he was compelled to go to the pauper's home. He, of course, was without lands or material wealth of any kind, and yet he had, like the man in the hotel, a bundle of promises. As I sat by him in his narrow chamber, he took from under his pillow a well-worn Bible. He held it up in his thin, trembling hand, and said: "Obadiah, people call me a pauper, but I am worth millions Why, in this book, which I sometimes think that God has written expressly for me, there are more than three thousand 'exceeding great and precious promises.' I wouldn't exchange one of them for a $50,000 Government bond. The bond I would have to leave in a few years at furthest; but these promises I shall take with me when I die and claim them in the land where there is no more death. They are the bonds of Him who owns not only the earth, but all the stars in the sky, and all the worlds that roll around them."

As I walked slowly home after that second interview, and thought over the events of the day, I concluded that I would rather be in the place of the millionaire in the poorhouse than in that of millionaire in the palace hotel. Both are rich in faith; but the basis of the confidence in one case is human, and in the other divine. I am an enthusiastic patriot. I believe that our Government is the best on earth. But I would rather trust God, yes, a thousand times rather, than it. His wealth is boundless; his power is limitless, his truth is immutable, and his love is infinite.—Obadiah Oldchurch, in the Interior.

Sickness Among Children

is prevalent at all seasons of the year, but can be avoided largely when they are properly cared for. Infant Health is the title of a valuable pamphlet accessible to all who will send address to the N. Y. Condensed Milk Co., N. Y. City.

Killing Time.

A young lady informs us that she gets so lonesome and wishes us to give her "a way of killing time." We never had so much time that we desired to kill a portion of it. "Life has no overflow to atone for the lost yesterdays," and the time you so thoughtlessly kill will pass away into eternity for which there can be no resurrection. How can this life be for you only an idle dream, when there are so many opportunities for doing good, so much real earnest work to be accomplished, and who wants a fearful account standing against one for "killing time?" We never have much sympathy for the class of people who are "always so lonesome." Each one should have a work to do—a purpose in life. Who lacks an aim never finds success. After allowing yourself proper time for rest, don't live a single hour without doing exactly what there is to do. Work, play, or study, whatever it is, do well and let no moments be lost. It is wonderful to see how much improvement can be made by the right use of the time that dawdlers waste. We pass this way but once—what will our harvest be! Recall to your mind when you want to "kill time" the dying words of Queen Elizabeth: "All my possessions for an inch of time," but it could not be purchased even with a kingdom.—World and Works.

Traveler Henry Hudson's Experience.

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc., none impress me more than my own case, and I conscientiously believe it to be my duty to let people know it. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."—HENRY HUDSON, James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Apple as Medicine.

Dr. G. R. Searles of Brooklyn, N. Y., discoursing on the apple as medicine, says it "is such common fruit that very few persons are familiar with its remarkably efficacious medicinal properties. Everybody ought to know that the very best thing they can do is to eat apples just before retiring at night. Persons unitiated in the mysteries of the fruit are liable to throw up their hands in horror at the visions of dyspepsia which such a suggestion may summon up, but no harm can come to even a delicate system by the eating of ripe and juicy apples just before going to bed. The apple is an excellent brain food, because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digestible shape than any other vegetable known. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep, and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. This is not all. The apple agglutinates the surplus acids of the stomach, helps the kidney secretions, and prevents calculous growths, while it obviates indigestion, and is one of the best preventives known of diseases of the throat. Everybody should be familiar with such knowledge, and I hope you will help disseminate it. In addition, next to the orange and lemon, it is the beft antidote for the thirst and cravings of the person addicted to the alcohol or opium habit."—National Stockman and Farmer.

The Emperor of Germany said recently in a speech: "I cannot wish anything more pleasant for the men of my nation than that the women may, like the Empress, devote their attention chiefly to the three great C's—church, children and cookery." Those are "three great C's" to be sure. The Emperor also said: "A wife with a talent for jam is preferable to one who has a wish to amend the constitution." The Emperor is not "advanced" a bit. He is a regular "old fogy," and yet it is to Germany our advanced thinkers" go to get their ideas. "Advanced ideas" are generally nonsense.—Western Recorder.

Baptist Periodicals

FOR BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Undenominational helps cannot teach denominational truths. A Baptist school needs periodicals that will explain, illustrate, defend, strengthen, the Baptist position. We are sowing seed in what we put into the hands of our children. Your Baptist publishing house furnishes you with aids which are as low in price as it is possible for papers and lesson helps of the same kind and quality to be made; and at the same time you get expositions made by Baptist scholars, as able and valuable as can be found anywhere.

IT IS refreshing to read a report of public services unquestionably done by patriots, after reading so many of work well paid for, and which there are thousands who would be glad to get, not for the State's sake, but for the salary attached.

The Board of Public Charities of North Carolina is one of the largest institutions of our government; and it is also one of the least expensive. The report for 1893–'94 is before us. The Board consists of seven members and a secretary. It is represented in every county in the State by two or more large souled citizens; and its object is to see to it that the unfortunates unavoidably in the State's keeping are properly cared for. Governments, like all corporate affairs, are liable to become heartless. The personal element is so easily erased from consideration, when personal contact does not occur. Without a board of this kind it is easy to see how wards of the State might suffer; but with a board it is impossible, so long as it performs its functions; and men who volunteer to serve without reward, save that peace of mind which is given to those who help the helpless, are not likely to half do their duty.

In the current report we find reports on the condition of inmates of the North Carolina Asylum for the Insane, list of appropriations, needs, and table of receipts and expenditures. Of the asylums at Morganton and Goldsboro, the institutions for Deaf and Dumb and the Blind (Raleigh and Morganton), the asylums for orphans at Oxford, and the Soldiers' Home, there are similar reports. It must be consoling to those who have friends upon whom misfortune has fallen to know that there are others besides salaried officers interested in their comfort. Perhaps a greater work is done by this board through its county representatives, who inspect and report the condition (size, degree of cleanliness, water supply, number of inmates, health, cost of food, etc, etc.,) of every county home, and have them published every two years. A report is made also on the penitentiary.

We are glad to know that there is one department of our government—not in danger of the ever present and insatiable horde of hungry office seekers; glad to know that there are some public officers whose patriotism is genuine.

LAST year a brother ordered us to stop his paper because there were too many foreign words in it. As we had never used any—excepting one,—and had been trying to keep other people from using them in their communications, we were tempted to think that the brother was in need of an excuse. But we started out to commend his taste rather than to question his sincerity. Truly, there are few things to which a subscriber may more justly take exception than foreign words in a newspaper. Our language is large enough for anybody, and too large for most people. Any one can look in the back of a big dictionary and get a few stock expressions and use them about as properly and fully as tastefully as a college graduate. The fact is, college graduates do not usually learn to use a language off hand; and when one runs upon a Latin or French phrase in their conversations or compositions, he may be sure it came from an English dictionary. Moreover, masters of foreign tongues are averse to using them except for exercise, or in reading. A school girl may be pardoned for using any of the score of stock, half-anglicised French expressions, on the ground that makes her pardonable for many other faults; but educated people have no such ground, having become responsible humans.

There is no danger of any but people ignorant of the English language or unusually accomplished scholars having to use a foreign expression for which there is not a better English equivalent.

The Sabbath—No. 1.

BY REV. JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

FIRST INSTITUTION AND RE-ENACTMENT.

The name "Sabbath" given to the day of rest is derived from a word signifying rest. Man's physical constitution requires a day of rest, and man's spiritual nature demands some portion of time specially set apart for the worship of God; and therefore our Saviour said, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." Mark 2: 27.

Man needed a Sabbath, and God gave him the Sabbath when he created him. We find the original institution of it in Gen. 2: 2, 3—"And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it, because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." To my mind this Scripture is a clear proof that the setting apart of a day of rest began when God created man, and rested from all his work.

It is argued by some that the institution of the Sabbath was first given on Mt. Sinai, and the argument is based on the absence of any Scripture record of Sabbath observance from the creation to the exodus; but a comparison of Gen. 2: 2, 3, with Ex. 20: 8–11, will easily confirm the conclusion that Ex 20: 8–11, is but a re-enactment of a law enacted at an earlier period. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy": here the word beginning the fourth commandment seems to imply the calling to mind of an earlier institution. The basis on which the commandment rests is, "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth; the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the seventh day and hallowed it." It carries us back to the creation itself. Again, the commandment to man is to rest; and it is enjoined upon the example of God who rested when he had ended the work of creation.

Corroborative evidence of the view that the Sabbath was re enacted at Mt. Sinai, is found on the fact that the weekly division of time prevailed among the Chaldeans, Egyptians, Greeks and Romans. As writers on the subject have said, we can account for the division of time into day and night, into lunar months, and into years; but how can we account for the weekly division of time becoming universal among men, except on the grounds of a tradition of the Sabbath given at the creation?

When we examine the Scriptures between the second chapter of Genesis and the twentieth chapter of Exodus we find this weekly division of time distinctly marked. In Gen. 8: 6–12, we are told that Noah sent forth the raven out of the ark; waited seven days and sent forth the dove; waited other seven days and sent her forth again; and after waiting yet other seven days he sent her forth again, and she returned no more. See also Gen 29: 27, where the weekly division of time is seen to be existing in the time of Jacob.

It is more than probable that the observance of the Sabbath, after its original institution, fell into disuse, except among the few pious ones that still held to the knowledge of God. This statement we believe to be true also of the days subsequent to the deluge; so that the Sabbath was existing more as a tradition than as a day observed according to its primitive design.

We may also reasonably argue that until a people was chosen to be the repository of the oracles and ordinances of God, the Sabbath day would be observed only by pious persons here and there, and would hardly be perpetuated. And even if the Sabbath was an ordinance in use in the times of Jacob, it would easily become obsolete during the four hundred years in which the children of Israel sojourned in Egypt; a large portion of which time they suffered under a grievous bondage. Hence, when God led his people out of Egyptian bondage, he solemnly gives to them the Sabbath day for rest and for worship.

The Sabbath was first enjoined upon the Israelites in the wilderness at the time of the giving of the manna. See Ex. 16: 22–30. We read in verse 29, "See, for that the Lord hath given you the Sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place; let no man go out of his place on the seventh day."

Under the most solemn and awe-inspiring circumstances the Sabbath day is enjoined upon the children of Israel at Mt. Sinai. Amid thunders and lightnings, and with the sound of a voice that made all the people tremble, God spake the words of the decalogue in the midst of which stands the law as the Sabbath day. Ex 20: 8–11.

This day, given on Mt. Sinai, became with all its peculiar ordinances interwoven into the entire fabric of Judaism. See Ex. 31: 12—17.

It was a day of rest and worship; it was a memorial of the deliverance from Egypt. Deut. 5: 14, 15. It was "a sign" between God and Israel. Eze. 20: 10—20. It was guarded by the penalty of death by stoning. There were rites and ceremonies peculiar to the day; so that we may say that it was distinctly marked as a Jewish day; and we are not wrong to call this day under the Mosaic dispensation the Jewish Sabbath. It was a shadow the body of which was Christ. Col. 2: 16, 17. Its rest typified the rest which Christ gives, even as the deliverance from Egyptian bondage typified the deliverance from the deeper and more ruinous slavery of sin and death. And as a Jewish institution, that part of it which was impermanent and peculiar to the Jews was among the "old things" which "passed away" under "the bringing in of a better hope."

In my next article I will consider the Lord's Day, or Christian Sabbath. The present article I will close with a quotation from "The Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge" on the Sabbath:

"The seventh day was hallowed at the close of creation; its sanctity was afterwards marked by the withholding of the manna on that day, and the provision of a double supply on the sixth, and that previous to the giving of the law from Sinai: it was then made a part of that great epitome of religious and moral duty, which God wrote with his own finger on tables of stone; it was incorporated with the public political law of the only people to whom Almighty God ever made himself a political Head and Ruler; its observance is connected throughout the prophetic age with the highest promises, its violations with the severest maledictions: it was among the Jews in our Lord's time a day of solemn religious assembling, and was so observed by him; when changed to the first day of the week, the day on which the first Christians assembled, it was called by way of eminence 'the Lord's day'; and we have inspired authority to say, that both under the Old and New Testament dispensations, it is used as an expressive type of the heavenly and eternal rest."

Oxford, N. C.

Christian Union from a Baptist Stand-point.

BY T. H. PRITCHARD, D D.

Dr. J. H. Boyd, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Charlotte, having invited the representatives of the Methodist, Lutheran, Episcopal and Baptist churches to present from his own pulpit the subject of Christian Union, as viewed from their respective standpoints, Dr. W. S. Creasy preached the first sermon, representing the Methodist church; the second discourse of the series was delivered by Dr. T. H. Pritchard, on the evening of the 17th of February, before a large audience composed of many of the different congregations of the city. It elicited a great deal of interest, and with the hope of doing good in the cause of truth, is published.

The author acknowledges his indebtedness to his friends, Drs. Armitage, Boardman and the Rev. E. J. Forester of Greenwood, S. C.

In accepting the invitation to stand in this pulpit to night and preach on the subject of Christian Unity, from a Baptist standpoint, I feel that I occupy a position of peculiar delicacy. I am a Baptist minister, and, as such, represent a Baptist church, which differs from all Pedobaptist churches on more points, and, perhaps, more material points than Pedobaptist churches differ among themselves; hence, the difficulty of meeting the requirements of the occasion with a wise discretion. I am invited to feel at home, to speak with the same candor and freedom that I would, were I in my own pulpit. I hope I am incapable of saying anything here or elsewhere that would justly wound the feelings of one of God's children, and I should despise myself were I to abuse the courtesies of this occasion consecrated to Christian fellowship, by the utterance of an unchristian or uncharitable sentiment. In explaining the relations of the Baptists to Christian Union, it will be necessary that I shall consider some of the distinctive principles of the denomination, and to make myself fully understood, I shall be obliged to do so with much plainness of speech, but this I shall endeavor to do, as far as I may be able, without reflecting on the opinions of those who differ from us. With the understanding, then, that no offence is to be given or taken, I proceed to discharge the duty assigned me, announcing as my text:

John xvii, 20, 21—"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also, that shall believe in me through their word; that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

1. Is Christian Union desirable?

I answer, inexpressibly so. The peace of Zion demands it; the happiness of Christians requires it; the conversion of the world is involved in it; God's glory will be attained by it, and in no other way may Christ's sacerdotal prayer be fulfilled but by the union of all his people of every creed, sect and denomination. I think I can truly say that I yield to no man in my earnest desire and fervent prayer for this consummation so devoutly to be wished.

(a) But what is Christian Union? Men entertain different views as to what constitutes Christian Union. The idea of some is that it consists in pleasant and peaceful relations between the different denominations of a community; that each church pursue its own way, do its own work, and try to serve the Lord with feelings of fraternal regard and good fellowship towards all other Christian communions. If that be the true idea of Christian Union, then I am glad to say we have it in most beautiful manifestation in Charlotte at this very time. I have never known a community in which there was a more cordial brotherly love existing between the pastors, or a higher degree of hearty Christian regard among the laymen of the churches as may be found in this good little city. But is this happy state of feeling lovely as it is, the union that Christ prayed for when he asked that they all might be one, even as he and the Father were one? I fear not.

(b) There are others who seem to think that when Christians of different churches worship together, kneel on the same floor, sing the same hymns, and listen to the same sermon, there we may find Christian Union. Well, brethren, if this be the end sought, we have attained it in Charlotte, also, for during the week of prayer, and on many other occasions we close the doors of our respective churches and gather together to worship our common Father in one place, and yet, we are here to-night seeking how to promote Christian Union among the churches.

(c) Still, a far larger class of good men think that Christian Union would be attained if all the Christian churches would come together around the table of the Lord and commune together. The Rev. Dr. John Chambers, whom I used to hear preach in Philadelphia thirty years ago, once said, "The world cannot be converted till the church is united, and the church cannot be united till the Baptists renounce close communion." Let us look at this matter carefully, and, if we can, with minds free from prejudice.

I ask, in the first place, is not the term commonly applied to the last supper, "communion," a misnomer? Is the communion table made in the Scriptures, in any proper sense, a test of Christian fellowship? The fact is, the Bible precisely defines the purport of the Lord's Supper. It was instituted for one thing and that only. Now what was that thing? To show your love for one another? Did Christ say that? Not at all. To manifest Christian union among professors of religion? Not so. To show Christ himself as the Son of God born in a manger, healing in the temple, agonizing in the garden? No, my brethren, not even that. To show Christ in one single act of his work of mediation—his death. And, so far as I know, all articles of faith, creeds and Catechisms of every church hold and teach that this ordinance is to be observed in remembrance of Christ, and to show forth his death till he come. It is never spoken of in the Bible as a test of communion among Christians.

Again, if it is to be considered as a test of fellowship, why were there only twelve present when it was instituted? There were hundreds of faithful disciples of Christ then in the world; why were they not there? And why was Judas there? And why was there more Christian fellowship between John and Judas than there was between John and Mary? I repeat that the Supper was not regarded as a test of fellowship in the day of our Saviour.

Now, then, take another view of the subject. Here are two denominations in this country who are Baptists so far as the mode and subjects of baptism are concerned—the Free Will Baptists and the Disciples, or Campbellites. Both of these churches are open communion, and yet I venture to say to day that there is a closer fellowship between the Regular Baptists and the Pedobaptist churches than between these two denominations and the Pedobaptist churches. And go over to England, more than half of the Baptists there are open communionists, who took the position of Robert Hall, that any man may commune who claims to be a Christian, whether he has been baptized or not. Are the Baptists and Pedobaptists of England united? Not at all. Some years ago, the open communion Baptist, Mr. Spurgeon, preached a sermon against the baptismal regeneration of infants, and the consequence was the bitterest war was waged against him by the Christian people of Great Britain that has befallen any London pastor in a hundred years.

There is still another fact to be considered in this connection: at the World's Missionary Conference, held in London in 1888, the closing service of that great meeting of 1,800 delegates was the observance of the Lord's Supper. I was there, and could not in conscience partake. So too, when there is a meeting of the World's Evangelical Alliance, there is always a celebration of the Lord's Supper. Does that serve to secure organic union of the churches participating? Not that we have been able thus far to perceive.

Will you pardon me for dwelling a moment or two longer on this question of communion? You know, as well as I do, that this is regarded as the especially ugly feature of the Baptist faith; that it gives rise to more prejudice and subjects us to the charge of illiberal and even bigotry more than anything else, and yet I am satisfied that this prejudice is most unjust. I don't believe that the good people of Charlotte wish to do the Baptist injustice, and I pray you to listen to me, with a candid mind and kind heart, as I shall seek to set ourselves right before you.

First, I wish to say that I know of only two denominations of Christians in the world who are strictly open communion:—one of these are the Free-Will Baptists of America, and the other the Regular Baptists of England. Neither of these churches require baptism of any kind as a prerequisite to communion. The various denominations of this country do, and are hence no more open communion than we are. The standards of doctrine of all the different churches around us require, as do the Scriptures, that one shall be baptized before he communes, and would not any minister who should publicly invite unbaptized persons to the Lord's table be disciplined by the proper authorities? I do most earnestly contend that we occupy the same position with other churches. There is not a hair's breadth of difference between us on this point. The issue, then, is really, not one of communion, but baptism. If we are right on baptism, we are bound to be right on communion. We hold that nothing is Scriptural baptism but immersion, and hence, consistency inexorably demands that we shall commune only with those who have been properly baptized. It is not our table, else, we would gladly invite all whom we believe to be Christians to unite with us in this ordinance, but it is the Lord's table, and when he requires that Scriptural baptism shall precede communion, we cannot go beyond his instructions. I repeat with emphasis, that it is not that we do not hold the members of other churches to be Christians; not that we do not esteem them for their works of faith and labors of love; not that we would not profoundly rejoice if we could all see eye to eye and face to face, and speak the same thing, and thus form a united army of the sacramental hosts of God's elect, but because the great principle of respect for God's holy Word compels us to assume this position. It is not fair, therefore, to ring the changes on close communion as the great barrier to Christian Union and make Baptist "sinners above all that dwell in Jerusalem." I can respect the man who sincerely attempts to show that our baptism is not Scriptural, and meets us in a fair, square and manly way upon the real differences between us, namely, what is Bible baptism, and who are the proper subjects of it, but when any man tries to create a false issue, and charges me with bigotry with regard to the Lord's Supper, when he knows that my position is the same as his own, I must say that my opinion of his fair mindedness is discounted heavily. To all who may be members of other communions here to night, I commend the position of Dr. John Hall, perhaps the foremost preacher of the Presbyterians in the United States, and one of the greatest names in the ministry of the whole world. This good man says: "If I believed with the Baptists that none are baptized but those who are immersed on a profession of faith, then I should, with them, refuse to commune with any others. From this whole discussion, it seems to me clear that strict communion is not a barrier to Christian unity; on the contrary, the facts of history go to prove that if close communion were annihilated forever, so long as there were a people in the world who held the principles of the Baptists, there could be no organic union between them and Pedobaptist churches."

(d) I ask, in the fourth place, does Christian Union mean the organic unification of all sects and churches, having the same creed, the same polity and the same ordinances? Beyond all question, this is the prayer of many of the noblest of God's children now living. And yet I fear, beautiful as is the vision, it will never be realized; certainly, I do not hope to see the consummation of this dream in my day.

For many years, the Christian world has been agitated by the discussion of this idea, and not a few plans have been projected as a basis of union. The Pope of Rome has proposed a scheme; the Bench of Bishops of the Episcopal Church of America has done the same, and so have the Disciples. When the Evangelical Alliance met in Geneva in 1891, my very distinguished friend, Dr. Geo. Dana Boardman, a Baptist pastor of Philadelphia, presented the following "irenicon," as he is pleased to style it, as a basis of union:

"The coming church must have, of course, a common, supreme standard of authority. Can there be any common supreme authority but the Bible itself? In agreeing to this, no intelligent Christian makes any compromise. Again, this coming church must have some sort of creed—a creed that shall be at once simple, profound, comprehensive. Can there be any creed more simple, profound and comprehensive than that which the Master himself has given in his test of discipleship, 'If any man would be my disciple, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me.' Again, the coming church must have some kind of organization. Can there be any better organization than a flexible one, adjusting itself to passing environments, here in Italy, there in America; now in the nineteenth, hereafter in the twentyninth century? Again, this coming church must have some form of admission; can there be any better mode of admission than the rite of baptism, a rite which, as all ripest scholars of all denominations admit, originally meant immersion? In agreeing to this, no one makes any compromise. Again, the coming church must have some form of government. Can there be any better form of government than the Presbyterian—a form which is natural to all executive bodies. In agreeing to this, no one makes any compromise. Again, this coming church must have some kind of headship; for all living things tend to some kind of presidency or co ordinating center. Can there be any form of headship more historic or decorous than the Episcopal? In agreeing to this, no one makes any compromise. Again, this coming church must have some method of working—a method which shall be at once systematic, co-operative and effective. Can there be any method more systematic, co-operative, or effective than the Methodist Discipline? In agreeing to this, no one makes any compromise. Again, this coming church must have some kind of [illegible]

THE FIGURES—HOW WE STAND.

The fiscal year of the Baptist State Convention begins and ends with the first day of December.

The facts, in the contributions of the churches, for the first three and a half months of last year compared with the facts for the same time in this year show the necessity for enlarged contributions. We give, therefore, the contributions for the various objects, as acknowledged by the Treasurer, for the first three and a half months in each of these years.

From December 1st, 1893, to March 15th, 1894, the Treasurer acknowledged for

State Missions	$1,220.69
Foreign Missions	1,010.43
Home Missions	399.29
Education	537.96
Orphanage	286 84
Ministers' Relief	134 54
Total	$3,589.75

From December 1st, 1894, to March 13th, 1895, the Treasurer has acknowledged for

State Missions	$ 619.18
Foreign Missions	780.18
Home Missions	584 78
Education	418 97
Orphanage	291.32
Ministers' Relief	133.27
Total	$ 2,536 38

Last year there was a special effort to secure, during the first ninety days, five thousand dollars for a debt on our Board of Missions and Sunday-schools. This effort enlarged the amount for State Missions; but in no way diminished the amounts for the other objects. On the contrary, it seems to have helped every other object.

This year the churches, mission societies, and Sunday-schools, throughout the State, especialy in the country, on account of the bad weather in January and February, have had few opportunities to meet.

The fiscal year of the Southern Baptist Convention will close the last day of April. There are now only six weeks in which to bring up our contributions for Home and Foreign Missions. These are the two objects for which collections should be made before the last of April.

If every church, mission society, and Sunday-school in the State could have these two objects before them for the next six weeks, North Carolina would do her part for our Home and Foreign Mission Board.

Now is the time, for each and every one, to do for these objects the largest possible things.

Some individuals could give $50, some $25, some $10, and hundreds could give $5, and thousands could each give $1. Send all collections to J. D. Boushall promptly.

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

If a regularly ordained minister of a Pedobaptist denomination, who has been immersed, and does not believe in infant sprinkling or adult sprinkling, should ask for admission into a Baptist church, would he have to be immersed again and ordained by a Baptist presbytery before he could enter the pastorate of a Baptist church? What would be the requirements before he could enter the Baptist pastorate? PASTOR.

There is quite a diversity of views respecting the question above stated. Many churches in the North, some in the South, accept the immersion of Pedobaptist bodies. It is a matter for the individual church, to which the immersed Pedobaptist offers himself for membership, to decide for itself; for no matter how much we may regret the fact, there is a divergence of opinion on this subject. In our own judgment, re-immersion is always the safest and most satisfactory course; and especially in the case of a Pedobaptist minister, who proposes to continue preaching after becoming a Baptist. If he should not receive regular baptism by the authority of a Baptist church, his ministry might be hampered and his influence impaired with many Baptists.

As to the second query, we should advise the usual steps taken in setting a brother apart for the ministry. Let him, after his reception into the church, be examined by a presbytery, and if he is approved, re-ordained.

We will publish next week "Bible Translation in China, and the Controversy About Baptism," by Rev. G. W. Greene. It deals with the recent charges of the Examiner against Bro. Greene, and puts the entire matter in a clearer and a better light. Bro. Greene is still a Baptist.

CATHOLICISM IN PROTESTANT CHURCHES.

We have seen that Popery fully developed is paganism in its most revolting and diabolical form. It is no factor in the Christian system, but an untiring and deadly foe to spiritual religion. It has not hesitated to employ flattery and falsehood, bribery and perjury, fire and sword, anathema and inquisition, to attain its selfish ends. It is the religion of blood. It is the power of darkness. Its dogmas are the "doctrines of devils." Would you know what God thinks of this system, which has put the pope in the place of his Son? Then look out on the nations that serve this man of sin, and note their rank among the peoples of the earth. Through the centuries the Roman pontiff has been blessing Italy, France, Spain, Ireland, Mexico, and Cuba; yet these are the most wretched and ungodly countries in Christendom. Napoleon was repeatedly blessed by His Holiness, yet his star went down in gloom. During the late Franco-Prussian war, the Supreme Pontiff not only prayed for the success of the French arms himself, but caused special prayers to be made to that end throughout the Catholic world; yet fearful disaster perched upon the proud banners of France. Thus it would seem that, when the pope blesses, God curses.

From the seething corruption of Rome sprang the Reformation. If Luther and his coadjutors had only cast their lot with the Baptists of their day, and had renounced every doctrine and symbol of the papacy, the movement they inaugurated would have been a stupendous success, whereas it proved to be largely a failure. For the spiritual and Scriptural principles which gave the Reformation a seeming victory, were fully embodied in the creed of the Baptists, while the elements that arrested its progress and blighted its hopes were just those that were received from Rome, and that were repudiated by Baptists. Hence the movement, so auspiciously begun, ended in confusion, proving to be nothing more than Catholicism reformed—Romanism reorganized. The cancer of Popery was trimmed and dressed, but not eradicated. The truth is well put by the late Dr. Wm. Williams: "It is very much to be deplored, that when the Reformation took place, Protestantism did not throw off entirely all the errors of Romanism. Naturally enough, from long association, but very unfortunately, it retained and has continued to retain some of these errors, thereby giving a degree of plausibility to the charge that Protestantism is a 'failure.'"

Let us note some of the more important of these errors, handed down intact from mother Rome to her Pedobaptist daughters.

1. In the year 500 Catholic priests began to dress differently from the laity, shaping their costume, perhaps, after both Jewish and heathen patterns. These vestments, with some of the tinsel ripped off, appear in some churches as the gown, the surplice, the bishop's robe. Thus the Episcopal church has fallen heir to her mother's old clothes, while Methodism has compromised on a beaver and a white cravat, and even not a few Baptists have borrowed from the ecclesiastical wardrobe a clerical coat. O, brethren, let priestly rags alone!

2. Rome has handed down her threefold priesthood of bishops, priests and deacons to her children. Some of these officers may have changed both name and function, but the stamp of the priesthood is upon them, which one proud daughter is not careful to deny, since she travels to Jerusalem by way of Rome to prove her apostolical succession.

3. Centralization of authority is a characteristic of Popery. The power of the priest is great, that of the laity small. The priests are exalted, the people are ignored. The masses are but clay in the hands of the official potter. Rome makes her laws and declares her dogmas in the councils of her priests of many titles, and by these priests she executes them. Here, too, we discover the stamp of Rome on almost all Pedobaptist bodies; for example, the Episcopal Convention, the Presbyterian Synod, the Methodist Conference, are revised editions of Romish Councils. They are legislative bodies, making and changing laws, determining times and seasons, appointing feasts and festivals, some of them adopting entire or in part from the Papacy, Lent, Good Friday, Easter, and Christmas. Rome has her traditions and breviary which largely supplant the Bible, while these denominations have their Prayer Book, Confession of Faith, and Discipline, which do the same thing. Some people seem to lay more stress on the Thirty-nine Articles of Henry VIII. than on the Ten Articles of Moses I.

4. Much of Pedobaptist worship is but an imitation of Popery. Romanism is a religion of show; her priests kneel at altars and in pulpits upon entering the church, her laity bow at certain times, kneel at chancels, give themselves to genuflections; all of which things are aped by many Protestants, who seem not to recognize the handwriting of the papal mother whose they, by ecclesiastical descent, are, and whom they blindly serve. They even borrow Rome's paper prayers and Rome's saints' names for their churches. "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit."

We conclude this theme in the next issue.

BACK TO THE PEOPLE.

The columns of the Recorder were not opened to discussion of the State's policy of appropriating sums of money to institutions of higher education, until men with authority to speak for and against had been permitted to present the reasons for their positions.

After having become convinced that the present policy is neither right nor wise, and being aware that the children of the State need all the money the State can spare, we hesitated to move in the matter because we desired to have removed every doubt of injurious effect on the State-aided institutions before asking for withdrawal of the appropriations. We assured the President of the University three months before the memorable series of articles appeared in these columns that the Recorder should not be a party to any effort to injure or destroy the University, which, we have never hesitated to say, is a very useful and worthy institution. We promised him last December, after the people in many sections had declared against the present policy, that the Recorder would turn about and fight for the University, if he would show that withdrawal of appropriations would cripple his institution. At that time, another phase of the subject coming up, he said, "Some of you who oppose appropriations seem to think that by cutting them off you will get rid of competition. I assure you that I will make such competition as you never saw, if appropriations are withdrawn. I will be forced to it. I will lower our standard, open our doors to whosoever will, and I will canvas this State for students as it has never been canvassed." This does not sound like destruction. It would have been the making of the University. Its friends would have rallied to it, its endowment would have increased, and students able to pay would have been made to pay, while poorer students would have gotten the benefit of the scholarships. It would have come back to the needs of North Carolina and would have been placed in the proper relation to lead the State to higher standards.

In public, however, there was but one argument: "The Baptists are trying to destroy the University; they are jealous; they want more students at Wake Forest." The questions of Right, Wisdom and Expediency were artfully put aside. These methods did not succeed before the people, but March 5th, before the joint committee of the General Assembly, and for sixty days previous, in the lobbies and on the street corners it did succeed. When Dr. Durham addressed the committee he did not anticipate that argument would be utterly ignored, and charges of envy, jealousy, and desire to destroy, be brought out by the advocates of the existing policy. But every speech that was made was based on the false presumptions that, to take away the appropriation will destroy the institution; and, second, Baptists desire to destroy the University. When Dr. Skinner explained that this was entirely out of the question, another speaker, a leading politician of the faith of the dominant political elements, followed him, solemnly declaring that "we cannot destroy the noble old institution," as if that was any one's object. When Bro. Caddell had told the committee that so long as there are men as eloquent as the political leaders (a Populist, a Republican, a Democrat, and a negro) present to speak for the University, that that institution will not want for friends or support, he was followed by one whose only pertinent remark was that he did not want his party implicated in this effort "to tear down the University." And so it went; as fast as advocates of the voluntary system stated their principles and reasons for their faith in them, they were followed by influential political leaders (one of whom took delight in calling himself "a lobby member"), who, entirely ignoring the real question, were doubtless sincere in advising the representatives of their respective parties that it would not be good party policy "to destroy the University." The shame is that intelligent people could be made to believe that we desire in any way to cripple this or any other institution.

The advocates of the voluntary system had the history of the twelve leading institutions of higher education in the land to support their stand; the defenders of State-aid had nothing but sentiment and prejudice to appeal to, which doubtlessly would have been insufficient, but for the fact that they were leading politicians with that unaccountable power over legislators.

Our State contemporaries have charged us time and again with trying to destroy the University. We were never farther from anything; and we believe we can convince our contemporaries and the political leaders, and all who misunderstand us, if they will only give us a chance, as tens of thousands have been convinced. Before the political conventions meet again we believe there will be enough people who believe as we do in any of the parties to effect our principles. This may seem unreasonable; but it is not. We have but one thing to do, and that is, we must show that the adoption of the Volunteer System of Higher Education will not cripple our institutions, but will stimulate their growth and make it possible for them to fill a larger sphere. This has been shown to tens of thousands; it can be shown to all unprejudiced people. And in twenty months we believe men who opposed the "selfish effort to ruin the University" will be standing with us for the Right.

Never in the history of the world has loyalty been needed so much as it is now. Never have there been so many insidious efforts to alienate and undermine; and there never was an effort more insidious than that which writes on its banner "Loyalty to Christ" and proceeds forthwith to foster disloyalty to his churches. It may seem of little importance to some, but tremendous consequences hang on whether we keep young church members in the control of and in thorough sympathy with the churches.

The Baptist Boys' Brigade "movement" is going ahead and soon will be called upon to organize in the South. The call will be for State organizations and for a general organization "auxiliary"—or something else, —to the Southern Baptist Convention.—Western Recorder.

Wait until the B. Y. P. U. A. novelty wears off. The argument will be that Baptist Young People's Unions are good in their way—as is now condescendingly said of churches and Sunday schools and local meetings—"but they are not quite sufficient." And then the new Bible will begin to be written.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

CHARLOTTE

It is better to be in a city than a small town when it snows. The principal streets in Charlotte had been cleared when I reached the city; so my work was done with little or no inconvenience. I found brethren Pritchard and Pruitt ready to help me. While in the city, I was sorry to learn of the continued illness of Mr. J. W. Wadsworth, in whose home I spent the time so pleasantly while at the State Convention. Bro. D. M. Austin is in better health than usual, and besides his work in Lincolnton, he has country churches to which he is now preaching. He is a preacher of unusual power, with a head full of common sense, a style of his own. He will always lead his people along plain paths.

I thought it probable, from all I heard, that members of other denominations might after a while forgive Bro. Pritchard for saying some Sundays ago, that "other things being equal, Baptists ought to do business with Baptists," &c. Perhaps this was such a radical departure, something so new and foreign to the thoughts, teachings and practices of brethren of other denominations, that their resentment must be pardoned.

Bro. Pruitt has recently moved where he will be nearer his work and more accessible to his people. I hope to see in the near future a handsome Baptist church on South Tryon street or thereabouts. If it were there now, it would hasten the time when our denomination shall possess the numbers and influence which coming years will insure.

Charlotte is in many particulars the best town in the State, and the next ten years will put it much further ahead; hence the wisdom of getting a foothold while we may. Two years ago the Recorder had less than thirty subscribers in the "Queen City." Now it has nearly one hundred.

HIGH POINT

caught the snow by a large majority. But the brethren paid me like men and thus enabled me to strike out for home two days ahead of time with enough of the "wherewithal" to make glad the man who pays the printers.

The brethren are much encouraged with their church work, and they have followed the example of the sisters and are much in love with Bro. Weaver the pastor. He exchanged pulpits with Bro. M. A. Adams last Sunday.

REIDSVILLE.

The church at Reidsville is being newly-painted, which will add greatly to the looks of the house. Also, other needed repairs are being made made on the inside.

The brethren here are doing most successful mission work in the country around. A new church will at once be erected four or five miles from the town: the money is already in hand to complete the work. I know of no church in the State whose members are willing to attempt more for the Master, or can accomplish more in proportion to its strength than this church at Reidsville.

Bro. J. R. Kallam is doing mission work in the new Association. The brethren here and at Greensboro are much pleased with the success he is having in this work.

I was at Ephesus church last Sunday. The snow was there too, but it soon passed away, and we had a pretty March day, a fair congregation, and a very beneficial service.

For several years I have made an annual visit to this church about this season, always spending a night with brethren Wm. and J. T. Faulkner. This house has been the home of preachers for the past three quarters of a century, and they let me in on the first floor and treated me just as though I were one also.

Near here is the line which separates North Carolina and Virginia, and there seems to be a sort of friendly rivalry between the neighbors on either side as to which shall be the most obliging. I could not tell, and so I let Virginians have the Recorder on the same terms as I gave it to brethren on the sunny side of the line.

The Association is to be held here in August, and it was intimated that some preparations were already begun.

This is "No Man's Land" so far as schools are concerned, but free to all, and so they are preparing for school men from both sides of the lines, and it would seem from the large number of girls just reaching the school-age that this would be a fine field for cultivation.

Bro. Lamberth has one of the most interesting young people's societies I have seen in the State. And yet some of the most earnest workers in the interest of developing the young people into earnest, intelligent and effective church workers do not so much as know that a B. Y. P. U. A. is in existence. I believe the "years of famine", if such we have had, are coming to a close. The farmers, it is true, have had low prices, yet he has had his supplies and can pay two dollars for his paper with more ease than at any time in the past ten years.

ROXBORO.

I spent a day in Roxboro. Bro. Williams was at his appointment in Virginia. He is doing a fine work both here and in Roxboro. His health is good and the brethren speak in the highest praise of his preaching and his work as pastor of the church. I could not have asked for better help in my work than that I got from Bro. A. R. Foushee. If Bro. W. L., his son, who has a fine preparatory school in Roxboro, could just inherit a due portion of his father's tact in drumming, he would have more students than his house will hold.

The town is in the best condition it has been in for years. A large quantity of tobacco has been sold, and the prices, so tobacco men told me, were good.

Bro. W. W. Kitchen has just completed a handsome residence on a beautiful site near the town.

Bro. C. D. Ray, who for some years did a fine business in Oxford, is now living in Roxboro. His attention to business and his just and fair dealing, is fast gaining the confidence and esteem of all with whom he deals. He does good service in his church and Sunday-school.

Noel Bros. have just completed a handsome brick-house in which the post office is kept and which also furnishes a nice job-office and editorial rooms for editing and publishing of the Courier.

NEW TRIAL OFFER

Our trial offers have been so successful that we propose another. Any new subscriber who sends fifty cents will get the Recorder from March 1st to July 4th, and an Almanac thrown in, if the supply has not exhausted.

Back numbers can be furnished, if desired, as we have about thirty copies of each Recorder since January 9th, to spare.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Enlist for the Regions Beyond.

....Get ready for the Union Meetings.

....Help the Home Board. Help now.

....Pray for the "Regions Beyond," pastors and people!

....Baptists have started a paper in Japan—the Gleaner.

....Rev. J. F. Tuttle of Whiteville has accepted a call to preach at Clarkton also.

....We are glad to hear that Rev. J. E. Hocutt is getting along well with his work at Nashville, N. C.

....The Regions Beyond Roll will be a good thing for the brethren to discuss at the Union Meetings.

....Dr. J. B. Hawthorne of Atlanta will preach the annual sermon before the Northern Baptists at Saratoga in May.

....Pastor White of the First church, Macon, is in the midst of a glorious meeting, says the Christian Index, Georgia.

....Dr. R. H. Graves has a book in press, to be entitled "Forty Years in China." It will be handled by the R. H. Woodward Co., Baltimore.

....Rev. W. F. Watson of Norfolk is aiding Rev. F. H. Martin in a meeting with the latter's congregation at Scottsville, near Portsmouth, Va.

....The average salary of 391 missionaries of our Home Board is $300. Brethren, we certainly ought to see that they get this small sum, at least, promptly.

....Rev. C. H. Murchison of Penelope has been quite sick with pneumonia. We are glad to learn, however, that he is some better.—Hickory Mercury.

....Rev. C. J. F. Anderson sends us sad news of the death, March 3d, of deacon Sidney Weatherspoon of Sanford, one of our cherished friends.

....Bro. Horton's active church, heretofore known as the Third Baptist church of Durham, has become the East Durham Baptist church, which is more appropriate.

....Rev. John Robertson, the Scotch Presbyterian pastor, whose sermon we recently published, has baptized more than two hundred persons lately, many of them Presbyterians.

....The Baptist Courier reports the death of Rev. H. M. Singleton, aged sixty-five years, at Westminster, S. C. He was for twenty years "an honored and useful Baptist preacher."

....Bishop C. B. Galloway of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has returned from a trip around the world, during which he took pains to inspect Methodist missions at many points.

....We learn that the Baptist Chatauqua, or Sunday-school convention will be held at Red Springs this year (in August) if the town raises $150 toward the expenses.—Red Springs Citizen.

....We were very sorry to hear of the losses sustained in the fires at Kinston. We hope all the losers will be enabled to re-establish, and the plucky little city will turn ashes into life and growth.

....Rev. L. R. Pruett writes from Charlotte, March 9th: "The Baptist cause is prospering in Charlotte. We received about fifteen members last Sunday into the fellowship of the two churches."

....The current University Magazine contains a biography of the late Rev. James P. Mason and publishes excellent pictures of him, his wife and daughters. As usual, the Magazine is exceedingly creditable.

....As soon as the weather is favorable, work will begin on our new church at Sanford. The lumber is on the lot. Bro. C. J. F. Anderson is preaching here once a month, and our cause is gaining strength through him.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter baptized ten candidates for church membership at the Fayetteville Street Baptist church Sunday night last. Five of these joined the West End Baptist church and five the Fayetteville St. church.

....Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Goldsboro has been called to the pastorate of the First Baptist church of Asheville. In his work at Goldsboro Bro. Jenkens has fully demonstrated his ability to successfully occupy a large field.

....Mr. Richard J. Bigg, one of Baltimore's successful business men, called to see us Saturday. He was on his way South, had stopped at Wake Forest, where he has a son at college, and he stopped in this city a few hours.

....The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is successfully rooting out the Young People's Christian Endeavor Societies. The novelty has worn off, as, thank God, all novelties will, and they are permitted to live long enough.

....Drs. Morehouse and Morgan of the American Baptist Home Mission Society have been in Atlanta looking after their interests among the negroes, and incidentally conferring with our Board about the Monroe conference work.

....We publish an appeal this week from Rowland, N. C. It is a very important point, which we must hold; but it cannot be held without outside help. Bro. L. Z Hedgpeth will acknowledge in RECORDER receipt of money sent.

....His many friends in North Carolina will be sorry to know that Rev. T. S. Andrews, who graduated from Wake Forest in 1890, is in very poor health in Georgia; his address is Chicamauga. We hope he will be restored to his work.

....Ex Senator Jarvis has been dropped from the Board of Trustees of the University, and T. W. Babb has been added as a member of said Board. See RECORDER of Feb. 26th, 1890, page three, a statement by twelve Baptist preachers.

....Rev. Ephriam Bunch, aged 86 years, died Friday morning, March 1st, his birthday, at 5 o'clock. Rev. A. W. Burfoot preached his funeral Saturday evening, after which he was laid to rest by loving hands. —Fisherman and Farmer, Edenton.

....The Examiner, New York, has arranged to buy out the Christian Inquirer, a paper that was published at a cheaper price than the Examiner, having been established with the express purpose of dividing the field of the Examiner.—The Watchman.

....Messrs. W. C. Newton and I. M. Meekins have been chosen by their respective Societies to represent Wake Forest College in the annual contest at Morehead this year. It is sincerely to be hoped that one or the other of them will get the prize.

....Southern Baptists have one foreign missionary for every 13,000 members of Southern Baptist churches! And yet there is fear that all this great number will not raise the necessary $73,000 by April 30, and send the Board to Washington out of debt.

....No free entertainment this year. We suggest that the brethren begin laying by now for that Washington pay-as-you-go Convention; and, pardon us, churches everywhere, for suggesting that expense ought not to be allowed to keep pastors away this Jubilee year.

....There is more work crying to be done within our denomination in North Carolina than there seems to be workers. In the name of the Captain of our Salvation, brethren, let us work together; and by all means let us all be Baptists—from the ground up, thoroughly and conspicuously.

....Charity and Children of last week reports that "many orphans are in distress." Surely there are too many large-hearted Baptists in North Carolina to let these little ones suffer. Think about it to-day, as you ask a blessing upon a full table in your comfortable home.

....We regret to hear of the death of Rev. G. W. Hill, which occurred at Wooten, N. C., March 2 1. Brother Hill was an able Baptist preacher, who did good work for the Master, and was dearly loved by his brethren and sisters. We will publish an extended sketch of his life.

....Dr. George D. Boardman has become chaplain of the University of Chicago. This same institution has been paying for lectures from Catholic officials. It has long since its lost claim to the name of Baptist, if we may except its close financial relations with Mr. Rockefeller.

....Dr. W. E Hatcher is helping his son, E B., in a meeting in the latter's church at Norfolk. Pastor Wharton is holding one in his own church and expecting his brother, H. M., to come to his aid. Pastor Hall has baptized many since the Broughton meetings at Park Ave. church.

....His North Carolina friends will be glad to read the following from Rev. E. E. Blount, lately of Clyde, written from Cambridge, Md.: "I began work here yesterday as pastor of Cambridge Baptist church. Was kindly received; and hope, by the blessings of God, to see good results."

....Our pastors ought to set a good example by showing more interest in the Union Meetings and thus making them more interesting to the brethren and sisters. Let there be large meetings this time. It has been a long time since the meetings have had that interest which they deserve.

....A large congregation heard Rev. C. M. Billings in the Baptist church last night. His sermon was a splendid one and well delivered. He made a good impression upon those who heard him, as well as those who have met him in the few days he has been in our midst.—Greenville, N. C., Reflector, 8th inst.

....Any subscriber who pays subscription up to Sept. 1, 1895, within the next two weeks, will receive a Baptist Almanac free. Any 50 cents nineteen weeks subscriber will receive a copy of the Almanac free. This is the last offer we shall make on almanacs, as we expect to exhaust our supply right away. Send quick.

....We had the pleasure of hearing an excellent sermon by Rev. Mr. McLeod, at the Baptist church Sunday. The Sunday-school room with its stained glass windows, new pews and artistic finish is a cozy little place of worship. Mrs. T. J. Lathan, Jr. is the organist, and she is a good one.—Washington Gazette

....Rev. B. W. Spilman of Kinston has recovered from his illness. He sent us one of the most suggestive articles that we have seen in a long time last week on Wake Forest, the Seminary and North Carolina. Brother Spilman is going to hold a meeting at Hunting's Quarters in Carteret county, a field that is greatly in need of preaching. The fire at Kinston injured our church slightly.

....Rev. J. N. Stallings closed his year's work at this place Sunday by preaching a most excellent sermon, after which a missionary meeting was conducted. The subject of "Foreign Missions" was discussed, and an essay, read by Miss Jessie Beeker, on the same subject, added much to the interest of the meeting. We are glad to note that Dr. Stallings will remain in the field —Davie Times

....The Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor—which are dying out—will meet in Winston April 26th to effect a State organization. The State Y. M. C. A. will meet at Raleigh March 21—24. Secretary Reynolds and Bro. N. B. Broughton are visiting several points in the State—Reidsville, Charlotte, Winston, Monroe and others—in the Sunday school work which is undenominational.

....There is every reason for friends of temperance to hope for favorable legislation in 1897. There are, at any rate, ten thousand reasons why we all should work and pay for it from now out. We must not only be friends or believers in Temperance, but our influence must be felt. We shall never admit that the influence of the saloon in North Carolina public affairs is stronger than that of the people of Christ. Let every community in Wake county, be represented at the temperance meeting at Raleigh, March 23.

....Rev. G. W. Harmon of Weldon will be assisted in a meeting by Rev. O. L. Stringfield, beginning the 18th inst.; Rev. J. B. Richardson will be aided by Rev. M. A. Adams at Leaksville, beginning the fifth Sunday; Pastor Moore of Monroe will be aided by Evangelist J. T. Jenkins, beginning the third Sunday; Dr. Mundy at Wilson is being aided by Rev. T. J. Shipman of Savannah, Ga.; Evangelist Jenkins has just closed a meeting at Newton; and Bro. Taylor of Warrenton is expecting to have assistance in a meeting shortly.

....The Superintendent of the Oxford Orphan Asylum publishes a column article in the current Orphan's Friend in reply to our request for information concerning the Sunday-school literature of the Asylum. The literature is undenominational, published by the David C. Cook Publishing Company of Chicago: names of editors unknown. We would be glad to publish the entire article, but we have not the space at our disposal; and we have stated all the facts that were in question. We hope to accept the invitation to "come over and spend a Sunday with us, see our children and help us in our work," which latter, we will be pardoned for saying, we have been trying to do for several years. We never have been opposed to or out of sympathy with the work of the institution; but we have and always will contend that the State ought either to run the Asylum or have nothing to do with maintaining it.

....We are grateful to the following brethren for sending us new subscribers last week: A. R. Foushee, Roxboro; A. W. Gilliam, Old Fort; J. O. Alderman (who sends payment for seven) Concord; A. C. Davis, Unionville; J. N. Stallings, who sends five; J. R. Pace, T. H. Pritchard, D. D, and N. A. Pope. We hope to hear from many more as soon as the pastors can lay the trial offer before their congregations. Help us reach 7,000.

....Our church at Rockingham has set a good example by promptly calling a pastor. The Southern Index announces that it has called Rev. Jos. G. Blalock of Granville county. Bro. Blalock graduated from Wake Forest College and is now a member of the graduating class at our Louisville Seminary. He supplied at Tarboro last summer very creditably indeed. We are glad to be sure that another Seminary man will settle in North Carolina.

....Evangelist Oakes has held several meetings in North Carolina; Charlotte, Fayetteville, Kinston and Goldsboro have heard him. It has been stated in the papers that he is a member of the Clarendon St. Baptist church, Boston, of which the late Dr. Gordon was pastor. Information reached us last week that he is an advocate of social equality; and that he is undenominational, having held meetings at Kinston under the auspices of the Disciples and Methodists. He has gotten women to praying in mixed assemblies, and is an open communionist.

....It has been ignorantly said that if B. Y. P. U. A. ism flourished in the South, it would make it easy to raise our mission debt before the Washington Convention. Now, let's see. The B. Y. P. U. A. does flourish in the North, but our Northern brethren are in debt just $482,000, four times as great as our Southern debts. Why do not our Northern brethren call on the B. Y. P. U. A then? Because the B. Y. P. U. A. is itself issuing appeals and putting on high pressure to raise $50,000 "to complete the Founding Fund," whatever that may be. We quote: "An offering be made for the International work in all our churches to complete what is known as the Founding Fund—the $50,000 needed to establish the International body." And again: "The International Union still needs about $24,000 to place it upon a strong working basis." Thus it is clear that the B. Y. P. U. A. not only does not help raise mission debts, but cannot raise money needed for its own purposes; but it does not mind calling on the young church members to give it $50,000, when all the money that the Baptists can spare ought to be given to relieve our mission debts. Oh, yes, indeed, give us a B. Y. P. U. to raise money for our Boards just like they do up North!

....It ill becomes those of his brethren who have contributed nothing to either side of the struggle against the State's ruinous educational policy, to criticise the leader of the opposition as soon as they see that, for a time, he has lost. The same persons would have been first to shout "victory" if he had been successful. We have no desire to conceal the fact that Bro. Durham is human, but we insist that those who have withheld their aid and sympathy from him while he struggled manfully with all his human weaknesses against great odds, should not criticise him. If they had offered advice or assistance, they might have reason to criticise. Bro. Durham has struggled as no man in the State would, has made speeches in thirty counties, written numerous articles, kept up a large correspondence, studied reports, investigated charges, expended money to publish literature, all without reward or hope of reward. Without great faith in his brethren, his cause and his God, any man would have given up long ago. Those who know anything about this effort know that the opposition to the present policy of the State could have succeeded by employing questionable methods; but a clean course is the only one, and while there has been no lack of opportunities for lobbying and bulldozing, there has been no inclination to use them, although a weaker leader might have stooped to them rather than lose. There was never a time when Truth could not afford to wait, rather than be smirched.

....Replying to the BIBLICAL RECORDER, we will simply say that he will find the command to baptize infants on the page next following the one recording the command to immerse. The scholarship which contends that the word "baptize" always means immerse or dip, is obsolete. It is too antiquated to command attention except as an old joke. By the same sort of logic, we might require every candidate for church membership to be dyed, for the word sometimes has that meaning. This controversy is too threadbare to interest our readers, and we promise not to bore them with it. The assertion that the RECORDER teaches that there were Baptists in the days of Abraham and Moses, is based on what we find as the general trend of thought contained in correspondence, &c. If our mode of baptism must be denominated sprinkling, then we must insist that immersion must be called "plunging."—N. C. Christian Advocate. Brethren, there it all is. If the Advocate could make a better defense, to be sure it would "bore" its readers a year or two to do it. Much as we dislike to say so, candor compels us to say that the scholarship of the ripest biblical student of the last fifty years is not obsolete; we have reference to the late Dr. Phillip Schaff (Presbyterian.) Here are his words: "Immersion and not sprinkling, was unquestionably the original form. This is shown by the very meaning of the words used to designate the rite." The Advocate dare not say Phillip Schaff is obsolete. Here is what Jno. Wesley (Methodist) wrote: "Buried with Him—alluding to the ancient manner of baptising by immersion." Is Jno. Wesley obsolete? We confess that we do not know what "correspondence, etc." means. Really, Bro. Advocate, we are sure your readers will not object to having you come out of this "threadbare" controversy with a better showing. Better try again.

....There has just come from the Richmond, Virginia, press a seventy-page tract by Rev. J. F. Love of Suffolk, Va. It is entitled "The Baptist Position," and is in eight chapters as follows: (1) Sentiment Versus Truth; (2) Two Guiding Principles; (3) The Form of Baptism; (4) What the Scholars Say; (5) Devices; (6) Dangerous to Trifle With It; (7) Infant Baptism; (8) Close Communion. Bro. Love, one of our North Carolina boys, for a little while only, it is hoped, loaned to Virginia, has, in this tract, done some good work. Its presentation is original, strong and scriptural. It ought to be in the hands of thousands. It is destined to do great good. It is neatly printed. Sold at ten cents a copy.

....The Charlotte Observer of Saturday published an interesting description of a baptism in the Catholic church of that city. Down in Mexico the priests baptize (that is, they sprinkle and call it baptizing.) cats, dogs, pigs and chickens; and the ceremony is supposed to benefit them by giving them health and ridding them of evil spirits. This Charlotte baptism was scarcely saner: it was a baptism of three new church bells, Bishop Haid performing the ceremony and making an address. After he had named them "St. Peter," "St. Benedict," and "St. Joseph," the bells were rung, and the consecration was complete. The Charlotte people may prepare to see a cat "baptism" in the near future. All this is about as reasonable as infant sprinkling.

Will You Heartily Help?

Two months for a mighty work! Will you help? This has been a year of great blessings on our mission work on the foreign fields. We ought in gratitude to God to do great things for him here at home. We can and ought to press forward and pay off all indebtedness. Let every church and pastor take hold heartily, and we can pay every dollar we owe. Many are doing nobly. Let not the movement fail because you fail. "Other heavy demands" on men or churches prove that they are of some account. God has greatly blessed us as a people, notwithstanding our talk of hard times. We can and ought to come up in this great work which he has committed to us. I have sent a letter to your pastor asking him to present the work to you. I hope you will encourage him.

Let us observe in this month, as each sees best, a day of fasting and prayer; in humiliation, in faith, let us look to God for his blessings. He can, he will help us. We have a plenty with which to honor our Father. Oh let each one of us, with heart of gratitude and love, do our duty. Let us do this and leave unto God the rest.

Your brother in the work,
R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec.

Not Ready Yet.

Columbia Baptist church has been without a pastor since Oct. 1st, 1894, when our worthy and beloved pastor, Rev. Wm. V. Savage, left us. We are sorry such is our lot. Up to this writing we have made no effort to procure a pastor. When we see our way clear to extend a call, we will do so, and give notice of the same in RECORDER.

CHURCH CLERK.
Columbia, N. C., March 6, 1895.

A Collection Requested.

To the Baptist hosts of North Carolina. Dear Brethren:—I know the times are hard and that you are called upon and begged until forbearance almost ceases to be a virtue. But allow me to make one more earnest, beseeching, agonizing beg. The Baptists have organized and gone to work in the town of Rowland, an important point on the Wilson Short Cut R. R. There is a debt upon the church which was assumed by the Robeson Association last fall. But after this debt is paid, the church will need a few hundred dollars to finish the church, put in a baptistery, and get in working order. A small struggling band can not raise this amount.

I appeal to the brethren to help us and ask the pastors and deacons if they will not, on the first Sunday in April, take up a special collection for the work at Rowland and invoke God's blessing upon the same. Brethren, help us, and in less than ten years when the North Carolina Baptist Convention meets in Rowland, you will thank God that you took up a special collection for this work on the first Sunday in April, 1895. I preach here once a month, and if you all know exactly what I know in regard to the situation, you would aid the cause at this place. A small contribution from the churches will carry the work. Forward all contributions to Bro. L. Z Hedgpeth, Rowland, N. C. He will let you hear from him through the columns of our papers.

Fraternally yours,
J. A. SMITH.

Dividends Annually Increasing for 20 Years.

AT THE HEAD OF THE GREAT INSURANCE COMPANIES OF THE COUNTRY.

(From Pastor of Baptist Church)

SALEM, VA.

I took out a policy in the Ætna Life Insurance Company, in 1871 for $3,000, and only regret that it was not for a larger amount. My dividends have been growing annually larger for 20 years, and are now about 40 per cent. of the premium. I regard the Ætna as being at the head of the great insurance companies of this country.

REV. J. B. TAYLOR, D. D.

The "Regions Beyond" Roll.

The following pastors and laymen agree to hold a meeting within the next few months in some destitute place where our doctrines are not preached,—at least, where our denomination is not regularly represented:

Rev. N. S. Jones, ——— place; Rev. C. W. Blackwell, Hyde county; Rev. E. H. Matthews, ———; Rev. R. L. Byrd, Abbottsburg, N. C.; Rev. B. W. Spilman, Kinston, N. C.

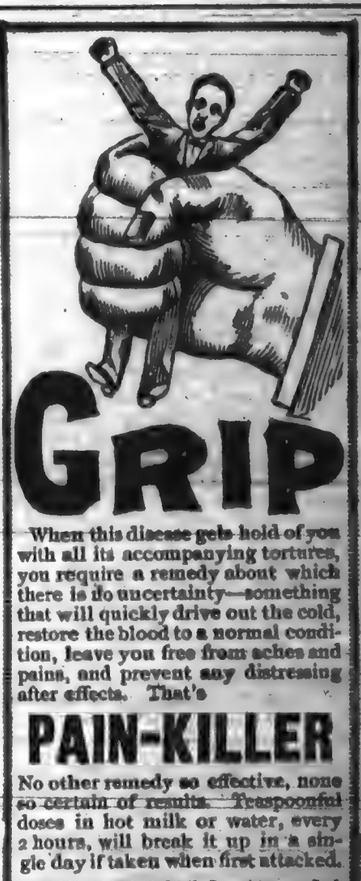
It has been wisely suggested that a pastor, and a layman go together in this great and sacred work, but where this is impossible, let two pastors go together, in order to relieve one another, do more personal work and lead singing.

Destitute places desiring a meeting may make it known by writing to the RECORDER.

Seminary Letter.

Dear Recorder:—The BIBLICAL RECORDER is meat and drink, so far as news is concerned, to the North Carolina boys. It is always a welcome messenger. Since the last Seminary letter, the snow and ice have melted before, as we hope, coming spring. Spring means to every school boy downgrade to vacation, and is especially attractive to men shut up in a large city.

During the past month, we have had more sickness than usual. Bro. J. D. Robertson was confined in bed for more than a week, but is now hard at work.



To-day is "Missionary day," to which we always look with pleasure. On these days we hear letters from our brethren who have "gone far hence" to preach. They are always full of bright experiences and hope. The time is coming when God shall cheer our hearts with a more apparent success of the gospel in China and other heathen countries.

We were especially honored to day in having Dr. Graves of Canton with us. He and Yates were among the first missionaries to China. He gave a most sensible view of the past, present and future work in China. He thinks the war between Japan and China will, under the providences of God, make greater the possibilities of missionary work. He says "hope is the basis of all missionary work. The Gospel is gradually opening the hearts of the people as in the days of Paul. We can't write upon paper the progress of missions in China, but those who are there can find it."

Dr. Bell of the S. B. Sunday school Board also gave us a very interesting talk as to the history of the Board, of which he is Secretary. No doubt but that the Southern Series are ably edited, and should be supported by Southern Baptists.

In our North Carolina meeting we have been thinking as to how we can get more men next year from our State to the Seminary. Young men, if you can possibly get here—come, and you will never regret it.

Very truly, W. H. SLEDGE.

"A Chance to Make Money."

R. H. Woodard Company, of Baltimore, Md., have just published a very fast selling book: "Home of the Bible" by Marion Harland. 10,000 copies were sold in one week. One agent sold fifty-eight in eight days; another twenty-seven in three days. They wish to employ at once agents everywhere to sell this book. Freight is paid and credit given. Send them at once $1.00 for a complete canvassing outfit and full instructions, and you can make money rapidly.

"The RECORDER is growing in interest and power, and I am more and more interested in reading it."—REV. T. P. LIDE, Winnsboro, S. C.

urgy, for worship instinctively seeks to express itself in forms that are at once stately and apposite. Can there be any better liturgy than a flexible one, judiciously blending the stateliness of ancient prescribed forms and the appositeness of modern free adjustment? Again, this coming church must have some term of communion—a term that shall be common to all Christ's people. Can there be any term of communion better than communion with our Lord Jesus Christ, as being the head of his church, or body, and therefore, inter-communion with all Christians, as being the members of his body? In agreeing to this, no one makes any compromise! Once more, this coming church must have some kind of financial support. Can there be any better way of supporting the church than by the voluntary system? In agreeing to this, no one makes any compromise."

A very slight analysis of this scheme will show that it forms no reasonable basis for church union. The creed proposed consists of but one sentence of Scripture: "If any man will be my disciple, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily, and follow me." The organization, he says, must be flexible, adjusting itself to all times and countries, but he gives no special form of organization. Both of these are altogether unsatisfactory conditions on which to form a union. There is nothing said of infant baptism, or baptism as confined to believers, two questions of the gravest importance; then while the Scriptures are laid down as the sole and supreme standard of authority, and it is stated after every proposition that those agreeing to this need make no compromise, forms of church government and modes of worship are presented which many churches do not believe are justified by the Scriptures, as, for instance, the Episcopacy and an elaborate Liturgical Service.

This "irenicon" was presented to the World's Evangelical Alliance, a body organized for the special purpose of promoting Christian Union; it is, I think, the most feasible plan I have yet seen proposed; it has been nearly four years since it was proposed; it has not been adopted, and indeed, no attempt, so far as I have heard, has been made to put it into practice, and in fact, the author himself, in a late publication, says, "Such was my dream three years ago. I have grown wiser since."

There is still another consideration which seems to me to forbid the hope of organic union of the different churches of Christendom. As at present constituted, there can be no organic union hoped for except on the basis of compromise, and this it really seems to me can only be expected by those who are afflicted with "cardiac hypertrophe," or diseased enlargement of the heart. Compromise may be allowed in policy, or method, but compromise is always wrong in matters of principle and duty. "Truth abhors compromise as light abhors darkness." If there is in all this world a right more sacred than all others, it is the right to have one's own convictions of doctrine and duty, as enjoined by God's holy word. If there is, in all this world, a responsibility more sacredly binding than all others, it is the obligation which rests upon every human being to be true, at whatever cost, to those convictions of truth and duty. The man who is willing to surrender his own convictions for the sake of unity is the man whose convictions are to be distrusted. The man who begins by being false to himself and false to his God will end by being true to no one.

To illustrate the absurdity of this theory of compromise: Suppose you say, that for sake of union, you will give up infant baptism if I will surrender immersion as Christian baptism? I believe that immersion and immersion only is Christian baptism; you believe that the Bible teaches the doctrine of infant baptism; dare we sacrifice, for the sake of union, what we believe to be the teachings of God's word? To do so would be to prove ourselves not only recreant to duty, but unworthy of the name of Christians at all. The truth is, my brethren, the union that is brought about by compromise will prove no union whatever; it will only be a weak, sentimental, flabby uniformity, which will soon issue in disruption and disaster.

2. But if organic union may not be attained are we therefore to conclude that there can be no real union among Christians and that the prayer of our Saviour must remain forever unfulfilled?

By no means, for I thank God, that there is a union, a real and blessed union within our reach, by which all true servants of God may become one in Christ Jesus the Lord.

This union is fourfold: first, and most important of all, and indeed comprehending all, is the unity of the Christ life. Every true Christian of whatever name has, as Paul says, "Christ formed in him, the hope of glory." This is what the Saviour means when he says "I in them." And the Apostle, "Christ liveth in me," and still further, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Christ is the center of a great circumference in which all his true followers move, and the nearer they get to the center, which is Christ, the nearer they approach each other, for just in proportion as Christians have the mind and spirit of Christ are they united in Christ—the Christ life in them begets the Christ-love and unites their hearts in union and fellowship.

The second of these blessed unities is the unity of the Spirit. He is the great unifying principle in the body of Christ. He it is who diversifies the gifts, allots the functions and unifies the whole body. Hear how grandly the great Apostle states this fact, in 1 Cor. 12: 4-11: "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are diversities of ministrations, and the same Lord. And there are diversities of workings, but the same God, who worketh all things in all. For to one is given, through the Spirit, the word of wisdom; to another, the word of knowledge, according to the same Spirit; to another, faith in the same Spirit; to another, gifts of healing, in the one Spirit, and to another the working of miracles; and to another, prophecy; and to another, discernings of spirits; to another, diverse kinds of tongues; and to another, the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh the one and same Spirit, dividing to each one severally, even as he will." Thus it is that in the one Spirit, even the Holy Ghost, all the true children of God, of whatever name and diversities of gifts and duties, become united in the one spiritual body of Christ. The Holy Ghost dwelling in the heart of every converted saint is the mysterious but powerful source of this union in Christ.

The third unity I mention is the unity of purpose. To do the will or God; to lead lives of sincere devotion and consistent piety; to seek the conversion of men at home and abroad; in a word, to serve God with conscientious integrity along the lines of duty which his providence points out; this constitutes a real union of his people which is dignified, honorable, and effective.

But there is still a fourth unity, which seems to me, in some respects, more pertinent to the matter we now have in hand than either of the others, and that is what I would call "The Unity of Fellowship." Many persons seem to be unable to mark the difference between Church fellowship and Christian fellowship; they are by no means the same. Church fellowship is limited to the particular denomination to which I may belong, while Christian fellowship comprehends the saints of all sects, creeds and denominations. The spontaneous sentiment of every true child of God finds expression in the world wide benediction of the Apostle, "Grace be with all them that love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity." Every man who loves Christ is my brother, no matter what may be his creed, color, or condition. I feel, as did Commodore Tatnall, who, commanding a man of war, in the China seas, saw some Chinese soldiers getting the better of his Anglo-Saxon brethren, exclaiming, "Blood is thicker than water," he opened his guns upon the enemy and rescued his English brethren. You may have never been under the water—never have been buried by baptism into death, but if you have been washed in the blood of Jesus, "blood is thicker than water," and you are my brother. Some of the dearest friends I have ever had have belonged to other denominations, and I can truly say that I do not know the same number of ministers in my own denomination whom I love with a stronger, or more tender regard than I cherish for the Pedobaptist pastors of this city. Emerson says, "Love is our highest word;"—yes it is the highest word in human philsophy, and it is the highest word, also, in divine philosophy, and here, in the universal brotherhood of all believers, and the universal fatherhood of God, we have a sublime arena for the exhibition of the noblest attribute that ever distinguished God or man.

3. After I shall have submitted a few suggestions as to the best means of promoting Christian union, I will relieve your patience.

"This problem of Christian union may be like the famous problem of squaring the circle, which though incapable of absolute solution, is nevertheless capable of approximations closer and closer."

One way by which we may be brought nearer together is to carefully, candidly and freely compare our views of Christian doctrine. We disagree with each other frequently because we do not understand each other. We entertain unjust and erroneous ideas of the tenets held by each other, and so long as this is the case, there is obliged to be alienation and unkind feeling. Two intimate friends of mine, the one a Presbyterian and the other a Baptist minister, concluded that they would examine the creeds of their different churches, taking up first the points on which they supposed they would agree. Point by point they were compared, and when they got through with these, they were so well pleased with each other, that they did not examine the points of difference between them at all. I rather think it would have been wiser for them, while they were in such a good humor with each other, to have examined the points of doctrine on which they disagreed, perhaps they might have come together on those also. To talk over our views of doctrine, as we are doing here publicly to night, or in private, in a kind and liberal spirit, will go far towards bringing us nearer to each other.

Much good may be done also, in this direction, by the cultivation of an unbiased, unprejudiced and charitable opinion of each other as members of different Christian churches. I have found it one of the most difficult things in the world to judge my fellow men with justice, by reason of the insidious influence of prejudice, and the more important and sacred the matter involved, the more liability is there of the baleful power of prejudice.

We are often much closer together than we imagine. William Jay tells us that one very cloudy morning he was walking under a high cliff in the South of England when he saw approaching him what seemed to be a hideous monster; in some apprehension, he hesitated whether it was safe to proceed for a time. Going closer, he soon discovered that it was a man, and when he got still closer he recognized in what at first he imagined a frightful monster, his own brother John. Might it not be that many of these features of other churches which we have been accustomed to regard as fals and repulsive, as viewed from a distan would become, when we approached the closely, not only divested of their uncomeliness, but actually found to be in accordance with the word of God.

A third means of promoting Christian Union is by inducing the different churches to work together for the Lord, when it can be done without sacrifice of principle. They thus come to know each other, they learn to esteem one another; their prejudices are melted away, and they come to love each other as brethren in the Lord. Great advances have been made since I entered the ministry forty years ago, in this direction, which I regard as a most auspicious sign of the times.

But finally, the greatest and best of all the methods of promoting Christian Union is to bring our differences to the Bible, and measure them by God's infallible word; to agree that no matter what the creeds, canons, councils, conferences, conventions, or any other church authorities may say, that we will mutually obey whatever is positive ly enjoined in the New Testament, and insist upon nothing beyond that. Let each man appeal to the Bible only, and he will need to ask for no concessions from his brethren.

I believe with all my heart that the adoption of this principle will do more to unite the churches than all the measures which the ingenuity of man can devise. In a former part of this discourse I said that the [illegible] Rome, the Bench of Bishops of the [illegible]n Episcopal church, and the Disci[illegible]r over ures to the other [illegible]ing union. I failed to state e Southern Baptist Convention had done the same thing, but their "irenicon" may be said to contain but one article, and that was the one I have stated above.

As an interesting fact of history, bearing on the matter in hand, let me give you an extract from the minutes of the Southern Baptist Convention which met in Fort Worth, Texas, in May, 1890:

"By unanimous consent, the Committee on Christian Union reported through its chairman, T. T. Eaton, Kentucky, and the report was adopted as follows.

WHEREAS, The different denominations have lately been giving unusual attention to the subject of Christian Union; and, whereas, it is conceded to be a great desideratum that Christians should agree in all important points of doctrine and polity; and, whereas, there is a standard recognized as authoritative by all Christians—namely, the Bible; therefore

Resolved, By the Southern Baptist Convention representing 1,200,000 communicants, that we recognize the gravity of the problem of bringing different denominations to see alike on important subjects concerning which they now differ, and that we recognize in the teaching of Scripture the only basis on which such agreement is either possible or desirable.

Resolved. That we respectfully propose to the general bodies of our brethren of other denominations to select representative scholars, who shall consider and seek to determine just what is the teaching of the Bible on the leading points of difference of doctrine and polity between the denominations, in the hope that they can, at least, help to a better understanding of the issues involved; and

Resolved, That we heartily favor that the results of the proposed conference of representative scholars be widely published in all denominational papers, so that the Christian public may be thoroughly informed concerning these results, and that progress may be made toward true Christian union.

The committee recommend the adoption of the above resolutions.

T. T. EATON,
H. H. HARRIS,
J. B HAWTHORNE,
T. H. PRITCHARD,
B. H. CARROLL."

This, the only authoritative document which the Baptists of the South have ever issued, presents their attitude towards this important matter of Christian Union in very plain terms.

It has been nearly five years since this overture was made to the Christian world, and the only denomination that has recognized it at all has been the church of the Disciples.

I thank God, brethren, that we are living in an age of happy auguries; the signs of the times are, to some extent, more I think than ever before, prophetic of the period when peace on earth and good will toward men shall reign. The growing catholicity of our times, as indicated by such expressions as these: international arbitration, international congresses for securing a common standard of time, of distance, of money, and of signals, international Sunday-school lessons, the world's week of prayer, the world's evangelical alliance, young men's Christian association, the world-spreading societies of Christian endeavor, king's daughters, and king's sons, the already well-nigh universal recognition of our Sunday as the Sabbath of the world, "the growing disposition to minimize the differences between the churches and maximize the points wherein they agree; in brief, the increasing desire to follow after the things which make for peace, all these and such as these are auspicious of the happy day when Ephraim shall no longer envy Judah, and Judah shall no longer vex Ephraim. Then shall the earth become one Jerusalem, and all days be a perpetual Pentecost; then shall the unity of mankind, lost at Babel, be restored in Christ, and all men shall again be of one speech." Then, indeed, we shall all have one Lord, one faith, and one baptism, and the glory of God shall cover the earth as the waters the sea.

Another Opinion.

Dear Recorder:—I think that possibly "B." of last week's RECORDER was not well informed about the Boatwright matter in connection with Richmond College, when he says [illegible]king of Prof. Boatwright, "He [illegible] of ability as a teacher, but [illegible] say who know him best, he [illegible] limited qualifications for the important position of President of a great Baptist college."

The above paragraph constitutes, possibly, an unintentional but a real reflection upon the wisdom of the Board of Trustees of Richmond College in the election of Prof. Boatwright to the presidency of the Institution, and an unnecessary thrust at a young man of distinguished ability and unspotted character, as was overwhelmingly proven before the high tribunal of the Board of Trustees, when his most zealous opponents and bitter enemies were urged to appear and formally present their causes for complaint, or explain the reasons for their slanderous innuendoes and shrugging shoniders, and not one was found with sufficient data to appear as prosecutor of the noble young man whom they had so outrageously and mercilessly persecuted in the dark. So just was his cause in the estimation of the Ministers' Conference, that they enthusiastically and unanimously adopted resolutions endorsing the action of the Board of Trustees in the selection of Prof. Boatwright to the presidency of the College.

"Those who know him best" say that Prof. Boatwright is easily the most progressive and aggressive educator in the Institution, endowed alike with wonderful intellectual acumen and administrative ability, whose only incompetency for the responsible position consists in the fact that he is a young man and sprung from plebeian stock.

I think I know "B." well enough to know that he would not intentionally wrong any one, and was possibly too easily betrayed into giving publicity to an opinion, formed after an interview with one or more of the men who are not friendly or kindly disposed towards Prof. Boatwright In the interest of truth and justice I have written this. Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Paradoxes of Science.

The water which drowns us, a fluent stream, can be walked upon as ice. The bullet which, when fired from a musket, carries death, will be harmless if ground to dust before being fired. The crystallyzed part of the oil of roses, so graceful in its fragrance—a solid at ordinary temperatures, though readily volatile—is a compound substance, containing exactly the same elements, and in exactly the same proportions, as the gas with which we light our streets. The tea which we daily drink with benefit and pleasure produces palpitations, nervous tremblings, and even paralysis, if taken in excess; yet the peculiar organic agent called theine, to which tea owes its qualities, may be taken by itself (as theine, not as tea) without any appreciable effect.

The water which will allay our burning thirst augments it when congealed into snow, so that it is stated by explorers of the Arctic regions that the natives "prefer enduring the utmost extremity of thirst rather than attempt to remove it by eating snow." Yet if the snow be melted it becomes drinkable water. Nevertheless, although if melted before entering the mouth it assuages thirst like other water, when melted in the mouth it has the opposite effect. To render this paradox more striking, we have only to remember that ice, which melts more slowly in the mouth, is very efficient in allaying thirst.—Blackwood's Magazine.

W. P. Drop, druggist, Springfield, Mass., writes: "Japanese Pile Cure has cured lady seven years afflicted; could not walk half mile in last three years; now walks any distance." Sold by Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C.

A husband was complaining to his wife, who was of a sunshiny disposition.

"Life is a burden," he sighed.

"Yes dear," she answered, "but you know we couldn't exist very well without it."

Then he smiled and took a new hold.

From the fly leaf of D. L. Moody's Bible were copied the following striking, if not exact, definitions of great doctrines:

Justification: Chance of character; new standing before God.

Repentance: Change of mind; new mind about God.

Regeneration: Change of nature; new heart from God.

Conversion: Change of life; new life fof God.

Adoption: Change of family; new relationship toward God.

Sanctification: Change of service: separation unto God.

Glorification: Change of place; new condition with God.—Selected.

"Be not afraid to pray—to pray is right;
Pray if thou canst with hope, but ever pray
Though hope be weak, or sick with long delay,
Pray in the darkness, if there be no light.
Far is the time, remote from human sight,
When war and discord from the earth shall cease,
But every prayer for universal peace
Avails that blessed time to expedite."

SUBJECT FOR MARCH: AFRICA.

Two new narrative leaflets, telling of the work of the Home Board, have been published and will be sent free on application to Miss Fannie E. Heck, Raleigh, N. C.

Bird's-Eye View of Africa.

"When Christians are knocking, God is always opening doors," says Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, the veteran missionary; and unmistakable signs prove that Africa is being opened for the gospel in answer to prayer. First, the backbone of African slave trade is broken. Thirty years ago, in Nyassaland, Dr. Livingstone was made heart sick over the slave caravans that were paraded before him. Though clothed with British consular authority, his efforts to arrest the traffic were unavailing. Arab slave raiders laughed him to scorn. Imagine his reply if he had been told that by 1894 that entire district would be rid of the chrse! Gunboats on Lake Nyassa effectually prevent slave gangs from reaching the Indian Ocean, and the English magistrate, H. H. Johnson, apprehends no more trouble from this source. Tippo Tib, who three years ago commanded two thousand men armed with Winchester rifles, mirabile dictu, has become an anti-slavery man and ordered his countrymen in the Upper Congo to "quit the business."

Four years ago, in the Manyuema country, where ivory was abundant and slave raiding was practised, now the business is checked. The Brussels Treaty has caused its cessation in the Congo Free State. Prof. Drummond thinks that it would be for the good of Central Africa if all the elephants were killed off, as slaves are necessary to transport tusks from thence to the coast; but God in his providence is providing other and better means of transportation. By navigation on the great African rivers, as well as by railroads in process of construction, the productions of the interior will soon reach the seaports. What F. P. Noble of Chicago calls "an African devil's business" will then come to an end.

How about the rum trade? Would that I could predict its decrease as I have in reference to the slave traffic! Those who have not seen with their own eyes this greatest of all curses can form a very inadequate conception of the enormity of the evil and the obstacle it presents to Christianity. When Joseph Thomson, the explorer in Central Africa, saw negroes staggering about, rum drunk, he asked, "Is this the way to teach Africa to stretch out her hands unto God?" I can testify from personal observation that the "white man's grog," poured into Africa bestializes and brutalizes the natives more than their home made intoxicants. When will so-called Christian nations heed the message sent to England by an African chief: "Send us more gospel and less rum."

What must take place ere Africa is evangelized? A gigantic holy war must be waged between Christianity and Islamism and other native religions. Half the continent is now dominated by Mohammedans, while Christians, including members of Abyssinian and Coptic churches, do not exceed seven millions. Evangelistic laborers throughout the continent are reported to be "equal to eighteen men for France, ten for Great Britain, four for England, and one for Massachusetts and Connecticut together." Mohammedan missionaries are finding their way into "darkest Africa." Were it not for that special divine promise which rings in our ears like a clarion, "Ethiopia shall stretch forth her hands unto God," we should indeed despair.—Rev. Josiah Tyler, in Missionary Review.

Announcement

TO THE PEOPLE
TO THE CAROLINAS AND OF THE SOUTHEAST

The Charlotte Observer makes an announcement of more than ordinary interest. By special arrangement with the publishers of that greatest of all reference libraries, The Encyclopædia Britannica, ninth (latest) edition, we are enabled for a short time to place this King of Books within easy reach of every reader. This edition is bound in

28 Royal Octavo Volumes

And is the only complete and unabridged edition of this great work in existence revised to date. That some sort of an Encyclopædia is a necessity, all must acknowledge. That the great BRITANNICA is the very best Encyclopædia, none will deny. Only its great cost—$125 for the Scribner Edition, $200 for the Edinburgh Edition—has prevented its purchase heretofore. At these prices none but the rich could afford to own it. We offer for a limited time to the readers of THE OBSERVER an edition superior even to the costly Edinburgh Edition at the unheard of introductory rate of

TEN CENTS A DAY

For this small outlay you can secure these 28 Royal octavo volumes, complete and unabridged, revised to date. The Britannica itself needs no endorsement. For 119 years it has stood the crowning work of our English language, the noblest work in all literature, the one only adequate representative of the advanced thought and scholarship of the world. It is the only Encyclopædia in which each principal subject is treated by an acknowledged authority upon that subject. No other Encyclopædia has given Ten Thousand Dollars for a single article, nor Six Hundred Dollars a page for written matter. The fact that

$3,000,000

Was expended in its preparation, requiring the labor of 2,000 of the world's greatest scholars, tells the story of its exalted superiority. Over 600 American authors were employed on American subjects and American institutions.

The Edition We Offer

To our readers comprises many features worthy of special mention.

1. A thorough equipment of new maps up to date, costing $30,000 to produce.

2. The American Copyright Articles, re-written to date by eminent American writers. In other respects this Edition is word for word, line for line, page for page, identical with the expensive Edinburgh Edition, costing $8.00 per volume.

3. But the crowning feature of this Edition is its American Additions and Revisions, prepared under the supervision of that widely known Encyclopædic Editor, W. H. DEPUY, D.D., LL. D., assisted by a corps of trained writers, thoroughly revising the entire work to date.

Not only are all Scientific and Historical Subjects brought absolutely up to date, but a vast fund of new information is added, relating to the material, social, industrial and educational progress of the world, together with many thousand New Biographies not in the original Edition nor in any other Encyclopædia.

For a Short Time

This elegant Reference Library will be offered to subscribers of THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER at remarkably low introductory prices, and on terms so easy as to seem almost ludicrous.

There are four styles of binding, and all styles have double-hinged, flexible backs, sewed precisely like an Oxford Teacher's Bible, so that they are durable and convenient. It is an actual fact that this book is more strongly bound than the Edition which is sold for $8.00 per volume.

Upon application we will send you descriptive and prices of the various styles, and you may select any style of binding you choose and have the privilege of paying for it at the rate of 10 cents a day, half the set being delivered to you at once; or, we will deliver the entire set of 28 volumes on payment of $5.00 per month. All charges paid by us to any railroad station in the United States.

THE OBSERVER,
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

SECURE A POSITION.

Wanted; for office work, on salary, in most every county in the south and west, a young lady or gentleman. Those from the country also accepted. Experience not necessary; in fact, prefer beginners at a small salary at first, say to begin, from $30.00 to $50 00 a month.

Chances for rapid promotion good. Must deposit in bank cash, about $100.00. No loan asked; no investment required. It is a salaried and permanent position. (Strictly office work.) The enterprise is strongly endorsed by bankers. Address P. O. Box 433, Nashville, Tenn. (Mention this paper.)

Half Price to Ministers!

Sermons, Addresses and Reminiscences,

BY

Rev. THOS. E. SKINNER, D. D.

In order that every minister in North Carolina may have an opportunity to place this valuable and interesting book in his library, and for the purpose of introducing it, we offer it to ministers, by mail, postpaid, for sixty five cents (65).

Fifty cents for the book and fifteen cents for postage.

The book contains 450 pages of clear print, on good paper, and is handsomely bound in cloth. The regular price of the book is $1.15, by mail, and is considered very cheap at that.

Our offer to ministers is to send the book by mail for 65 cents. We shall keep this offer open for a limited time. If you want the book, send your order at once. Address,

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON,

Publishers, Raleigh, N. C.

Read What is Said of the Book.

Dr. Charles E. Taylor says: "A most valuable contribution to the religious literature of North Carolina. If the book shall have the wide circulation which it deserves, I believe it will be used of God for the awakening and conversion of very many."

Dr. J. B Gambrell, President of Mercer University, Georgia, has the following to say in "The Index": "The whole book is juicy, soulful and helpful toward a wider range of things and a better spiritual life. It is a good Sunday book. The Sermons deal with matters of life and death, and the Addresses touch on many practical topics, while the Reminiscences, especially of the author's conversion and spiritual life, are rich with a heavenly flavor."

"Every pastor and especially every young Baptist preacher in North Carolina, ought to have a copy of Dr. Skinner's book. If I had the means it would be a great pleasure to me to send a copy of it to every young preacher in the State."—C. Durham.

General Assembly.

The following bills or resolutions passed third reading in the Senate last week:

Monday—resolution to pay funeral expenses of the late Senator Edward L. Franck, $151 65; bill to abolish office of trustees of A. and M. College and make members of the Board of Agriculture trustees of that institution, and providing that the President of the Farmers' Alliance shall be a member; to reduce appropriation to State Guard from $350 to $150 for each company; salary of Adjutant General from $600 to $300; to create office of lumber inspector, salary not to be more than $3,000. (This bill levies a tax of ten cents a hundred feet on all round logs.) Bill to abolish criminal court of New Hanover and Mecklenburg counties, and establishing a new court having jurisdiction in several counties. (Senator Cook of Warren has been chosen Judge.) Bill to provide a dispensary for the sale of liquor at Hickory. (A similar bill has been passed for Waynesville).

Tuesday—What is known as the oyster bill; bill to provide for county adoption of public school books.

Wednesday—Bill providing for redemption of land within two years after its sale under execution; to elect nine additional directors of the Penitentiary and to abolish office of Superintendent.

Thursday—Bill providing for completion of the Colonial records; resolution to investigate Fish Commission; to reduce salary of Superintendent of the Penitentiary to $3,000; to establish Code Commission, providing for three commissioners at $1,500 each and a clerk at $750. (This bill will probably be stopped in the House (

Friday—in revision of the revenue act the levy for public schools was increased from 16 to 18 cents, the pension tax from 2½ to to 3¼ cents, the tax on personal property from 22 to 24 cents on the $100 worth, to tax liquor selling druggists as saloon-keepers, and to tax liquor-selling clubs; to abolish free tuition at the University; to appropriate $5,000 a year extra for two years to the State "Normal and Industrial" school; to spend $1,000 to complete Governor's Mansion.

Saturday—in the revenue act, tax on cigarettes reduced from ten to five cents a thousand, and tax on plug tobacco to half a cent a pound. S Otho Wilson was elected Railroad Commissioner to succeed Hon. Thos. W. Mason. Bill passed third reading to incorporate N C Prison Association; to appropriate $15 500 to State College of A & M. College at Raleigh.

The following bills or resolutions passed 3rd reading in the House:

Monday—About fifty of local effect only, including one to pay funeral expenses of a late Senator. Amendment requiring B. and L. Associations to list for taxation shares held by stockholders.

Tuesday—the county government bill; the bill for election of justices of the peace by the people; bill to increase appropriation to colored (Baptist) orphanage at Oxford from $1,500 to $3 000.

Wednesday—several minor bills, among them one "to print sketches of N. C. regiments." In revising the revenue act an amendment to tax lawyers ten dollars a year passed. The public printing was voted to Stewart of Winston.

Thursday—appropriating $60,000 a year for Asylum for Insane at Raleigh; $100,000 a year for Asylum for Insane at Morganton. Contested election case of Morphew against Crawford was decided for latter, Person and Garrett against Howard and Baker, in favor of the last named gentlemen.

Friday—Bill to appropriate $18,750 for the "Industrial and Normal School" at Greensboro passed, the following gentlemen voting against it: Messrs. Bean, Bryan, Buchanan, Campbell, Crawford, Crummel, Drew, Gentry, Hopkins, Huffman, Lindsay, Mitchell, Phillips of Randolph, Smith of Caswell, Turner of Mitchell, Turner of Polk, Wicker and Whitener. The bill to abolish Mecklenburg and New Hanover criminal courts and set up another covering several counties passed third reading, as did also the bill to give $10,000 for Confederate monument, which being evidently a bid to purchase the votes of the Confederate veterans, should not be accepted; and a bill permitting any county to levy a tax of 15 cents on the $100, 45 cents on the poll, and obtain 25 convicts from the State to work county roads, the county to pay expenses of guards and feed convicts.

Saturday—Contested election of Parker against Peebles was decided for the latter. Bill passed to appropriate $8,500 to Soldiers' Home. The election by the Senate of Otho Wilson for R. R. Commissioner and C. A. Cook of Warrenton for Judge of the Eastern Criminal Court was concurred in.

Literary.

From S. S. McClure, Limited, 30 Lafayette Place, New York: Mr. Gladstone has just written an article on "The Lord's Day," wherein he considers, with the fervor of conviction and the breadth of learning for which he is famous, the grounds for keeping as the Christian Sabbath the first instead of the seventh day of the week, and the proper measure and spirit of Christian Sabbath observance. The article will appear in McClure's Magazine for March, along with a series of portraits of Gladstone covering a period of eighty years and showing him at every important epoch of his life.

Readers of Marion Crawford's novel "Casa Braccio," now appearing in the Century, will be interested in knowing that the story, as printed so far, is true, except that the scene of the actual occurence was in South America instead of in Italy. The nun, who really escaped from a Carmelite convent with a Scotch surgeon, was the neice of a bishop. A skeleton was placed in her bed, when it was fired, instead of a body, as in Mr. Crawford's story. After much suffering the surgeon and his wife reached the sea coast, and were taken aboard an English vessel, whence they sailed to Scotland and lived for many years in Edinburg. The part of Mr. Crawford's story still to appear portraying the punishment visited upon the pair for their sin, is imaginary.

The Treasury of Religous Thought for March opens with an impressive sermon on the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, preached by Rev. Oliver C. Miller, of the Lutheran Church, Roanoke, Va. This is the leading thought of the number, recognized as such in the editorial, and well followed up by a sermon on An Earnest Life, by Rev. Gerard B F. Hallock, of Rochester. There are a large number of sketches of sermons, and leading thoughts from sermons, all of recent delivery, and bringing one into quick understanding of the pulpit of our day. Two Decades of Baptist Progress by Rev. John H. Mason, of New Haven, continues the series on recent Church Progress begun in February. Prof. George H. Schodde, of Columbus, has an interesting paper on The Israelites and the Gospel. Annual subscription, $2 50. Clergymen, $2 Single copies, 25 cents E. B Treat, Publisher, 5 Cooper Union, New York.

The Annals of the American Academy for March contains four principal papers as follows: "Elected or Appointed Officials," by Hon. J. G. Bourinot, Clerk of the Canadian House of Commons; "Pacific Railway Debts," by R. T. Colburn, Esq., of Elizabeth, N. J; "Terminology and the Sociological Conference," by Professor H H. Powers, of Smith College, and "A neglected Socialist," by Dr. F C. Clark, of Berlin. Two shorter papers are contributed by Professor A. W. Small, of the University of Chicago, and Professor F. H. Giddings, of Columbia College. The first is on the "Organic Concept of Society," and the second on "Sociology and the Abstract Sciences." This number also contains a report of the last annual meeting of the American Economic Association and the American Historical Association, as well as an account of the formation of the new Political Science Association of the Central States. In addition to these papers there are as usual Personal Notes, Book Reviews and Notes, Notes on Municipal Government and Sociological Notes. Philadelphia, $1 00, $5 00 per year.

Sick Stomach for Forty Years Cured by the Electropoise.

RENSTON, N. C., Feb. 13th, 1895.

Dear Sir:—I am well pleased with the Electropoise, it having done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I had not known what it was to be free from sick stomach in forty years; but since using the Electropoise I have had little symptom of it, which alone is well worth the price of it. I loaned it to a neighbor, who was raging with neuralgia of the face, and he found great relief. Very truly,

MRS. M. A. TUCKER.

A Good Season in Colorado.

Dear Brethren of my dear old State:—It has been a long time since I gave you any items concerning my work for the Master.

I resigned my work with the Cherokee Indians in Indian Territory for last winter. For over seven years I toiled on that hard field under the auspices of the American Baptist Home Mission Society.

Now I am back on my old field where I labored before I went to Indian Territory. I came here about two months ago, and commenced special meetings, and the meetings have gone on all the time since with the exception of one week, which was spent at the public school-house near Bro. W. S. Kimsey's. There is no telling when the meetings will close. Upwards of fifty have professed conversion already. The town is shaken as never before. Satan tried to rally his forces at the dance hall last night, but he failed to get a quorum and adjourned, and I hope it will be "sine die." It has been a long time since the Lord's people here have been blessed with a gracious revival of divine power. Some have been approved for baptism, and no doubt many others will follow. We have a great work now before us. The precious gospel seeds have been sown, and they have germinated and brought forth fruit to the glory of God, but now we expect to have a great work to do in trying to instruct and build up these precious souls in the doctrines and practices of the gospel.

I sometimes feel like I want to come back to my dear old North State to finish up my work for the Master.

Brethren, pray for us.

Yours in gospel bonds,

C. M. GREEN.

SPIVEY—WARD—On Sunday, Feb. 10th, 1895, at the residence of the bride's father, Glidon, N. C., by W. C. Ward, J. P., Mr. W. H. Spivey, of the firm of Ward & Spivey, Ryland, N. C., and Miss Cornelia A Ward.

DIED.

MILLS—Departed this life on March 3d, 1895, Eula, wife of P. M. Mills and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Scott. Her illness was long and painful, but she peacefully passed away, and seemed to have no fear of death. She was a consistent member of Mt. Pisgah Baptist church, a worker in the Sunday-school, and we will miss her, but will try to console ourselves that she's sweetly resting in heaven. SISTER.

UMSTEAD—Died at her home in Durham county, Jan. 30th, 1895, in the seventy-seventh year of her age, sister Sabrina Umstead, having survived her only brother, Jethro D. Umstead, seven years to a day. Sister Umstead gave her heart to Christ and was baptized more than a half century ago, and her life through all these years was one of faithfulness and piety. She grew old in her Master's service, and her useful life bears testimony that she was ready when the messenger came for her. She was a model Christian, doing faithfully whatever her hands found to do, and now she has gone to reap her reward in that bright world beyond.

H. H. MASHBURN.

WALLER—Rebecca Louisa Waller, nee Veasey, was born in Granville county Jan. 27th, 1859, and died at her home in the same county Jan. 23d, 1895. She professed faith in Christ and was baptized into the fellowship of Concord Baptist church in her youth. Her Christian life was one worthy of emulation for its purity and religious beauty. She delighted in the services of her church, and her pastor always found her an earnest friend and helper. At the time of her death she was one of the most faithful members of Flat River Union church, of which her husband is a deacon.

To the bereaved husband and five sorrowing children we would say that she has only gone on to possess that inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for all the faithful, where, through grace, they may join her and be forever with the Lord in glory.

H. H. MASHBURN.

LILES—Mrs. E. E. Liles, wife of H. S. Liles, died Feb. 8d, 1895, at her home in Marven, Anson county, in her forty-third year. She was born in Anson county, but her parents, W. J. and Ellen Haske, moved to Union county when she was a small child. She joined the Baptist church at Meadow Branch when quite young, and lived a most exemplary Christian life. In many respects she was a remarkable woman. She was noted for her piety, and was never heard speaking ill of any one, never fretted nor grumbled, and took life's rugged ways without a murmur.

Dying suddenly with heart disease, she could not say farewell to her loved ones, but her humble, Christ-like life leaves the assurance that all is well with her soul. Her devoted husband and seven children can see her no more on earth, but can meet her in the sweet by and by. May all emulate the example that a mother in Israel has left behind. Her mortal remains were laid to rest by tender hands who can say:

"Asleep in Jesus! peaceful rest,
Whose waking is supremely blest."

Jonesboro, N. C. S. N. L.

McDADE—About nine miles north of Raleigh, N. C., on February 26th, 1895, at the advanced age of seventy-five years, after a sickness of only three days, John McDade passed out of this life, leaving a wife, an affectionate son, a devoted daughter, and one brother, the aged and much respected, W. R. McDade, and a large number of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Brother McDade had been for many years a consistent and faithful member of the Baptist church, and has now entered into the joys that are reserved for a "well done, thou good and faithful servant." The deceased was a man of the strictest integrity, upright and just in all his dealings with his fellowmen, and esteemed and respected by all who knew him. No man said an unkind thing about John McDade. His modest and retiring disposition, his Christian life, and his kind treatment, commanded and received the respect and confidence of all with whom he came in contact. A loving husband, a kind father, a faithful friend, a true Christian and useful citizen has passed from the scenes of this lower to the upper, higher and infinitely more glorious and better state of existence.

To the heart-stricken widow, weeping children, and mourning relatives and friends: Follow the example of husband, father, and friend, and 'twill not be long ere there will be a re-union of family ties and a renewal of companionships in the bright and blissful beyond, "where the surges cease to roll," and where ties are not severed by death's cruel mockings.

Weep not for the dead, "They are happy now, and ye soon their happiness shall see."

A Minister's Testimony.

DIXON, CALIFORNIA, Jan. 4, 1895.

Having used the Tahoe Kidney Cure, I can testify to its great merit as a remedy for kidney trouble. I obtained almost immediate relief, and I am convinced that it is a really meritorious medicine. My wife was speedily relieved of Leucorrhœa by its use a few doses affording relief. I may add that I know of others in my congregation who have taken the Tahoe Kidney Cure with most gratifying results.

Very truly, (Rev.) S. T. GRAY, Pastor Dixon (Cal.) Baptist church.

He Knows.

To shout a battle cry at the mouth of the cannon is easier than to put our hands on our mouths and be silent because "God did it." If he is silent as to explanations of trying providences, let us be silent in our filial submission. God knows what is best for us; that is enough.

He knows the bitter weary way
The endless strivings day by day—
The souls that weep—the souls that pray
He knows.

He knows! O thought so full of bliss,
For though on earth our joys we miss,
We still can bear it, feeling this:
He knows!

God knows! O heart take up thy cross,
And learn earth's treasures are but dross,
And he will turn to gain our loss:
He knows! He knows!
—Dr. Cuyler.

If I Were You.

If I were you, and went to school,
I'd never break the smallest rule;
And it should be my teacher's joy
To say she had no better boy.
And 'twould be true,
If I were you.

If I were you, I'd always tell
The truth, no matter what befell;
For two things really I despise—
A coward heart, and telling lies.
And you would, too,
If I were you.
—Kind Words.

A Converted Purse.

AN INCIDENT FROM LIFE.

"Certainly. I am grateful to you for asking me. Put me down for twenty-five dollars."

A look of pleased surprise passed over the solicitor's face, succeeded by another of perplexity; for it happened that he knew that his friend had precisely the same salary as he, and that twenty five dollars was a generous fraction of his month's income.

"O that's more than we expect, Frank—and then you can't afford to, I fear," he addeed with the freedom of a comrade.

"O no! Let me tell you how it is, Jack. You know I turned right-about face when I became a Christian, last winter: and I resolved at the start not to enter into a junior partnership with the world, and senior partnership with the church. You knew my habits. I was not an inordinate smoker. Three cigars a day, with a treat to the fellows now and then, cut off, reduced my expenses a hundred dollars a year. Then I had a careless fashion, ruinous to my digestion, adding a bottle of claret, or some fancy, indigestible pudding or cream, at least twice a week to a wholesome lunch. Looked squarely in the face, and given its right name, it was an indulgence of unlawful appetite; so I made seventy-five dollars a year by stopping that. Sunday headaches, too, went at the same time. One day I was looking over my neckties to find some particular color, and I found that I had thirty seven, with at least ten scarf pins. That made me run through my accounts next day—they weren't very well kept, but I guessed as nearly as I could—to see what there was in my wardrobe that would leave me better dressed, from a Christian and artistic point of view, too, for that matter, if I never wore it again; and I am ashamed to say I found a hundred and fifty dollars worth of dry goods on hand that was the price, not of good taste, but of mere caprice. Now I don't propose to submit to a taxation in behalf of my weakness and vices and be niggardly with the church I've promised before God and man to support and increase. There, you have it all! I spent over three hundred a year, you see, in the service of appetite and fashion, for things that made me less a man. I've transferred that mortgage; yes, I can afford easily that twenty five dollars, especially when it is to rescue some other fellow deeper in than I was. Come to think of it, make it thirty! The other five is a thank offering!"—Louise Manning Hodgkins.

You get Strong,

if you're a tired out or "run-down" woman, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And, if you suffer from any "female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it doesn't cure, in every case, your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good" for you to buy? The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. For ulcerations, displacements, bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, and every chronic weakness or irregularity, it's a remedy that surely, and permanently cures.

The Blotted Page.

The writing master entered the class room and passed from one pupil to another to review the task he had set before them.

He paused before the new comer; the page was blotted, scratched and disfigured with the stain of many tears.

"Master," said the boy in trembling accents, "I have labored in vain; my hand is crippled; there is no resemblance between these crooked lines and the model I have endeavored to imitate; but, master, pity me, for I have done my best."

By his side sat his companion. "Behold my page!" he exclaimed. "It is fair and clean, unsullied by a blot, untouched by an ungainly mark. O master, in my wisdom I forbore to incur displeasure. Is not a blank page preferable to the tear-stained, mishapen attempts of a crippled hand that cannot and never will be able to make a fair copy?"

The master threw aside the clean white page without vouchsafing to cast a glance upon it, but he leaned with infinite compassion and tenderness toward the pupil who had done his best; gently he took his hand and guided it over the lines, with the words of love and encouragement—and the humble pupil took courage and rejoiced whilst his idle companion looked upon his fair white page, and saw its brightness overshadowed by the displeasure of the master.—Zion's Herald.

He's Dead at Present.

Julius Cæsar was considered a great man, and so he was. But he had his limitations, and some unknown writer gives a few illustrations: He never rode on a 'bus in his life; he never spoke into a telephone; he never sent a telegram; he never entered a railway train; he never read a newspaper; he never viewed his troops through a field-glass; he never read an advertisement; he never used patent medicine; he never cornered the wheat market, he never crossed the Atlantic, he never was in a machine shop; he never went to a roller skate rink; he never controlled a manufacturing company; he never dictated a letter to a typewriter girl; he never invested in railway stock; he never played a game of billiards; he never saw an electric light; he never listened to a phonograph; he never posted a letter; he never had his photograph taken.—Scientific American.

Encouragement for the Housekeeper of the Future.

The grandchildren of this generation will get more domestic comfort for les money than their grandparents did, and one reason why, will be that they will have a much more accurate notion of what they want and what they are entitled to. Standards of living will be much more definite in America two generations hence. Servants' rights, duties, privileges and wages will all be better defined. Housekeepers will know much more exactly and without need of personal experience, what scale of living their incomes can support. Rents will be lower, and there will be a better notion than now as to what household luxuries and conveniences are really luxuries and conveniences, and what are mere showy impediments to domestic comfort. With a great and growing body of intelligent people anxious to work, and an increasing number anxious to have certain work done for them, the adjustment of the supply of labor to the demand is bound to be perfected. And yet it will be an American adjustment, with somewhat less servility in it than in the English method, and characterized as all other American labor is, by the superior efficiency of the persons employed.—Scribner's Magazine.

Young Mothers

Clean Up the Fields.

If the dead leaves, vines or stumps of last year's crops still remain in fruit yard or garden, no time should be lost before removing them. Cabbage stumps and other trash that cannot be burned should be hauled off to some hole or waste place and there buried or covered with soil.

Formerly it was considered best to plow under the leavings of the last crop to supply humus to the soil. The extraordinary increase of fungi and noxious insects in recent years no longer renders this a safe plan. This trash usually harbors the winter spores or eggs of these noxious pests, and to leave them upon the ground or even turn them under with the plow is ruinous economy. Burn and destroy them before the warm days of spring waken them into activity. The neglect of this work will entail a heavy loss in next season's crop.—Gerald McCarthy, Botanist, N. C. Experiment Station.

AYER'S PILLS ARE EASY TO TAKE.

They Keep the System in Perfect Order

"For years," writes CARRIE E. STOCKWELL, of Chesterfield, N. H., "I was afflicted with an extremely severe pain in the lower part of the chest. The feeling was as if a ton weight was laid on a spot the size of my hand. During the attacks, the perspiration would stand in drops on my face, and it was agony for me to make sufficient effort even to whisper. They came suddenly, at any hour of the day or night, lasting from thirty minutes to ten or twelve hours, leaving as suddenly; but, for several days after, I was quite prostrated and sore. Sometimes the attacks were almost daily, then less frequent. After about four years of this suffering, I was taken down with bilious typhoid fever, and when I began to recover, I had the worst attack of my old trouble I ever experienced. At the first of the fever, my mother gave me Ayer's Pills, my doctor recommending them as being better than anything he could prepare. I continued taking these Pills, and so great was the benefit derived that during nearly thirty years I have had but one attack of my former trouble which yielded readily to the same remedy."

WE WERE genuinely surprised when, a few days after the Assembly organized, we sounded a note of alarm respecting caucuses. We have gotten used to them since.

It seems to us that when a man goes before the people for three months, presumably having lived among them several years, he need not have a caucus to say what he ought to do; at least, there is no reason why he should be expected to go into a secret meeting, opposed to a proposition, and to come out in favor of it, without changing his mind. Representatives of the people ought to be able to think for themselves; and especially when they have their constituents to assist them. A republican form of government is not representative when caucuses dictate, nor is a democratic form democratic.

It is possible to argue that, at times, caucuses are expedient; for instance, when there are so many opinions that a general compromise is necessary. But even these should not permit the interference, not to say dictation, of outsiders. Yet in the caucuses lately held in Raleigh men by no means connected with the Assembly sucessfully worked for not a few measures; and all they had to do was to get the votes of a majority of a caucus, and the others had to come over, willy-nilly. Any one who looks into such a state of affairs will perceive that a clique of a small number of members can effect legislation: instead of a majority of all members being necessary, only a majority of the dominant elements is needed,

The Assembly did not so much as vote on the Trust law question. Only the Senate voted on the anti-saloon bill, and that unsuccessfully; and the real question of appropriations to higher education did not get out of the committee. The votes on the appriation to the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts and the Normal and Industrial School were not fair tests, as their pleas were for necessary buildings and other equipments, which, these being new institutions, it is fair to grant, may be needed.

The school children are poorer for the work of this Legislature. Less money than they have been having, will be left when the large appropriations to other objects (less needy and contributing far less to the common good) have been drawn out. And the Treasury, already $60,000 behind, will probably be a great deal further in arrears when the next Assembly comes from the people, to succeed that which now faces them.

A law was made to let the public printing to the lowest bidder; but when a firm of the wrong political affiliation made the lowest bid, it was given to another firm. This stands out so clearly that he who runs may read.

The six per cent. interest law is the one pledge religiously observed; and it could be kept only by the severest struggle. While we think it is a timely experiment, we do not think its wisdom is unquestionable. Building and Loan Associations were finally protected by a law that enables them to collect principal and interest monthly. A banker can do likewise. Of the other two principal laws of this session, the county government and the election law, we will not express an opinion until we have studied them. We fear the former will deliver some of our counties over to the negroes; the latter seems generally conceded to be just a little better than the former law. It may have been wise to take the selection of school books from the hands of one man, as was charged; but it was unwise to leave so far reaching a matter to the counties. It may have been wise to break the hold of a probable Trust; but it was unwise to expose the parents of the school children to a certain expensive change of books; and inasmuch as the book houses will have to send drummers over the State, selling at retail, when the new law goes into effect, the prices of books will be correspondingly higher. We do not care to defend the former plan, but it is better than the new. A law providing for selection of books by a board of several wide awake and public-spirited men, would have been sufficient.

The Assembly was besieged at the beginning by a scrambling conglommeration of office seekers; in fact, members of the Assembly itself turned out to be office-seekers, and when one seemed anxious to get a bill passed providing for an office, a colleague would confound him with the question, "Are you not a candidate for this office?" It is a pity that the Legislature allowed itself to be turned aside from its work by office seekers and caucuses. Making laws, not making offices to support party servants, is the plain duty of legislators.

When expenses were cut down in one place, they were increased in two. The salary of the superintendent of the penitentiary was reduced $500; two courts were created that will cost more than $50,000. The salary of Railroad Commissioners was cut down to $1,500, to take effect in 1897; the office of lumber inspector was established, at a salary of not more than $2,000 a year. Appropriations to asylums and some of the institutions of higher education were increased. Ten thousand dollars was voted for the Confederate monument, as a peace offering for the Douglass blunder.

It is a pity that expenses were not cut down, so that the free schools might have been left enough money to run at least four months. There is no sadder prospect, nor a more serious one, than that of the thousands of children growing up helplessly into ignorance, their opportunity swept aside by a tide of false patriotism, unwise paternalism and fearful improvidence. Universities, Normal and Industrial Schools and A. and M. Colleges will not lessen the danger, nor to any appreciable degree brighten this prospect. They have not supplied teachers for the common schools, and they never will—at least, never, until the common schools pay a teacher forty dollars a month and run six months. To think of the children of the poor in our State, scarcely clothed, getting only a few weeks schooling, and that of the lowest quality, while their fathers are paying tax (small though it be, but none the less grievous) to educate men and women able to educate themselves, or at least, so far educated that they are qualified for citizenship,—to realize that this is the state of affairs is enough to madden those who are thus imposed on. The chairman of the House committee said to this writer in a brutal way, "the question with me is not what the common schools need, but what I think the University ought to have." He was educated at the University; and the people are paying to educate others who will have the same way of looking upon their childrens' needs. And because the amount paid by each tax payer is small, these smart fellows will tell one that it ought to be paid; and by the same brilliant reasoning they relieve themselves of all sense of obligation to the State; indeed, they sneer at the idea!

The people will have to try again.

A FEW months ago no one dreamed of Chicago, one thousand miles inland, becoming a sea port. To day a company of men is seeking incorporation by the New York State Legislature, with this purpose in view. They have planned to make their way with canals, rivers and lakes, at an estimated cost of $150,000,000. This is a far greater project than the Suez achievement or the Nicaragua enterprise, which latter, we are glad to note, Congress declined to involve the country with until thorough investigation shall have been made.

The Manchester Ship Canal in England was completed a year ago. Next June the Baltic Canal will be opened in Germany. These water ways have tremendous effects upon commerce, as anything so directly influential upon transportation must.

Speaking of canals, it is worth while to say that the possibility that there are canals on the planet Mars is extremely slight; which is also true of the waters and snows that quack astronomers have been teaching are on this planet. One of the leading, and certainly the best equipped, living astronomers has lately published an article in which he states that there is not only no reason to believe that there is life on this planet, but that the evidence is that there is no atmosphere, without which life cannot be. We know an astronomer (!) who has been teaching that he can see the canals, rivers and bodies of water, and has gone so far as to say at what time of year the snow on the Martian mountains melts; but he learned all this twenty years ago, when these things were determined by those who looked and talked wisest when they were guessing wildest.

THE Brussels Silver Conference was a failure because of English opposition. Within the last few months a new conference has been set on foot, and the United States, Germany, France and England have made arrangements to select representatives. Our Senate has selected three and the House two, all five pronounced advocates of silver coinage; the President has yet to select three others. France and Germany are already favorably disposed toward bimetalism. However, as in such a conference it is necessary that all agree, England may yet stave off successful international efforts. The question is, Will she dare? And it is a very serious question,—as serious with respect to the great body of the English people as it is to the people of this country.

The Sabbath—No. 2.

BY REV. JNO. S HARDAWAY.

THE LORD'S DAY, OR CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

"The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." Mark 2: 27. Therefore, Christians need a Sabbath as much as did the Jews. There is the same existing need of physical rest after toil; there is the same imperative need of a set day of worship if Christianity is to be perpetuated. We may, therefore, conclude without further argument that under the Christian dispensation there would necessarily be a Sabbath day.

The foundation stone of the believer's faith is the resurrection of Jesus. 1 Cor. 15: 14. Take that away, and you leave nothing for faith to rest upon. He died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and was raised for our justification. When he died, we may say that he bore away the old covenant of works; when he rose, he brought in the new covenant of grace. During the Jewish Sabbath, which immediately followed his crucifixion, he was in the grave; but early on the first day of the week he rose from the dead.

We base our belief that the first day of the week is the Christian Sabbath upon the following Scripture proofs:

(a) The Lord Jesus rose from the dead on the first day of the week.

The resurrection completed the atonement. How often in the epistles when Paul declares that Christ died, does he also add that he rose again! Well does he say, "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." 1 Cor. 15: 14. Never did a brighter day dawn on Christianity than the day when the crucified Christ rose from the dead and thus reassured his disciples that their faith was not in vain. The resurrection of Jesus on the first day of the week marks the day for the Christian forever.

(b) We find that each one of the four evangelists states definitely that our Lord rose from the dead on the first day of the week. See Matt. 28: 1; Mark 16: 1, 2; Luke 24: 1, and John 20: 1.

Why this great carefulness as to the very day of the week on which he arose? Surely this emphasis laid on this day by the evangelists must be intended to mark the day.

Prof. Rauschenbush in his excellent tract entitled "Saturday or Sunday, which should we observe," calls attention to the fact that it was an exceptional thing in the life of Christ to refer to the day of the week. Aside from the instances in which we are told that he wrought certain works of healing on the Sabbath, and that his crucifixion took place on the day of preparation, we are not informed upon what day of the week any of the great events of his life occurred, excepting this most important event, his resurrection. Is it not significant that the day of his resurrection should be so distinctly marked by each evangelist?

(c) Again, our Lord in his appearances during the forty days succeeding his resurrection and prior to his ascension seemed to lay special emphasis upon the first day of the week.

Only ten of these appearances are recorded in the Scripture. (See Broadus on Matthew, and Clark's Harmony of the Gospels.) Of these ten recorded appearances six were on the first day of the week; and the day of the week is not designated on the other four cases. Five of the six appearances on the first day of the week took place on the day of the resurrection. The last appearance on that day was in the evening when the Apostles were assembled together, Thomas being absent. Eight days afterward; that is, that day week, the Apostles being gathered together again, and Thomas being with them, Jesus appeared in their midst, and strengthened the faith of Thomas. Why did Jesus wait a week, to meet with them again? and why did he meet with them on this first day of the week, unless he meant to lay some stress upon this particular day, as a day of Christian assembling?

Matthew Henry in his comments on this appearance of our Lord, Jno. 20: 26, asks why he deferred it so long, and gives as one reason, "That he might put an honor upon the first day of the week, and give a plain intimation of his will, that it should be observed in his church as the Christian Sabbath, the weekly day of holy rest and holy convocations..... The religious observance of that day has been from thence transmitted down to us through every age of the church. This, therefore, is the day which the Lord hath made."

Jamieson, Fausset and Brown, in their excellent Commentary, say in commenting on the same passage: "They probably met every day during the preceding week, but their Lord designedly reserved his second appearance among them till the recurrence of his resurrection day, that he might thus inaugurate the delightful sanctities of the Lord's Day."

(d) Again, Christ further emphasized the first day of the week as the day of special import to Christians by pouring out upon the assembled disciples the Holy Spirit. See Acts 2: 1. The day of Pentecost fell on the first day of the week. "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place." Then was the Holy Spirit, the promised Comforter, poured out upon them. Why was this great gift bestowed on this resurrection day, this first day of the week unless it was to be a marked day in the kingdom of Christ?

(e) Again, we find that the Apostolic churches met for worship on the first day of the week. If in the days of the Apostles the churches assembled for worship on the first day of the week as their regular day of worship, we must conclude that they did so under Apostolic instruction; and that the Apostles gave them this day as the day of worship either by the instruction of Christ (see Acts 1: 3), or by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. In either case the day comes to us as divinely appointed.

Let us look at the Scriptures setting forth the day of worship in the Apostolic churches.

(1) Acts 20: 6, "And upon the first day of the week when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them," &c. Here we find the disciples assembling to commune and to hear preaching on the first day of the week. Prof. Rauschenbusch, in the tract before quoted from, says: "With these words the evangelist Luke, the writer of the Acts, informs us most clearly and definitely that the first day of the week was the regular day of meeting of the Christian churches of Asia Minor. He informs us further that Paul celebrated this day with them, and only purposed to depart after this day had passed."

Matthew Henry, commenting upon this passage, thus writes: "They came together upon the first day of the week, which they called the Lord's day, the Christian Sabbath, celebrated to the honor of Christ and the Holy Spirit, in the remembrance of the resurrection of Christ and the pouring out of the Spirit, both on the first day of the week. This is here said to be the day when the disciples came together, that is, when it was their practice to come together in all the churches."

Jamieson, Fausset and Brown, in their comment, succinctly remark: "This, compared with 1 Cor. 16: 2, and other similar allusions, plainly indicates that the Christian observance afterward distinctly called 'the Lord's Day' was already a fixed practice of the churches."

(2) 1 Cor. 16: 1 and 2 is another passage that unequivocally designates the first day of the week as the day set apart for worship in the Apostolic churches. We read. "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, so also do ye; upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him." Here is an order given to the church at Corinth by the Apostle Paul, an order which he had issued also to the churches of Galatia, concerning a collection for the poor, requiring a regular weekly offering upon the first day of the week. Why did he name this day? Is there any other reasonable answer except this one: it was their day of assembling, of prayer, of offerings, of worship?

To day when our Secretary of Foreign Missions wants a special offering he will request that a certain Sunday, or Sundays, be set apart for the collection. He does not name a day of secular business, but a Sabbath day. I might easily add many opinions confirmatory of this view of the passage (1 Cor. 16: 1. 2), but must pass on.

(3). Rev. 1: 10. In the Island of Patmos, John the Apostle, the author of the book of Revelation, tells us that he was in the Spirit on "the Lord's day." This day is the day of the Lord's resurrection. While he could not meet in the assembly of the saints, he was in the Spirit, and the Lord blesses him with marvellous revelations.

While these passages bear directly upon the first day of the week as a day observed by the Apostolic churches for worship, we ask where is the instance of an Apostolic church celebrating the Jewish Sabbath found in the New Testament?

On the contrary, we find the Apostle Paul warning the church at Collasse, which was suffering under Judaizing teachers, to let no man judge them "in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days; which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ." See Col. 2: 16, 17.

Having shown satisfactorily, I think, that the Apostles did appoint unto the churches the first day of the week as the day of worship, let us ask two questions as to the change of the day from the seventh to the first:

(1) Does the change of the day violate the spirit of the Sabbath day law, or does it preserve it? If we understand the reason why God gave the Sabbath day to man, it was this: that man might have a portion of time set apart for the worship of God, and a regular set time for necessary rest from toil.

In the Christian Sabbath is not the spirit, the intention of the Sabbath law, thoroughly preserved? Is not the Christian Sabbath a day of worship and rest? and is not the proportion of time set apart for the same—one day in seven? If the first institution commemorated the rest of God after the creation, the Christian Sabbath commemorates besides that, the rest of Christ after the more glorious work of redemption. It seems to me that that which was permanent and material about the old Sabbath day is unchanged, while that which was immaterial and Jewish is passed away.

(2) The second question is, Why did the Apostles change the day? They did it, we have shown under the unrecorded instruction of Christ (See Acts 1: 3), or under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

But why? (a) We would say that a good reason for so doing was, that the glorious gospel might not become corrupted by Judaism. We know what a powerful tendency to smother Christianity under Jewish rites and ceremonies existed in Apostolic times. We can recall the letters of Paul earnestly protesting against Judaizing teachers and their doctrines; how strongly he urged that "old things are passed away," and that "all things are become new."

How could this freedom of the gospel from Judaism have been obtained if the Jewish Sabbath which was interwoven into the very fabric of Judaism had been retained?

(b) But the chief reason for the change is found in this, that the first day of the week ushered in a new and more glorious dispensation. The Jewish Sabbath was a memorial of God's completed work of creation; the Christian Sabbath is a memorial of Christ's completed work of redemption. The old Jewish Sabbath was in force under the covenant of works; the Christian Sabbath under the covenant of grace.

"This is the day the Lord hath made;
He calls the hours his own:
Let Heaven rejoice, and earth be glad,
And praise surround the throne.
To-day he rose and left the dead,
And Satan's empire fell;
To day the saints his triumph spread,
And all his wonders tell."

I cannot better conclude this article than with an apposite quotation from the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge, found in its article on the Sabbath:

"Now, though there is not on record any divine command issued to the Apostles to change the Sabbath from the day on which it was held by the Jews to the first day of the week; yet when we see that this was done in the Apostolic age, and that the change was made under the sanction of inspired men, and those men the appointed rulers in the church of Christ, whose business it was to "set all things in order" which pertained to its worship and moral government, we may rest well satisfied with this, that as a Sabbath is obligatory upon us, we act under Apostolic authority for observing it on the first day of the week, and thus commemorate at once the creation and the redemption of the world."

Bible Translation in China, and the Controversy About Baptism.

BY REV. G. W. GREENE.

THE RECORDER recently quoted some one as saying that the Pedobaptists translate baptizo by words meaning to sprinkle.

I think the reporter must have misunderstood the speaker. I have never heard of such a translation. So far as I know they always seek a word which will include the three acts, sprinkling, pouring, and immersion. Sometimes Baptists express surprise that they do not translate, according to the agreement of scholars, by words meaning to immerse; but it is no more strange than their practicing of sprinkling and calling it baptism. It is not to be expected that they will give a translation which would condemn their practice. When they come to believe and practice the truth, then they may be expected to translate the terms for baptism in accordance with the consensus of the scholarship of the world. But I think no one has ever dared to translate by a word meaning to sprinkle. In Chinese, the expression used for baptism means washing ceremony, while the Baptist term is dipping ceremony. The Pedobaptists say that this washing ceremony may be sprinkling, pouring, or immersion. As a matter of usage, this term is very rarely applied to immersion, for which we use dipping ceremony; and so some have come to regard the washing ceremony as meaning sprinkling or pouring. But the Baptist Chinese say that sprinkling and pouring are not washing at all, that the true washing ceremony is immersion.

The Pedobaptists have several versions of the Scriptures in Chinese, and the Baptists have one, made by Dr. E. C. Lord of the Missionary Union, and revised by Dr. J. R. Goddard of the same Mission. In 1890 the Shanghai Missionary Conference appointed a committee to make a revised version of the Chinese Scriptures to be used by all denominations. This revision is now approaching completion, and it is hoped that the version will be published before a great while. The question has arisen, What shall be the attitude of Baptists towards this union version? Of course it will call baptism the washing ceremony. Some have proposed that the Baptists shall publish an edition of this union version in which the Baptist term shall be substituted for what the committee uses. To this proposition I am strongly opposed, and some months ago I issued a circular letter to the Baptist missionaries in China setting forth my opposition, and suggesting a course that seemed to me better. For this I have recently been published to the world as having departed from the long established Baptist principles, and certain of the Southern brethren were called upon to set me right.

Some years ago a committee was appointed in England and America to revise the English version of the Scriptures. This is called the Canterbury Revision. Suppose Baptists had insisted upon being allowed to publish an edition of this revision in which immerse should be substituted for baptize. Many Baptists would have opposed such a proposition, and would hardly have been charged with heresy for so doing. But Baptists felt too independent for this. When they wanted a Baptist version, they asked Baptists to make it. Even this Baptist

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 20, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

WOULD it not be a good plan for our Union Meetings to make special prayer for the lifting of the Home and Foreign Mission debts, and also to take special collections for these objects? The need is great and pressing; brethren, pray and work that relief may come. It will be a sad Jubilee Convention, if it is overshadowed with grave debts.

IT STRIKES us that it is somewhat of a reflection on one's self to say that the Gospel is not sufficient. Look at it this way. A pastor preaches the Gospel. His work does not go forward as he thinks it ought. Shall he conclude that he is weak, or can he say the Gospel needs improvement.

Gospel sufficiency is abundantly proved. But it is not for us to say that it cannot be preached better and lived better.

Brethren, look over the matter again, before you decide at whose door to lay the inactivity (apparent or real) of your churches. And, by all means, do not forget to do all you can to get the presence of the Comforter, the Holy Spirit.

"INSTEAD of 'Here am I, send me,' many have been saying 'Here is my check, send anybody but me.'" While this is well enough as far as it goes, it does not go far enough. "Go ye," is the Scripture. "I have no money with which to go into foreign lands, into 'all the world,' nor is there means of support," one may truthfully say. Still, there are the Regions Beyond in North Carolina, into which every Christian can and ought to go. The Regions Beyond need not be hid away and untravered; they are here in North Carolina, in the wilderness, in the desert places, and in our towns and cities—in striking distance of christians, wheresoever they are.

If there is such a response to this movement as we look for, it will not be long before the Lord has out-posts in every community in North Carolina. Brethren, that is worth hard praying for.

What an opportunity for PERSONAL WORK!

THE trouble is somewhere else, if local meetings of our young people, with an annual gathering with our Convention, under control and direction of our churches, are not sufficient to promote activity; and neither will the B. Y. P. U. A., nor a Southern B. Y. P. U., nor the Baptist Boys' Brigade, which is surely coming this way in the general spread of alphabetical pests, relieve matters. Let us look to God and do as best we can what lies before us, before we conclude that his churches fall short, in any respect, of the divine purpose for which they are built. If the energy and ardor that is bent solely on alphabetical innovations were directed towards getting the young people to attend church services, do church work, attend prayer meetings, Sunday-school, missionary meetings, and their own meetings for study and worship, there would be no reason to say that they need something to arouse them.

IN this number it will be seen that the Woman's Missionary Department has been considerably enlarged, with the introduction of new features. We hope hereafter to be able to give at least two columns to this growing branch of our general work. The interest and value of the matter in them is assured by the zeal and ability and experience of those who have charge of the department.

The home field of Women's Missionary Societies is a generally unappreciated one, although it is one of the largest and most fruitful. The promptness with which the Baptist women of North Carolina and the South have fully met their pledges towards the F. M. Board debt should put to shame—no, should inspire the brethren to lift in short order the remainder of the burden left on Bro. Willingham's shoulders.

The contents of the department this week are instructive and refreshing. The inauguration of original contributions, editorial features and news letters cannot fail to elicit a larger interest and stimulate the women wherever the paper is read. We hope to be able to report the organization of many new societies.

THE Sunday-school Chautauqua that is to be held at Smyrna by the Sea is meeting with considerable favor; many have applied for entertainment. This summer railroad rates will be low, many will be tempted to take a week off at small expense, and we do not know if it could be better spent than with the Chautauqua at Smyrna.

CATHOLICISM IN PROTESTANT CHURCHES.—NO. 2.

Let us continue our search for clear cut Romish features in the creeds of Pedobaptist bodies. These creeds are themselves legacies from spiritual Babylon. Popery embodies its faith in canons; and, when in charge of artillery, enforces it by cannon. Rome has taken many a saint's life because he was too noble to subscribe to her imposing formularies.

1. This spirit of intolerance we find inherited, for the most part, by her Protestant daughters. An instance or two will suffice. Luther, the great father of the Reformation, persecuted with pains and penalties the Baptists when they came in his way. It is said that while he had the brief of Pope Adrian hanging over his head, demanding his blood, he dissuaded from persecuting them; but when he felt secure in the protection of the German princes, he advocated their destruction by force. He allowed no liberty; men might abandon the altars of Rome, but they must kneel at those of Luther. It was no better with Calvin, the father of Presbyterianism; and under his rule in Geneva, "a young girl was whipped for singing a ballad to a psalm tune; three children were punished for remaining outside of church to eat cakes in sermon time." Michael Servetus, upon being discovered in Calvin's church, was arrested and burned as a heretic, on the 27th of October, 1553. Well does Tulloch say, "It was a hard and bad world that needed Calvin for a reformer." The Episcopal church not only burned many a martyr in the fires of Smithfield, but in this fair land, during the colonial period, savagely persecuted those who dared reject her Romish trappings. While Baptists have inaugurated an era of civil and religious liberty which forbids such barbarities, yet the same old spirit of intolerance crops out in the supreme scorn in which these denominations often hold other Christians who are weaker than they in a community.

2. Perhaps the darkest blot on the record of papal errors is that of baptismal regeneration. Popery would have been impossible without this dogma. With it, any religious monstrosity is possible. It blights the Gospel of redemption to its roots, undermines personal holiness, and destroys a regenerated church. Yet, with all its fearful results, this figment of a doctrine, under apologies and denials, has passed into Pedobaptist creeds, coiling as a serpent at the root of infant baptism.

3. Infant baptism appeared in the middle of the third century as the legitimate heir of baptismal regeneration. This prolific error of the papacy has been handed down to the Protestant denominations with all of its fatal tendencies. The great philosopher, Blaise Pascal, though accepting the dogma, makes this true but sad confession: "In the infancy of the Christian church, we see no Christians, but those who were thoroughly instructed in all matters necessary to salvation. Then, no one was admitted into the church, but after a most rigid examination; now, every one is admitted before he is capable of being examined. Formerly, it was necessary to come out from the world, in order to be received into the church; whilst in these days, we enter the church almost at the same time that we enter the world. So that dawning reason no longer perceives the broad line of distinction between these two opposing worlds, but matures and strengthens, at the same time, under the combined influence of both. The distinction is almost entirely lost; the church of the saints is all defiled with the intermingling of the wicked, and her children are they who carry into her very heart her deadliest foes." Yet, in the face of these facts, Protestantism has accepted this corrupting tenet from old mother Rome, and seeks, with papal industry, to perpetuate so great a piece of tomfoolery.

4. Pouring, afterwards modified into sprinkling, was introduced as a substitute for baptism, in cases of illness, in the middle of the third century; and, inasmuch as it was born about the same time as infant baptism, and has since been associated therewith, we may designate these doctrines as twin tricks of ecclesiastical jugglery, commonly called baptismal regeneration. Rome manufactured this doctrine out of the rags of pagan superstition; and then handed it over to Protestantism, which, oddly enough, seeks to hang it on a peg in the temple of inspiration. But the New Testament offers no room to the Romish innovation of pouring or sprinkling.

Romanism cannot be reformed; it must be abandoned. Luther broke with the Papacy, but retained its worst features; and as a necessary result Germany has been lost to the Reformation. Protestantism, though rejecting much of Popery, made the fatal mistake of basing its creed on the corruptions of Christianity in the third century. The reformed churches boasted that the Bible is the religion of Protestants, when all history shows that they have followed tradition rather than Scripture, but just here is where the Reformation failed, leaving the same two old enemies on the field of battle, Romanists and Baptists. Said Bishop Bailey, a Catholic, to a Pedobaptist minister: "We Romanists have little to fear from you: the controversy is not between us and you; it is with the Baptists. There are but two parties in the contest, ourselves and the Baptists."

It is related of John Hooper, who had been appointed bishop, that when answering before King Edward for refusing to wear the vestments belonging to his office, he insisted that these articles were introduced into the church in its corruptest times, and that they were, moreover, the badges of a blasphemous priesthood. Archbishop Cranmer replied "The vestments are respected by the clergy, and have descended through many generations." Hooper urged that tradition was of no authority with him. Cranmer responded, "This is a small matter; what harm can there be in a cape, a surplice, a cap, a tippet?" Hooper replied, "Albeit they be only dumb rags, yet they be written all over with mass! mass! They be the symbols of Antichrist! They be the scarlet woman's livery! Avaunt with her badges!" So say we. Episcopacy, pulpit millinery, baptismal regeneration, infant baptism, and sprinkling, are the symbols of Antichrist, and the scarlet woman's livery. And let the shout go up from every corner of Christendom, "Avaunt with her badges!"

Pedobaptist friends, how long halt ye between two opinions? If the Baptists be right, follow them; but if the Catholics, then follow them. Ye are in a strait betwixt two.

REV. JOHN A. BROADUS, D. D., DEAD.

The announcement of the death of this foremost of Baptists will bring sorrow to every reader, so widely is he known and honored and loved. Dr. Broadus died at the age of sixty-eight years, at his home in Louisville, Ky., of pleurisy, with heart complications, in the early hours of last Saturday morning. His death was comparatively sudden, although it was generally known that his health had failed sadly in the last few months. Several weeks ago he went to Florida for a season of rest, and returned apparently improved; but he was the more unprepared for the colder atmosphere of Kentucky. A deep cold, developing into pleurisy, was the immediate cause of his death.

Man cannot measure the good in such a life as that of Dr. Broadus. If he had done nothing except write the books and tracts that he leaves, the effects of his life would be eternal. If he had never written a line and confined his powers to the pulpit, thousands would have preserved his memory in their own lives and deeds; if he had been only the professor and president of the greatest Baptist Theological Seminary, it would have been hard for any one to see how he could do more for the cause of Christ and the glory of God. God was in him; the Spirit pervaded him, and the love of Jesus Christ was manifest in all his work.

John Albert Broadus was born in Virginia, January 24th, 1827; educated at the University of Virginia, where he took the A. M, degree. He was assistant professor of Latin and Greek in this institution, was pastor of the Baptist church at Charlottesville, and later became chaplain to the University. In 1859 he was elected Professor of Homiletics and Interpretation of the New Testament in the Seminary. He was a missionary in Lee's army, and at the close of the war Corresponding Secretary of the Southern Baptist Sunday-school Board. He succeeded Dr. Boyce as President of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1889; and he and Dr. Boyce seem to us to have been divinely chosen to found and led Southern Baptists to make this great and useful institution.

Of his literary work, "The Preparation and Delivery of Sermons," "Harmony of the Gospels," and his Bible revision, are the most distinguished.

The funeral was preached Sunday in Walnut Street Baptist church, Louisville.

EVERY Baptist church in the land ought to be a full fledged, strict and vigorous temperance organization; and, not only in election times, but all the year round. What we lose by failure of the Assembly to help us, can be in part regained by good local work. Much depends, from a political and a social standpoint, on creating proper sentiment in each community; and when Christians do not take the lead in this respect, the chances are that no step will be made. There is nothing like an active church, alive with Christians, for creating wholesome sentiment.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

MEADOW BRANCH.

Somebody will wonder where is Meadow Branch. It is near "Ames' turnout," a station on the C. C. Railroad running from Monroe to Charlotte. The church is one of the oldest in this portion of the State. Old Father Davis was pastor here for more than forty years,—in fact he is the pastor now, though not able to even attend any of its meetings. About six years ago when Bro. Davis, from old age and feeble health, became unable any longer to preach, the brethren decided to call Bro. J. B. Richardson as assistant pastor, but to continue the relations of church and pastor with Bro. Davis, providing for his support just as when he was able to preach. This they have done in a manner highly creditable to the brethren among whom he has spent his life. This is a fine community, full of men who are prosperous, and possess in many cases nice country homes, with plenty around them to insure contentment and happiness.

Out of this community have gone a number of young men to Charlotte, Monroe and other towns in the State, who have taken first rank in the business and professions of their new homes. Who can estimate the wisdom of properly training our boys and girls who live in the country? These in time take charge of the stores and the law-offices in our towns and cities.

The church here has more than 250 members, the building is large and comfortable, and hard by the church is a well-equipped Academy, where for several years has been a fine school for the boys and girls of the neighborhood. This has been Bro. Richardson's assistant, and has aided him in the development and training of his congregation. No man can ever attain the highest usefulness who does not in a large measure possess the affections of people. Other things may answer for a while, but he who would be a permanent leader must intrench himself in the hearts of his people. To this Bro. Richardson owes largely his success as a preacher. His mind naturally inclines to metaphysics, and yet with the skill and tact of a born teacher, he never fails to reach the plain and simple of his congregation.

I spent a most agreeable day getting a nice list of subscribers who seemed to be just waiting till I came.

Bro. Perry was very kind to me, and after spending a while at his home, I went to Beaverdam, where I spent the night with Bro. J. C. Morgan, who very kindly aided me in getting a number of subscribers in Bro. Bennett's congregation. Bro. Bennett has recently taken this work, and the brethren feel that they have a fine outlook for a good year's work.

At 7 o'clock Monday I am in Peachland, where I spent the day with brethren Collins and Moore. I scarcely expected a new subscriber here, for I thought I had every Baptist in the town; but Bro. Griffin had just married a nice Baptist girl and could think of no more suitable thing to do than have the RECORDER sent to her the next year. Then Mr. Gray came in later in the day, and said he was not a member of any church here, but wanted his wife and children to have a good religious paper. So with this much to start the week on, I will risk for the balance. For years I have known what to count on here. I can go over my list and tell very nearly what will be the result of my trip. This was an unusually pleasant visit. I found Bro. Hufham in good health and fine spirits. He has recently moved his residence and now lives near Lattimore, McBrayer and Roberts. It seems that Bro. Hufham's moving to Shelby has turned out a comparative rest from many toils and hardships which he had in other fields of labor. His work now is to preach and not to travel over the country for the purpose of organizing and laying out new work.

Bro. Hufham thinks we ought to be satisfied with the result of our contention in the matter of State aid, and that Baptists in this as they have in every contention, will not stop short of a fair and equitable adjustment of the matter at issue.

I was glad of an opportunity to spend an hour with Bro. Thos. Dixon, Sr., now seventy-four years old, but still erect and doing his work as vigorously as at any time in his past life. He will attend the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention at Washington, D. C., and from there will go to New York to visit his sons.

It will be seen from a note in this paper that Bro. G. M. Webb will act as agent for the RECORDER in the King's Mt. Association. Bro. Webb very justly possesses the love and highest regard of his brethren, and we feel that they will find a special pleasure in dealing with him in this work.

J. C. C.

WE ARE glad to announce that Rev. G. M. Webb of Shelby has become agent for the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the King's Mountain Association. It is altogether unnecessary that we commend Bro. Webb to the brethren of this Association, which is his home, where he has spent many years of successful work. The RECORDER already has a fine list of subscribers in this Association, and among them it numbers some of its best and truest friends; but among the five thousand Baptists in Cleveland county we feel that there is room to greatly increase the number. We trust the brethren will aid Bro. Webb every way possible in his work.

A BROTHER heads an article "Concerning Preachers' Wives." Bless you, we were about to forget them. We will give a good book to the layman who sends us an article on this subject, in fifteen days. It (the subject) is worth any man's best efforts.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....The anti lottery bill passed Congress. That is creditable indeed.

....Rev. J. S. Felix, D. D., of Virginia, is supplying the Asheville pulpit.

....Help the Home Board. Contributions are coming, but not as abundantly as they should.

....Our brethren across the line will dedicate a new church building at Florence (S. C.) April 7th.

....It was Spurgeon who said "Nobody outgrows Scripture." Poor man, he died several years ago.

....The American Baptist Publication Society has given $500 to our Southern Foreign Mission Board.

....Dr. T. H. Pritchard preached at Henrietta Wednesday night, March 13th, to a large congregation.

....Evangelist Jenkins has been holding meetings with Bro. Cashwell at Hickory. He is now at Monroe.

....Rev. J. M. White of Apex called to see us Saturday, bringing good reports of his pastorate and school.

....We regret to hear of the extremely precarious condition of the aged mother of Dr. H. W. Battle, of Petersburg.

....If we had a Possible and Probable column, one paragraph would be, that the Examiner will buy itself to death.

....Rockefellow adds three dollars to every two dollars given by Baptists for city mission work in New York City.

....The Regions Beyond need the prayers and the work of God's servants everywhere. Send in your names, brethren.

....The railroad fare to the Southern Baptist Convention this year, it is thought, will be one first class fare for the round trip.

....Bro. S B. Barnes, now of Sands, Va., one of our old reliables, writes that Hill Side church has started anew for 1895 and is doing fairly well.

....The meeting to occur at Richmond in April for study of subjects pertaining to the Holy Spirit, has been arranged for. It ought to do good.

... Returned missionary R. E. Neighbour of Brazil has been preaching at Asheville, and is now helping Bro. Betts in a meeting at Biltmore.

....Rev. S. C. Owen of Candler has been preaching at the Orphanage, and 18 Orphans have joined the church. He is now in a meeting at Mills River.

....Rev. R. Van Deventer gives all his time to his Burlington work, which, we are glad to know, is flourishing; and so, Swepsonville is vacant after this month.

....Somewhat of an effort has been made to re establish the Y. M. C. A. at Wake Forest College. Otherwise, matters at the institution are quiet and encouraging.

....We are requested to say that the name of Rev. E. T. Davis was unintentionally omitted from the list of ordained ministers in the minutes of the Yadkin Association.

....Pastors will find it will help them in their work if they will get the sisters interested in our Woman's Missionary Department. We are hoping to hear of many new societies.

....We thank one of the best preachers and truest men in the State, Dr. R. H. Marsh, for a handsome club of renewals. These things help and encourage far more than any one would think.

....Bro. J. J. Farriss has sold his interest in the High Point Enterprise, and will live in New York. Farriss is a bright newspaper man, whom we had hoped would remain in this State.

....Rev. T. B. Hill of Wake Forest is pastor of four prosperous churches, which not only enable him to stay at college, but also send in contributions for the Education Board. A good example.

....Rev. R. B. Collier has resigned the pastoral care of Broadway Baptist church, Baltimore, Md. Bro. Collier was recently in our State visiting relatives. The resignation goes into effect in April.

....Professor H. Williams, a Calvinistic Methodist of Wales, Great Britain, has created a stir in Wales among all denominations with a pamphlet in which he admits that Baptists are right in baptising by immersion.

....We see an advertisement in religious papers of $10,000 for prize sermons on "ethics of citizenship;" it is signed by Albion W. Tourgee, a character too well known to North Carolinians in Reconstruction times.

....Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Goldsboro is considering a call to New Brunswick, N. J. The Headlight says Bro. Jenkens has resigned at Goldsboro, to take effect April 1st. This means that he will go to New Brunswick.

....We learn from the Christian Index that only such church property as does not exceed an area of 100x150 feet (the entire property not to be valued at more than $2 500,) will be exempted from taxation in Colorado. This will increase churches in Colorado.

....We owe it to the Patron and Gleaner to say that our esteemed contemporary did publish a letter from Dr. Durham correcting any possible incorrect impressions. Our contemporary seems not to comprehend the statement that the public moneys that went to higher education in North Carolina in 1893–'94 would have supported three schools in each township in the State three months. We trust this is plain. It is our constant effort to be plain and entirely fair, and we are sorry when we are misunderstood.

....The Mormons are said to be creating some excitement and making a few converts in Wake county. The people who may be lead by these men can scarcely be reached by newspapers.

....Rev. W. J. Fulford, who left North Carolina several years ago to work at Blenheim, has been doing well in the Palmetto State; but we are not sure he would not come back to his native soil, if the way were clearly opened.

....Rev. L. A. Eaton, who is at home on leave from his work as missionary of the Northern Baptists to Siam, is at Greensboro. Bro. Thomas unreservedly recommends him to any churches desiring to hear an interesting missionary lecture on Siam.

....A memoir of Rev. John R. Moffett, written by Rev. S. H. Thompson, and published by Mrs. Moffett, has been received. It will be remembered that Bro. Moffett was assassinated during an anti liquor campaign in Danville, Va. The book sells for one dollar.

....An interesting public debate occurred at Mars Hill College, N. C., the 15th inst. The question, Should the State Aid in Higher Education? was discussed by Messrs. L. A. Bryan, C. P. Edwards, I. E. Bennett, and S. W. Radford. S. J. Honeycutt delivered the oration.

....Dr. B. F. Riley, Professor of English in the University of Georgia, has been appointed by the American Baptist Publication Society to prepare a history of the Baptists of the South within the States east of the Mississippi river, and has gone vigorously to work.

....The Evangel printed a picture of Dr. W. E. Hatcher last week, and we were glad to look upon his beaming face. We have missed his news letters to the late Baptist, and have been hoping every week to find that he had taken up the pen for the Atlantic Baptist.

....Rev. C. M. Billings has accepted the call to Greenville, N. C. This is Bro. Billings' first regular pastorate since graduating from Wake Forest College last June, although he has held successful meetings in several communities. We expect to hear good things from Greenville.

....The brethren who expect to attend the Southern Baptist Convention in Washington City, and desire to be appointed delegates by the Board of Missions and Sunday schools, should send their request to the Corresponding Secretary. The Board will meet April 2d, at 8 o'clock p. m.

....The members of First Baptist church did a nice thing yesterday in pounding the Rev. R. E. Peele, the popular pastor of the Brooklyn Baptist church. Bro. Peele was most agreeably taken by surprise, but his gratitude was fully equal to the generosity and liberality of his numerous friends.—Wilmington Messenger.

... Another effort has been made to oust Dr. Parkhurst. He is very radical for a Presbyterian. Not long ago he grew indignant because the New York Presbytery sold a poor man's church to aid in building another in a more fashionable part of New York, and sharply criticised the action. The Reformer was too strong for his enemies.

....Rev. J. R. Jones' Virginia address is Bayview, Northampton county. We cordially commend him to his new field as a good, safe and able servant of the Master. We hope he will come back to North Carolina after a while, concerning which he writes, "The Old North State is dear to me, but Providence seems to lead me away."

....The election of a new chairman of the Finance Committee of the American Church Missionary Society (Episcopalian) has led to startling developments. The general secretary and the treasurer have had to resign, it having been discovered that the former, by name Rev. W. A. Newhold, has drawn from the Society about $12 000 more than his salary, and failed to credit about $7,000 received.

....Rev. C. L. Dowell of Society Hill, S. C., writes: "I entered upon my work as pastor of Welsh Neck church, Society Hill, March 1st. The people have given us a very cordial welcome, and the prospects for a useful and pleasant pastorate seem to be encouraging. Our home is a delightfully convenient one, and its surroundings are beautiful. I hope the churches may come to the relief of our Boards, and we may go to Washington clear of debt."

....Dr. Taylor and Bro. Blanchard came into Raleigh last week, one from the northern part of the State, the other from the south; and both were gone away straightway. Responses to their efforts are very encouraging. Bro. Blanchard says prospective students are more abundant than money, and he hopes the college will soon be able to take five hundred boys. Dr. Taylor left Friday for Buie's Creek, where he lectured before Bro. Campbell's large and flourishing Academy.

....The Wake Forest Student for February presents an inviting appearance, having adopted a new and tasteful cover, on which the table of contents is set within handsome borden. The magazine has had to contend with many changes of this kind, but this last is pardonable. Of course Prof. Poteat is at home in a highly instructive contribution on "The Color of Animals," in which he shows literary as well as scientific erudition. Mr. Daniel's "Iron Prince" is even better in type than it was from the anniversary rostrum, and it was praiseworthy then. Spencer Chaplin contributes a clear cut and well considered article on "Antitoxin," the new treatment for diphtheria. There is plenty of verse, and some of it good enough; the three quatrains being very well done, one a delicate word picture—"Sunset." The fiction is creditable. The magazine is improving, particularly in kind and variety of contents.

....A brother asks us for Sunday school statistics. They are hard to get. We read in the Examiner that there were very few Sunday-schools in the United States in 1815; now they are everywhere, and there are ten million people who attend Protestant Sunday-schools. From 1800 to 1888 the population of this country increased ten fold; in the same time the Protestant church membership increased thirty fold.

....We were glad to get the following from Rev. J. Q. Adams of Wadesboro: "I am heartily in sympathy with Bro. Jones' idea of evangelizing the waste places, and I shall be glad to help in one or more meetings in the State without fee or reward, except the reward of doing good, any time in June, July or September. Tell Dr. Durham to buckle on his armor for another two years on the University question, and that the pastors of the State are, as a rule, with him."

....We regret that we have failed to make mention of the death of one of the most venerable men of our acquaintance—Dr. Robert Burwell of Raleigh, N. C. He was more than ninety years old, and had labored as a preacher and teacher for the Presbyterian church, faithfully and with high distinction, through several decades. The well-known worth of Peace Institute of this city is more largely due to him than to any other man. His ripe scholarship was a great comfort to him in his old age, study of the New Testament in the original Greek being one of his diversions.

....As forecasted several weeks ago, the committee to whom the matter was entrusted, have decided to advise the convention of the Episcopal church to choose, rather, arrange for the bishops to choose, a central head, and call him Primus. If this is done, it will be a decided victory for the high churchmen; and they will go further as soon as they can and vest their Primus with infallibility, establish him at Washington, and make a bid for more government patronage. The people who are fighting the Romanists may as well prepare to have to contend with the high churchmen.

....Let's put the matter in the proper light: If it helps pastors for their flocks to read a first-class denominational paper, should they be accused of unworthy motives for trying to get their people to take such a paper? If it helps denominational representatives for the people to read a first class Baptist paper, should they be charged with baseness for making efforts to get the paper scattered among the people? The spirit that seeks to destroy the influence of men chosen to work, and working with all their might, for God's kingdom, is not the spirit of him who went about doing good; it is not the spirit that will build up Zion.

....An esteemed brother in Pennsylvania doesn't hesitate to say that he thinks the RECORDER is unfair, because it has not published a letter he wrote in defence of the "Boys' Brigade." We are sorry. We do not think he ought to be so quick to call us unfair for not publishing his article. For, although he is willing to take the responsibility all upon himself, the Lord would not hold him responsible. But we did not decline the article on the ground that it would do harm, for we believe our readers would not be so easily led; but it seemed to us that it would be waste of time and space and ink to print it, and especially when we have good matter from the brethren and the churches.

....Sound the trumpet, beat the drums! Here comes with flying colors the latest Alphabet affair—and it is a Baptist one, too. It is the "G. G. G.", the Girl's Golden Guild, and the leader is the "Queen," and the Queen is to have "aids." The object of this organization is to teach church-members to do the same old list of things the effete churches used to labor for, and also to have "drills and marches."—Western Recorder. Now let the G. G. G. get up a calendar of somesort, in order to advertise itself; and if the new age brethren are not out of breath, we can count on them to blow for a Southern imitation of this new and very successful order. As much can be said in favor of a Southern B. B. B., or G. G. G., or A. A. A., as can be said for a Southern B. Y. P. U.

....The study in figures on the fourth page is so interesting, suggestive and important that we would have made it more prominent, if it had been possible. Any way, we hope every subscriber will begin reading it; no doubt he will finish. It is an undesirable state of affairs when sending a young man to the Seminary is little short of giving him a final farewell. We hope the brethren will think on the matter, and let us hear from them. After Bro. Spilman offers his second article, we purpose considering the matter.——No one can afford not to preserve the article on the Sabbath. This series of articles was prepared by special arrangement, for the purpose of refuting the Adventist doctrine. That we selected the right man to do the work is abundantly evident in the article this week. We do not know if the ground has ever been so thoroughly covered. By the way, we like Bro. Henry Sheet's scrap-book idea; every preacher ought to have one, if he does not keep a file of his paper. There is already demand for publication of the Annihilation and Divine Origin articles, and we have been thinking what a fine book it would make to include Bro. Jenkens' sermon on the Lord's Supper and Bro. Hardaway's "Sabbath;" but it costs to make books, and we suggest that the brethren trust to other means for preserving articles for the present.——Bro. G. W. Greene makes a frank statement of the case. His stand is similar to that of Baptists in America who are willing to allow the Greek word bapti(d)so to be translated baptize instead of immerse, trusting to the context to make the full meaning clear; and most of us are willing to that. It seems to us that washing ceremony implies more of immersion than of sprinkling. We are very glad to have Bro. Greene thus put in a clear light.

....We hope every reader of the RECORDER will make an offering for Foreign Missions in the next thirty days. A sister suggests in the Baptist Courier that those who have no money, give a tenth of something else,—she says, every tenth egg. This is a day of small gifts in North Carolina, but we would rather get ten cents each from fifty thousand people than five thousand dollars from ten churches.

....The Orphan's Friend begs to state that it did give names of the editors of its Sunday-school literature; and also that it uses the Sunday school Times. Sorry we overlooked it, and sorrier that we have lost the Friend of week before last; a pleasure indeed to make the correction, since the Friend desires it; but nevertheless we insist that Methodist ear marks are all over the institution. We are inclined to believe, however, that the Methodists are, in a sense, right about this. Abstractly, it is folly to run orphanages when the State offers to occupy the field of caring for orphans. To give money to orphanages when this is the case, is to give it not in charity, not to the orphan, but to the State. For the State having taken some orphans, it follows that all others have a right to be admitted. So, when we support an orphan, we do not help him, but we relieve the State of just that much expense. If it is granted that the State ought to have an orphanage, Baptists have but one reason to support our orphan age, and that is, to teach the orphans a definite system of religion; and since the Methodists have opportunity to do this at Oxford, they have no reason at all. And they very consistently have no orphanage.

....As the weather improves, the brethren and sisters encourage us more and more by showing appreciation of the RECORDER and our special efforts to make it more useful. We thank them heartily. Last week, Rev. J. R. Pace came again with a subscriber, Rev. J. W. Watson sent two and a renewal, Dr. R. H. Marsh sent a handsome club of renewals, Rev. G. L. Merrill sent another new subscriber from his new field, Montgomery county, and "will try to add others," Rev. J. B. Harrell of Wilmington added two to the list to his credit, and wishes he could send more, Rev. James Jordan sent one, Rev. George J. Dowell of Durham sent four, Postmistress Annie Gilman of Magnolia sent two, Rev. W. R. Johnson of Buckhorn sent three, whom he obtained after persistent effort, and says "it would make the work of the pastor so much easier, if all my people could read the RECORDER," Bro. J. W. Fagan of the Aberdeen Telegram, a welcome exchange, sent the pay for several subscribers sent months ago and added a new name besides. Bro. A. W. Gilliam sent one, Miss Giddie Trotman of Sunsbury sent a yearly new subscriber, Rev. J. W. Rose sent two for nineteen weeks, and Rev. T. B. Hill sent three new subscribers, one yearly and two for six months, and had his own name entered on our books for a year, as was also done by Rev. W. C. Newton. We are proud of this list. We hope all the pastors will mention our special offer to their congregation as soon as convenient. Papers for distribution can be had on application.

A Few Facts about the Home Board.

Let every Baptist in North Carolina notice these facts taken from a leaflet sent out by the Secretary of the Home Mission Board:

"During its existence the Board has established about one seventh of all the white churches in the Southern Baptist Convention. In the States of Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas, and the Indian Territory, there are 4,500 churches. It is safe to say that one-half of these have been constituted by missionaries of the Home Board. There have been added to these churches 117 270 members. These, with the additions since acquired, must amount now not to less than 300,000 members. So that not less than one seventh of the numerical strength of the Baptists of the South is due to the work of the Home Mission Board."

And remember that nearly three-fourths of these results have been accomplished within the last twelve years. Up to that time the Board had been so neglected it had not wherewith to work.

Again: "The average missionary of the Home Board preaches to five congregations, preaches two sermons a week, attends forty prayer meetings, makes 160 religious visits, baptizes seventeen persons, and adds fifteen others by letter" every year.

He also "organizes one new Sunday-school a year, and two every third year, constitutes a church every two years, and every third year builds a house of worship costing with the lot $900 00." This missionary costs $300 00 a year; so that in the churches he builds he gives back to the denomination annually a sum equal to that expended in his support.

Shall such an agency for the redemption of the South be neglected? Shall its usefulness be crippled and its existence imperiled? This Board is to the Southern States just what our State Mission Board is to North Carolina. It is doing for those States the same work that our own Board is accomplishing in our borders, and the same signal marks of the divine favor rest on both as seen in the rich harvests granted them. Last year North Carolina fell sixty per cent. below what she had given to Home Missions in previous years, and we are still lack $1 800 of the small amount asked of us.

Brethren in town and country, please remember the special collection for this object on the first Sunday in April!

Pimples, blackheads, moles, freckles, tan and sunburn removed by Johnson's Oriental Soap. Medicinal. Sold by J. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C.

We were glad to have Rev. G. W. Coppedge of Wakefield call to see us. He had none but encouraging reports to give.

The Pastors Must Do It.

In the last Foreign Mission Journal, in speaking of raising the money to pay off the debt on the Foreign Mission Board, Dr. Willingham says the pastors must do it.

Is it true, brother pastors, that we must raise this debt? And is it true that if the debt is not paid, the responsibility for the failure will rest upon us? Has God placed us in positions where we can render this great service to his cause? These are searching questions, and if answered in the affirmative, they roll upon us a fearful responsibility. Shall we close our ears to the appeals of our Board? The Board's failure is our failure, or, to express it more correctly, our failure will cause the Board's failure.

What can we do? Why we can, at least, do this: Every pastor of every Baptist church in the State can make an earnest appeal and take at least one collection for Foreign Missions before the 30th of April, when the books of the Secretary will be closed.

Brethren, let us do it. Will our consciences allow us to do less?

Matthews' Baptist Church.

Bro. Bailey:—I have thought for some time of sending the RECORDER a few facts with regard to our little town, and more especially the Baptist church here.

Matthews is situated eleven miles southeast of Charlotte on the Seaboard Air Line R. R., and contains 500 or 600 inhabitants. The place had always been in the background with regard to educational enterprises until last October. Rev. J. J. Payseur, a recent graduate of Wake Forest College, established the "Matthews High School" in the old Baptist church building. He has a good school and we are all greatly pleased with his efforts in that line, regarding him as a model teacher as well as an exemplary man. We are looking for great things in the near future. He has organized a literary society, and also a musical department taught by Mrs. Alice Morrison, formerly teacher of music at Union Institute.

The new church is a very commodious, brick structure, and will cost, when entirely completed, about $5 000. Rev. J. B. Richardson of High Point, N. C., is the pastor, and has been very untiring in his efforts to complete the new church building. We consider him as one of the very best pastors, and one of the best preachers in the State, and during an uninterrupted pastorate of ten years we have never known him to fail in the pulpit. A church that is fortunate enough to secure such a pastor should be happy indeed, and should do all in its power for his encouragement.

The Sunday school is under the superintendency of Capt. T. J. Renfrow, assisted by the most faithful and efficient teachers I have ever seen. This school has been a source of great benefit to the church, and with proper management and care, the good results that will follow in the future can hardly be over estimated. Baptist principles and teachings are gradually gaining ground in this section, and for this the church should be thankful, always remembering that "Truth is mighty and will prevail."

A Card.

TO THE PASTORS AND LAYMEN OF THE WEST CHOWAN ASSOCIATION.

Dear Brethren:—Allow me to call special attention to the approaching session of the Bertie Union Meeting to convene with the church at Bethlehem, Hertford county, Friday before the fifth Sunday in this month, and to express the hope that we shall have a full representation on that occasion. There are some very important matters affecting every church in the Association to come up before the Union, which will demand the combined wisdom and earnest attention of both pastors and laymen. Let every church insist on being represented.

Fraternally, L. M. CURTIS.

Aulander, March 11, 1895.

In and Around Whiteville.

The brethren of the Whiteville Baptist church did a wise thing when they decided to have preaching twice a month, and locate a pastor in their midst.

They did another wise thing when they called Rev. J. F. Tuttle, who has moved here and preaches two Sundays in the month, to the satisfaction and delight of all our people.

Bro. Tuttle combines in an unusual degree the qualities of preacher and pastor. By his logical and scholarly sermon, he is attracting large congregations, while his gentlemanly bearing, his high Christian character and consistent walk are such as to win the respect and confidence of the people, irrespective of denomination. Among the many good sermons he has preached, the one on the "Model Church" was especially fine and called forth favorable comments from all sisters. Under his wise leadership there has been marked improvement in every department of church work. It is to be hoped that some of the pastorless churches in the Association will call him for the other half of his time.

PRAYER-MEETING.

The prayer-meeting, so necessary to Christian development, is increasing in interest and attendance.

LADIES' MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Ladies' Missionary Society which meets at the home of the pastor, seems to be taking on new life. The sisters usually foremost in every good work, not satisfied with their past record, are trying to forget the things that are behind, and are wisely planning for larger results.

HINDRANCES.

It must be evident to every one who has read the minutes of the Columbus Association for 1894, that there are some things in the way of Baptist progress in Columbus county. According to the minutes, there are seventeen churches with a membership of 1,434, and these seventeen churches gave last year to Foreign Missions $19 55, and to State Missions $19 84. Now there is something wrong somewhere, and it is the duty of every Baptist in this Association to try to locate the disease and begin at once to apply the remedy. Your correspondent believes that one of the hindrances is the lack of concert of action. There must be some organized effort to insure development all along the lines, and to this end it is to be hoped that every church in the Association will send delegates to the next Union Meeting. Another difficulty in the way is the "Cheap John" ideas that some of our churches have with reference to employing their pastors. In some places it seems to be the custom "to let" the churches to the lowest bidder.

Another hindrance is the lack of information on the part of the members as to the needs of the different objects. This information must be given largely by the pastors, and as our church-organ will be very helpful in giving this much needed information, let every pastor in the Association take advantage of the liberal offer made by the editor, and see to it that the RECORDER is read by every family in his congregation.

THE WORK BEFORE US.

When we consider that Baptist sentiment largely predominates in Columbus county, that only one church in the county has preaching twice a month, that very little is being done for missions, there is a great work before the Baptists of Columbus Association.

Rev. W. P. Fry Ordained.

Bayboro Baptist church called a presbytery, consisting of Revs. Rufus Ford, J. W. Rose and the writer, for the purpose of ordaining to the gospel ministry Bro. W. P. Fry.

At the appointed hour, 11 o'clock a. m., services began.

Bro. Rose was unavoidably kept away. Bro. Ford was called to the Chair, and the writer chosen Secretary. The candidate, having stood a very satisfactory examination, it was the unanimous decision that Bro. Fry be ordained.

Rev. Rufus Ford preached the sermon. Text, Rom. 11:13—"I magnify mine office." After the sermon, the prayer and the laying on of hands by the presbytery, Bro. Ford delivered the charge, and the writer presented the Bible. Benediction by Bro. Fry.

Bayboro, Jan. 27, 1895.

The "Regions Beyond" Roll.

The following pastors and laymen agree to hold a meeting within the next few months in some destitute place where our doctrines are not preached,—at least, where our denomination is not regularly represented:

Rev. N. S. Jones, —— place; Rev. C. W. Blackwell, Hyde county; Rev. B. H. Matthews, ——; Rev. R. L. Byrd, Abbottsburg, N. C.; Rev. B. W. Spilman, Kinston, N. C.; Rev. J. Q. Adams.

It has been wisely suggested that a pastor, and a layman go together in this great and sacred work, but where this is impossible, let two pastors go together, in order to relieve one another, do more personal work and lead singing.

Destitute places desiring a meeting may make it known by writing to the RECORDER.

"A Chance to Make Money."

R. H. Woodard Company, of Baltimore, Md., have just published a very fast selling book: "Home of the Bible" by Marion Harland. 10,000 copies were sold in one week. One agent sold fifty-eight in eight days; another twenty-seven in three days. They wish to employ at once agents everywhere to sell this book. Freight is paid and credit given. Send them at once $1.00 for a complete canvassing outfit and full instructions, and you can make money rapidly.

Dividends Annually Increasing for 20 Years.

AT THE HEAD OF THE GREAT INSURANCE COMPANIES OF THE COUNTRY.

(From Pastor of Baptist Church.)

SALEM, VA.

I took out a policy in the Ætna Life Insurance Company, in 1871 for $3,000, and only regret that it was not for a larger amount. My dividends have been growing annually larger for 20 years, and are now about 40 per cent. of the premium. I regard the Ætna as being at the head of the great insurance companies of the country.

sion, called the Bible Union version, was never circulated widely among the Baptists, and more recently the American Baptist Publication Society found it desirable to issue an edition of this version with the common term baptize substituted for immerse.

In this discussion with other missionaries in China, I have advocated a similar course. If we must have a Baptist Bible, let Baptists make it. We are not so dependent on other denominations that we must take a union version and work it over to suit our views. Baptists are able to make their own versions.

But it seems to me highly inexpedient to set ourselves in determined opposition against this union version. When it is published, three great Bible societies will print it; their colporters will sell it; a thousand missionaries and as many native preachers and colporters will circulate it. Millions of copies will be in the hands of the people. The Baptists will circulate only a few copies in proportion. Shall Baptists say that only these few copies of the Baptist version are reliable, while all the rest are misleading? That would be to shoulder a greater burden than Baptists are able to carry, to undertake a greater warfare than we can wage. Instead of this, I have advised that Baptists make this version our friend and ally. It will call baptism the washing ceremony; Baptist Chinese say immersion is the true washing ceremony. The connection will show unmistakably what was the ceremony which Jesus received when he went down into the water to receive it. When Paul compares the washing ceremony to a burial, he shows clearly what he regarded as the act to be performed. But if we say that we cannot use this version while it says washing ceremony, or tell the people, as some missionaries advise, that baptism is not a washing ceremony, we are making this version our enemy, we are setting ourselves to fight this which is to be for years the Bible most in use among the people of China.

Baptists have, for the most part, been content to use the version in common use among the people, though made by other denominations. With this in hand, they have fought the battle for the truth and gained the victory. Knowing that the meaning of the Greek words was in our favor, we have yet built our strongest argument on the plain meaning of the common English version. We have advised the people to read the New Testament and follow its teachings. I desire to follow the same plan in China. But if Baptists teach that baptism is not a washing ceremony, then most of the Bibles will be against us, and we must tell the inquirer to read the Baptist Bible, and follow its teachings.

These are some of the things discussed among us during the last three months. More than once I have been warned of what our brethren at home would say about my positions, I have promised at the proper time to lay the matter before our brethren at home for their judgment. This I now do.

I may add that my circular was necessarily brief, and I failed to make my meaning as clear as it ought to have been, and so most of the brethren have not understood the object in view. I have just received replies from three brethren, each of whom confines his answer to the duty of the translator. My circular was not about the duty of a translator, Baptist or otherwise, but about the duty of the Baptists toward this union version soon to be published.

I do not know what the outcome will be. If I am wrong in the matter, I believe the Lord will overrule my errors to his glory; I trust he will also lead me to my error. Thus far every review of the case convinces me that I am working for the truth.

Wake Forest and the Seminary.

BY REV. B. W. SPILMAN.

Many young preachers just now are anxious as to whether or not they shall attend the Theological Seminary.

I propose a study of the question from the standpoint of the probable student's future location. And I narrow this down to Wake Forest College, because I have not the names of the other North Carolina students who have attended the Seminary. I wish I had. I have before me the general catalogue of Wake Forest College. I give some facts ascertained therefrom.

Of all preachers going out from Wake Forest only 87 have attended (up to '92) the Seminary; 17 of these were there in '92.

Of this 87, one died before he located; of 3 I do not know the location; 10 returned to their former homes in North Carolina, having gone either on vacations from their churches, and returned or settled at home and preached to neighboring churches; 6 came home to North Carolina and taught school; 30 located in the pastorate in North Carolina; 33 located elsewhere. So it is seen that of those who turned lose all home ties, entered the Seminary, and then went into the pastorate, only 44 per cent. returned; while 56 per cent. settled outside of North Carolina. And our State lost 43 per cent. of all Wake Forest students attending the Seminary.

But perhaps a larger per cent. return now. Let us see. I will take the generation of students at Wake Forest for ten years before the catalogue was issued, viz., '82 to '91 inclusive.

From '82 to '87 there were 39 preachers graduating at Wake Forest. Of this number 16 attended the Seminary, 9 of whom did not return to North Carolina. Of the seven who did, 1 returned to teach, 1 returned to his home and preached to neighboring churches, and 5 accepted pastorates at various points in the State. So that of those who turned loose home ties and entered the Seminary as graduates of Wake Forest from '82–'87 and located in the pastorate, only 36 per cent. returned, and 64 per cent. settled elsewhere.

From '88 to '91 I was a student at Wake Forest. I wished to attend the Seminary. I also wished to spend my life preaching in North Carolina. In '91 I read an article in the RECORDER written by Bro. M. L. Kesler, then in the Seminary, in which he said that there were only three North Carolina students in the Seminary, and as they thought of their State the idea would come that possibly some of their brethren did not want them back again. I looked over the graduates of Wake Forest who had in the past few years (since '82) attended the Seminary. There were at that time, (the spring of '91) 23. Of this number only 5 were preaching in North Carolina.

I saw that the chances were against my preaching in North Carolina if I went to the Seminary. Of the 7 preachers of the class of '91, 5 entered the Seminary. Of this number, 1 went to China; 1 accepted a call to North Carolina, but resigned because it was a more difficult field than he had expected, and returned immediately to Kentucky, because he needed to enter the pastorate at once, and he knew that Kentucky was always ready to welcome Seminary men from North Carolina; 1 is yet in the Seminary. Of the other two, Brother Gilmore graduated at the Seminary in May, and for seven months tried to obtain a pastorate in North Carolina. He was a Wake Forest graduate, a Seminary graduate, a popular preacher (in Kentucky), having upon more than one occasion acceptably supplied the pulpits of leading D. D.'s of Kentucky, but alas for him he went outside of his State to better equip himself to do the Lord's work, and he has gone to Brunswick, Ga. As to the other one, I will simply say, I left the Seminary in June very much in debt. I could have located at once outside of North Carolina. I came to the State and remained until October. I wished a course in "Swamp Theology." No call came. Somewhat discouraged, I was preparing to return to Kentucky when the Lord opened the way for me to stay in North Carolina. I accepted the first call I received. I supplied for two months, preaching twice every Sunday and an average of twice during the week, in Eastern North Carolina last fall on a salary of $10 per month. I wished to preach in North Carolina, and I "am as a sparrow alone upon the house top" to tell the story of my scattered class-mates. Of the class of '91 who attended the Seminary, I alone am preaching in North Carolina.

But to return to statistics. From '88–'91, 28 preachers graduated at Wake Forest; of these, 16 attended a Seminary (one of whom went to Rochester, and one to Crozer), 8 of whom returned no more; 2 returned without a call and afterwards received calls, 2 returned to their old homes and located, 1 returned as secretary of the Sunday-school Board in Raleigh, and 3, I suppose, returned to accept calls extended from churches in North Carolina, since they entered pastorates soon after they entered the State.

What of those who did not attend the Seminary? Of the 57 preachers graduating at Wake Forest from '82–'91 (ten years) 25 did not attend the Seminary. Every one of them located in North Carolina.

From this study of the college graduate and the Seminary I draw a few conclusions. The preacher who graduates at Wake Forest has every probability of a settlement in North Carolina, for of 25 graduating 25 located in the State. If he enters the Seminary the probability is that he will not locate in North Carolina at all, since of 32 attending only 15 returned. If he determines to enter a pastorate somewhere as soon as he leaves the Seminary, the chances are 4 to 1 against his coming to North Carolina, for of 32 attending only 8 (3 of whom are doubtful) were called from the Seminary to pastorates in North Carolina.

There seems to be just ground then for the objection so often raised against the Seminary that our students do not return to North Carolina. But why do they not return? I will discuss that in my next article.

Kinston, N. C.

The Preacher's Magazine for March furnishes us with a variety of matter, and is one of the best issues of this magazine "Life and Death," a sermon by Rev. R. E. Barlett, A. M., is good. Dr. W. W. W. Wilson discusses on "Fasting," and presents a thoughtful and practical sermon. The Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, writes upon "Esther the Queen." The article, so rich in wise counsel, on "Ministerial Ethics," by Bishop Charles B. Galloway, D. D., is concluded. "The Empty Tomb," by the late Rev. James Stewart, is among the many sermons and outlines. Short Sermons to Busy Men, by Dr. Joseph Parker, and the Children's Sermon, by Rev. J. C. Hill, are both commendable. The "Bible Reading" and usual Notes of Lessons, by Dr. William E. Ketcham are full of wholesome thought. The late Dr. Deem's Prayer Meeting Talks, open inviting fields of thought. 15 cents per copy, $1.50 per year. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

THE REASONS WHY

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites is so useful in all wasting diseases, such as Consumption, Anæmia, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Bronchitis, and Marasmus and Rickets in children, is because it furnishes to the depleted blood the fattening and enriching properties of the oil, and to the bones and nervous system the phosphorescent and vitalizing properties of the Hypophosphites, which together nourish the body arrest the progress of the disease, and commence a process of repair that finally means restored health and vigor.

A KNIFE

in the hand of a Surgeon gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessity for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as incurable without cutting.

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery

is well illustrated by the fact that

RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death.

TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations.

PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting.

STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and all particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Do you want to start the New Year in a good position that will pay you well provided you are a good salesman and collector?

We want live, energetic men to canvass, sell machines and collect. If there is an agent located in your community we can locate you elsewhere in a good section. We furnish a nice light-running wagon, agent to furnish horse and harness and make a $500 bond. We offer a good salary, or commission contract, one under which a live, energetic hustling man can make and save money. Men of character and good make-up do well to secure work with the Company, for if successful and the business entrusted is handled honorably, they will be promoted to more responsible positions of trust and responsibility, with increased compensation. MRS. RICHARD WARREN TO MRS. BELLE RAYN.

Belle, dear:—I want to thank you for urging me to try to have the women here observe the Week of Self denial, and to tell you all about it. You know I said it was no use to try. We had never had such a hard winter, or such hard times, or cotton so low or—or times so wholly "out of joint"—in fact lame, broken and altogether gone to pieces. Nevertheless you begged me to try and, like the dear good woman that you are, did not get out of temper when I intimated that you city people knew nothing of hard times, but were always rolling in wealth and resting at ease. Forgive me, dear. I saw afterward that your dress was turned, too, and I knew it must be hard, when every one else is wearing kid, to have only cotton gloves. As every heart knows its own bitterness, so every household knows its own economies. But the women here are so poor that everything I said was true.

In little villages like this, we women have no money to call our own. We do not buy feathers and gloves and lace. When we get a dress, we make it out of as little as possible, in the first place, and turn it and twist it, and make it over again and again. Do you remember the brown cashmere I had the year after I was married? I wore it four years; then made it over for May, who wore it two; then it passed on to Susie, and at this very blessed moment Jamie has on what is left of it under his little white apron. Yet I am rather better off than many of my neighbors, and as my dear old grandmother use to say, "live in full and plenty."

So, really, when it comes to denying ourself, there does not seem any place to begin except in what one eats.

You know how I hesitated to even suggest the week of self-denial to the women of our church. I really felt ashamed to. But after you, in your gentle way, had "labored" with me, I could not feel willing not to tell them of the sufferings of our frontier missionaries. If this was a call from God to aid his servants, I kept hoping he would open the way for us to do it. And he did. I can hardly write about it without crying.

Sunday before the week we had a called meeting after church. I did not say much, for I felt I could not. I only read the appeal from the Home Board and the tracts telling of the great and life-long sacrifices of our missionaries. When I finished, there was a long pause and my heart sank. I felt the whole thing would be a failure so far as we were concerned. I did not wonder, but I resolved, come what might, I would observe the week at my own home. At last, old Mrs. Dyer, pushing back her black, quilted hood, and wiping her eyes, said slowly, "Children,"—you know she calls everybody "Children"—"Children, the Lord calls us to go forward. How shall we go?" Then one said this and one that, but not one of them said we ought not to do anything. After awhile Mrs. Dyer spoke again and said that, when she was young and the church wanted anything very much and could not see any way to get it, they kept a day of prayer and fasting. She proposed now that as we did, with all our hearts, want these servants of the Lord on the frontier to be clothed and fed and could not see how to help, that we keep Thursday of the week as a day of prayer and fasting, giving the money saved in this way. Will you believe it? Every woman there agreed to it!

Monday afternoon after the week they met here. Every one had something to give, which was handed in in an envelope without a name.

Mrs. Gray whispered to me, "I don't know how I got mine. I thought I couldn't, but I did." And I felt the same way. Some had given up coffee, some tea, some butter, and some had given all the eggs which are scarce in this cold weather, as you would know if you know if you were a farmer's wife.

But Mrs. Dyer brought nothing but a patch-work quilt, which she kept in her lap as she sat in my big rocking-chair and patted softly every now and then like a baby.

When every one had handed in her envelope we could not help looking, though we tried not to seem to, at old Mrs. Dyer and her quilt. She spread both hands out on it and said then:

"Children, you know I am very poor. It's not often I have butter or tea except when some of you sends it to me, and being feeble like I am, and living alone as I do, I don't dare to try to fast. There wasn't but one thing I would deny myself and that's this," patting the quilt lovingly. "Quilts is out of fashion, I fear, but they're good and warm. This one here was pieced by my Sue the year she died, and I love it. It's my best and my prettiest one not to speak of its being stitched in by little Sue, who died sudden just when she was turned sixteen. Here you have brought your self-denying, worth, may-be, five dollars, when you didn't see how you could give a cent. You let God show you how, and he showed. Just the same he'll show us how to send a box of good, warm things to one of them missionaries, if we'll let him. I give little Sue's quilt, it's my best, with my love and prayers, if you'll make it the beginning of a box. Will you?"

What could we say? We all cried, as women do when they are half glad and half ashamed—glad that they have done something, ashamed that they have not done more.

So now, we have managed somehow to find two dollars more to give, and with it have bought cloth, and every Friday ten or twelve, or sometimes fifteen, meet here to cut and sew for a missionary's family in Indian Territory. Some one reads while the others sew, and I do believe, leaving out the joy of helping this needy missionary, it is such a pleasure to be together in this way, that when the box is all done, which of course will be a long time, yet we will want to keep on for our own sakes. Gossip? Not a bit of it.

We are reading now "A Mexican Ranch," which you loaned me, and all are so interested that only the dark drives them home. It's wonderful, too, how we find things to help in the clothing. I, who thought I had used every available scrap, have found a nice remnant which, put with some plaid of Mrs. Brame's, will make a nice child's dress, and Mrs. Carmer and Mrs. Stowe, in spite of their houses full of children, have "matched off" another, as we call it.

Mrs. Dyer always comes first and has the warmest seat in the corner, where she sits rocking and putting together another quilt. I am thankful that something has made me discover that we had a real, live saint among us, before it was too late. I always was a little bit afraid of Mrs. Dyer before, and thought her queer—— But my letter is much too long. Love and kisses to all of you. All my young folks are well and Jamie not a bit worse for having to wear that old brown dress. I did not mean to complain. No! I am so thankful about our week, that I hope I will never worry about wearing turned dresses again.

With much love, GRACE W.

A Glorious Company of Martyrs.

While we sit in our comfortable churches and sometimes question one another, saying "If the test come, would any go to the stake for Christ's sake to day?" the test has come in Africa, and martyrs have sealed their faith with their blood. In Tganda, Central Africa, in 1885, only two years after the conversion of the first convert, thirty-three faithful martyrs were burned to death in one awful funeral pyre. While three boys were burned at the stake, they sang triumphantly until their tongues shriveled in the heat:

"Daily, daily sing to Jesus,
Sing, my soul, His praises due;
All he does deserves our praises,
And our deep devotion, too."

MARTYRS IN MADAGASCAR.

Nor are these martyrs alone. In Madacascar four distinct eras of bloody persecution followed upon one another.

In 1849, four nobles were burned alive while fourteen others were hurled from a precipice 150 feet high, and their families sold into slavery. In 1857 more than 200 suffered punishment. Christians were pierced and tortured and then beheaded. Iron necklaces were attached to the necks of others and thus chained together, they were held until death ended their miseries.

Well may we exclaim with Paul, "What shall we say more?" Time would fail us to tell of the thousands who suffered in Madacascar. Paul enumerates sufferings like theirs in his chapter of the heroes (Heb. 11) when he says, "They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goat skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented; of whom the world was not worthy; they wandered in deserts and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth." And with what result did they bear all this? At the end of this era of persecution, the number of Christians was fivefold what it was when the persecution began.

Ignorance in High Place.

Yet many do not or will not know these things, and some there are who cast slurs upon the necessity of mission converts. A recent writer in the Review of Reviews, seeking a symbol for instability, used the expression, "as unstable as a mission convert in Hawaii."

What are the facts? Within fifty years from the coming of the first missionary, the Sandwich or Hawaian Islands took their places among the Christian nations of the world. In 1870, the church-members numbered 15,000 who raised nearly $25,000 for home-work, and $6,500 for Foreign Missions among the numerous islands around them. Moreover, the average of church attendance among them is said to be greater than any Christian nation on earth.

Such is the sorry fashion of misrepresenting Christian truth. When such a statement is seen, see to it that you, at least, find out the truth of the matter.

Talk Ye of His Wondrous Works.

But more, talk of the triumphs of the gospel.

One of our former society presidents, within the last two months, moved to another town. Here she has set a fashion for for social visits which, it is to be wished, that Christian women everywhere would follow. She says, "Many ladies have called on me, and I know of nothing more appropriate to talk of than Christian work, and no matter what their faith, the theme was always appropriate."

What, indeed, could be more appropriate or more thrillingly interesting than facts such as those given above and thousands of kindred ones. God is well pleased when they that love the Lord speak often one to another of him.

From Wake Forest.

Miss Fannie E. Heck. Dear Sister:—I think I wrote to you just before our annual election of officers in November, and will go back to that time. Much to my surprise and sorrow, I was elected President of our Society, which is the third time I have been thus honored. I can assure you that I accepted the place very reluctantly, and only because I felt it my duty to do everything I could in the Master's vineyard.

I thought often of you during the Convention, and wished to be with you.

I was much gratified at our Christmas offering for China. There was such a cry of "hard times," that I feared we could not raise the $25; but we did, and a few dollars over to help a young Japanese student, who had enlisted our sympathies through one of our young ministers.

The week of prayer was much enjoyed by our Society, and notwithstanding the severe weather, each meeting was well attended.

On Thursday, when the subject for prayer was "Papal Countries," Mrs. Duggan met with us, and made the meeting quite interesting by a bright little talk about Mexico, its customs, etc.

On Monday last, we held our February meeting, and the week of self-denial was discussed, and agreed upon by all present. After that, I feel anxious to observe our eighth anniversary—which will be April 8—in some pleasant way, to raise a nice little sum for our Home Board, which is how appealing so strongly to us.

We have never sent a box as so many societies have done, for many reasons; but when the little tract was read on Monday, many eyes were suffused with tears, and I think the objections urged before were almost swept away. Will you be kind enough to tell me just how to proceed, and to whom we can send the box, and how to meet the objections, &c. You know in a little village like this, we have no surplus of money nor clothes, as you have in a city. While most of our people are in comfortable circumstances, they find it necessary to practice economy.

I feel anxious for our Society to keep in touch with all Mission work and to improve each each year.

Your friend,
MRS W. C. LANKFORD.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Book For Young Men.

An immeasureable amount of suffering and injury to the human race, is due to the ignorant violation of physiological laws by the youth of our land. Ruinous practices are indulged in, through ignorance of the inevitable injury to constitution and health which surely follows. By every young man, the divine injunction, "Know Thyself," should be well heeded. To assist such in acquiring a knowledge of themselves and of how to preserve health, and to shun those pernicious and most destructive practices, to which so many fall victims, as well as to reclaim and point out the means of relief and cure to any who may unwittingly have violated Nature's laws, and are already suffering the dire consequences, an association of medical gentlemen have carefully prepared a little book which is replete with useful information to every young man. It will be sent to any address, securely sealed from observation in a plain envelope, by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of 663 Main St, Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of ten cents in stamps (for postage), if enclosed with this notice.

There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune; omitted, all the voyage of their life is bound in shallows and miseries: and we must take the current when it serves, or lose our ventures.—Shakespeare.

Half Price to Ministers!

Sermons, Addresses and Reminiscences,

BY

Rev. THOS. E. SKINNER, D. D.

In order that every minister in North Carolina may have an opportunity to place this valuable and interesting book in his library, and for the purpose of introducing it, we offer it to ministers, by mail, postpaid, for sixty five cents (65).

Fifty cents for the book and fifteen cents for postage.

The book contains 450 pages of clear print, on good paper, and is handsomely bound in cloth. The regular price of the book is $1.15, by mail, and is considered very cheap at that.

Our offer to ministers is to send the book by mail for 65 cents. We shall keep this offer open for a limited time. If you want the book, send your order at once. Address,

Read What is Said of the Book.

Dr. Charles E. Taylor says: "A most valuable contribution to the religious literature of North Carolina. If the book shall have the wide circulation which it deserves, I believe it will be used of God for the awakening and conversion of very many."

Dr. J. B Gambrell, President of Mercer University, Georgia, has the following to say in "The Index": "The whole book is juicy, soulful and helpful toward a wider range of things and a better spiritual life. It is a good Sunday book. The Sermons deal with matters of life and death, and the Addresses touch on many practical topics, while the Reminiscences, especially of the author's conversion and spiritual life, are rich with a heavenly flavor."

"Every pastor, and especially every young Baptist preacher in North Carolina, ought to have a copy of Dr. Skinner's book. If I had the means it would be a great pleasure to me to send a copy of it to every young preacher in the State."—C. Durham.

A Story of Two Words.

"O if I were lucky enough to call this estate mine, I should be a happy fellow," said a young man.

"And then!" said a friend.

"Why, then, I'd pull down the old house and build a palace, have lots of prime fellows round me, keep the best wines, and the finest horses and dogs in the country."

"And then!"

"Then I'd hunt, and ride, and smoke, and drink, and dance, and keep open house, and enjoy life gloriously."

"And then!"

"Why, then, I suppose, like other people, I should grow old, and not care so much for these things."

"And then!"

"Why, then, I suppose, in the course of nature, I shou'd leave all these pleasant things—and—well, yes—die!"

"And then!"

"O bother your 'then!' I must be off."

Many years after the friend was accosted with:

"God bless you! I owe my happiness to you!"

"How?"

"By two words spoken in season long ago: 'And then!'"—The Quiver.

The Homiletic Review for March opens with the second paper from the dairy of the late Prof. Philip Schaff, and gives a most interesting description of the observance of Passion Week in Rome fifty years ago. Prof. Schoedc, of Capital University, follows with a discriminating article on "Modern Criticism and the Scriptures." A suggestive sermon is that of Kerr B Tupper, D. D., of Denver, Colo., on "The Bright side of 1894." C. Wilkinson contributes an appreciative paper on the late ex President of Brown University, Ezekiel Gilman Robinson. James M. King, D. D., writes on "The Division of Public Funds on Sectarian Lines," as a living issue for pulpit treatment. The number is one of unusual merit and interest. Published monthly by the Funk & Wagnalls Co., 30 Lafayette Place, New York City. $3 00 a year.

Ordination.

New Hope Baptist church met at its regular time and place on the fourth Sunday in February, 1895 After preaching by Rev. S. Gentry, and a short intermission, the presbytery organized by calling Elder J. H. Lewellyn to the chair, and the writer acted as Secretary.

Congregation re assembled. Then brethren Wiley Nation and F. T. Lewellyn were set apart to the office of deacons by the laying on of hands by the presbytery. The writer conducted the examination, Bro. S. Gentry offered the prayer, and Bro J. H. Lewellyn delivered the charge.

Bibles for the Children.

I wonder if the Baptists of North Carolina know that the American Bible Society is offering to supply Bibles at one half the cost of publication to all children who can read, but do not own Bibles, provided the local societies cannot supply them. Thus, a nice Bible, with good print, can be bought for only ten cents. Many have taken advantage of this very liberal offer, and I am sure that many others would, did they know of it. Multitudes of our children in Christian families and Sunday schools are growing up without a Bible which they can call their own, to read at home and carry to Sunday-school with them.

Pastors will no doubt be surprised at the destitution in this respect, if they will inquire into it. And now I shall be pleased to supply all such on the terms above stated, if they will apply to me.

Of course, we do not pay for transportation; but I can ship books from this place, where they are deposited with me.

What Shall I Take ?

Is the anxious question asked by those who are not feeling well—have no appetite—are out of sorts—have no energy—feel tired out. Perhaps you are feeling sick yourself!

Many medicines are recommended, doctors consulted—(in many cases) much money spent in this search for health—and yet it can all be avoided.

Why people commence at once taking

Brown's Iron Bitters

and are soon made well and strong. Nearly every prescription given by physicians for such troubles contains IRON——which some people say they cannot take. Try Brown's Iron Bitters—it is warranted not to give headache, stain the teeth or cause constipation as all other Iron Medicines do.

Genuine has the crossed Red lines on the wrapper.

That Sermon.

That was a wonderfully strong and clear sermon by a Scotch Presbyterian preacher of Glasgow (published in the RECORDER of Feb. 13th), the Rev. John Robertson. He preaches on Scriptural baptism like a man with his eyes opened to see.

It has been often said that "a Scotchman ought to be right, for he never changes." Nothing can be further from the truth than this; for Scotchmen do change, have done so, and will again. The celebrated and learned Alexander Carson, D. D., of Scotland, some years ago, came out of Presbyterianism into the light of Bible truth, and wrote one of the ablest books on baptism ever published in any country. That book has never been answered nor its cogent arguments refuted.

Other Scotchmen have also changed from defending infant sprinkling to condemning it and advocating immersion, which is believer's baptism because it is Scriptural.

The Rev. Alexander Campbell did the same, and he was a wool-dyed Presbyterian, so to speak.

It would be better to say that "A Scotchman, when once he changes from unscriptural error to Scriptural truth, is as firm as a rock thereafter." This scribe has always found them so, and we know several who were once Scotch Presbyterians, but are now Baptist deacons, good and true men. "Truth is mighty and will prevail," only just give it a half a chance, and it will carry one right along with it.

The sermon aforesaid by the Scotch Presbyterian preacher, Rev. John Robertson, is a clincher. Hear him. He is on Acts 8: 26–40, Philip and the eunuch "But this eunuch," you say, "was a heathen." "Blessed Hindoo!" "Am I not a thousand times worse a heathen than this poor eunuch? The first time he heard of Jesus he believed in him to the saving of his soul. I had heard of him thousands of times before I believed. Am I not a worse heathen than he? Is he to get this glorious privilege of being buried with Christ in baptism, and I to be hindered from it? I tell you, ye baby-sprinkled" (he called things by their right names) "unbaptized believers in the church of Scotland, ye are bigger heathen than this man asking believers' baptism at the hands of this preacher"! His language is strong, and therefore it ought to be the more convincing.

"Do you know," says he, speaking to his Presbyterian congregation, "that immersion was historically within a hair's breadth of being embodied in the Westminster Confession of Faith, and in the standards of our Kirk of Scotland? It was the chairman's casting vote in the Westminster Assembly of Divines (24 to 25) on the 7th Aug., 1644, that substituted" (listen) "unscriptural sprinkling for scriptural immersion."

He talks like a man who has eyes open indeed. "That chairman has a lot to answer for, and," he continues, "when I meet him in heaven, I'll feel more inclined to pull his nose than to shake hands with him"!! With these facts staring them in the face about the one vote that put sprinkling instead of immersion in the "Confession of Faith," how strange that Presbyterians will so tenaciously and persistently cling to the delusion even to day!

The writer so much enjoyed the reading of the Scotch Presbyterian's baptism sermon he sent it to a friend, a Presbyterian preacher, to read, knowing him to be a man who could enjoy a "good thing", too, when he saw it. But the Presbyterian preacher, to whom we sent the Scotch-Presbyterian sermon, didn't see the necessity of letting me know how much he enjoyed the reading of it. Perhaps he didn't enjoy that sermon so much, after all, as we did.

But Mr. John Robertson, the Scotch Presbyterian preacher, says in the sermon that "baby sprinkling is an addendum to the Word of God." He has found that out. And he says further, that "baby sprinkling is no more baptism than eating a grape in a railway train is partaking of the Lord's supper"!! He challenges the whole body of Presbyterian ministers and "professors" to prove it otherwise, and he calls it "a delusion of sin" and the "great heresy of the church."

Mr. Robertson can't stay in the Presbyterian church and hold such advanced ideas as he does. He will try, for a little season, to be a sort of a Baptist-Presbyterian among his people, but he'll soon find there is no congeniality there for him, and he will be compelled by the power of truth and the ringing words of Jesus, "Take up the cross and follow me," to seek a home among "the sect everywhere spoken against," as thousands have done before.

From Southport.

Dear Recorder:—As no one seems interested in this part of the vineyard, or I never see anything in the RECORDER from these parts, I desire to keep before your readers the doings in this the most beautiful town naturally in the State, though man has done very little to beautify it.

With all that has been done by nature, we as Baptists are behind in Christian progress. Our people being poor in worldly goods, use that plea for doing so little for the Master.

We are expecting great things of our city as the outlook for a railroad to connect us with the rest of the world is quite bright; and should it come, we should have preaching in our church every Sunday.

Bro. Ballard is with us as pastor after an absence of three years, and gives us half of his time. He has begun his work faithfully, though under adverse circumstances as his family have been unwell since their arrival, but we all hope that they may soon be in their usual health, and he have more time for pastoral work.

The good sisters have displaced the old organ for a new one, and now I believe they have in view the repainting of our church at an early day.

Our Sunday school is doing as well as could be expected. With our small membership we have an average attendance of forty-five. We have adopted a birth-day thank-offering for missions, and by this means we hope to do more for missions in the future than we have in the past.

We had a very pleasant and I hope a profitable visit from Dr. C. E. Taylor on Sunday last who preached morning and night able and edifying sermons, which no doubt will be seed sown in good ground and bring forth fruit. We hope his visit was not in vain for the building up of his College for which he is laboring so zealously.

Our next visitor expected is Dr. Durham. He should come down here and we will not let him rest till he does come, as the summer is now coming. I hope when our preachers leave their work for rest, they will come to Southport. I, as a physician, would recommend Southport, and assure them rest and work.

I must close, praying God to strengthen, comfort and spare the dear editor of the RECORDER. Your brother in Christ,

D. I. WATSON.

High Time.

"Messrs. W. C. Newton and I. M. Meekins have been chosen by their respective Societies to represent Wake Forest College in the annual contest at Morehead this year. It is sincerely to be hoped that one or the other of them will get the prize."—Recorder, March 13th.

Amen and amen! for it is high time that, in the inter-collegiate contests at the Morehead Teacher's Assembly, Wake Forest's men should either do credit to their Alma Mater, or quit going there as her representatives. How has it happened anyhow that in oratory and debate, in which our superb Literary Societies have done and are doing such good work, their representatives in previous contests have taken not even the second place? Last year they were entitled to the fourth place. Surely the best men are not selected, and the manner of the elections should be looked into by the Societies, for the College is suffering at a very important point.

ALUMNUS.

Progress in the Commemorative Service.

The Methodist church and its preachers are greatly to be pitied. The First Methodist church in Charlotte, N. C., and Dr. Creasy has taken from them the old weapon (close communion), that they used to fight the Baptists ever since their existence. The Charlotte Observer said a few weeks ago that Dr. Creasy is nothing if not progressive. At his communion service the Sunday before he inaugurated the individual cup system in serving the wine. He had fifty small glasses, in each of which was put a teaspoonful of wine. After fifty persons had been served, the glasses were taken in the church parlor, washed and brought back ready for fifty more. This looks like close communion—hold your own cup to your own lips. In Luke 22: 17, we have these twords: "And he took the cup and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves."

Immediate Relief Given by the Electropoise.

Dear Sir:—Last fall my health was dreadful, and my friends all thought I had Bright's disease. Had taken much medicine with no permanent good. At last an old friend recommended the Electropoise. I bought one and found immediate relief. In a few days the pains in my liver and kidneys were entirely gone, and in the course of three weeks I felt like a new man and had fattened several pounds. I believe there is nothing like it for kidney and liver troubles.

My daughter was cured of two attacks of bilious colic by it alone. My wife was cured of grippe in twenty-four hours. She is louder in its praise, if possible, than I am. I have tried it for various diseases and always with the happiest effects.

Yours truly. R. D. WILLIAMS,

Appreciated.

A leading pastor, who was prevented from personally assisting our agent in working his city, gave him the following note: "It is my earnest desire that all the members of our church shall read the BIBLICAL RECORDER. If you cannot subscribe for a year, then take it for a shorter time. Better economize somewhere else than be deprived of the good reading furnished by our denominational paper."

The Baptist church looks a great deal better since it passed under the hands of the painter. The brick walls have been painted a bright red. The ladies will have the interior of the building handsomely painted.—Webster's Weekly, Reidsville. This paper publishes regularly clear and full accounts of Sunday services in the Reidsville churches, giving interesting sermon outlines.

DIED.

HINSON—Mrs. Martha Hinson died at her home in Mecklenburg county, N. C., on February 11th, 1895, aged sixty-four years. She was a member of Independence Hill Baptist church. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her loss. Father and children, we would say the separation will be short if you only take her Saviour to be your Saviour. A kind wife, a loving mother, a faithful member, is at rest. All is well.

NANNIE J. BLACK.

SHERMER—On Dec. 24th, 1894, death came into the home of William Shermer and took away his son Frankie. Brother Frankie was about twenty-three years old. He joined the Baptist church at Forbush when very young, and lived a strict member of the church until his death. Frankie was kind and good to all. He loved his church, and was a good worker in the Sunday-school. He was clerk of the church at Forbush when death came and took him away. O how I miss him when I meet that church on the first Saturday in each month. The Lord took him, and it is all right. He leaves a father and mother, two brothers and two sisters to mourn their loss. The funeral was preached by the writer on Christmas day to a large congregation at his church, after which the body was laid in a tomb near the church.

Boonville, N. C. J. J. ANGELL.

WEATHERSPOON—Deacon Sidney Weatherspoon departed this life for his heavenly home at his residence in Sanford, N. C., on March 3d, 1895, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. For a number of years he had been a faithful member of the Cool Spring Baptist church, but moved his membership to Sanford, when the church was constituted there.

He served as deacon both at Cool Spring and Sanford. Bro. Weatherspoon was one of the most consecrated Christian men whom it has ever been my pleasure to know. He had been afflicted for about twelve months, but bore his afflictions patiently, only waiting for the Master's call. In his death the Sanford church and the entire community have sustained a great loss. He was loved by all who knew him.

The funeral services, in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends, were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. K. C. Horner.

May the Lord comfort the sorrowing ones in their deep affliction. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

We direct special attention to the following remarkable statement:

For many years I suffered from Catarrh, which destroyed my hearing, and for 25 years I was so deaf that I could not hear a clock strike by holding my ear against it. I had tried every known remedy, and nothing gave me the slightest relief. I obtained Dr. Moore's treatment, and in three weeks my hearing began to improve, and now I can hear common conversation across a room; can hear a clock strike in an adjoining room, 30 feet away. I think I am entirely cured, and my hearing permanently restored.

Spinning.

Like a blind spinner in the sun,
I thread my days,
I know that all the threads will run
Appointed ways;
I know each day will bring its task,
And being blind, no more I ask.

I do not know the use or name
Of that I spin;
I only know that someone came,
And laid within
My hand the thread, and said, "Since you
Are blind, but one thing can you do."

Sometimes the threads go rough and fast
And tangled fly,
I know wild storms are sweeping past,
And fear that I
Shall fail; but dare not try to find
A safer place, since I am blind.

I know not why, but I am sure
That tint and place,
In some great fabric to endure
Past time and race,
My threads will have; so, from the first,
Though blind, I never felt accursed.

I think, perhaps, this trust has sprung
From one short word
Said over me when I was young—
So very young, I heard
It, knowing not that God's name signed
My brow, and sealed me His, though blind.

But whether this be seal or sign
Within, without,
It matters not. The bond divine
I never doubt.
I know He sent me here, and still Am glad, and, blind, I wait His will:

But listen, listen day by day
To hear their tread,
Who bare the finished web away,
And cut the thread,
And bring God's message in the sun,
"Thou poor blind spinner, work is done."
—Helen Hunt Jackson

A Giant.

Every boy has some giants to fight. All these have one father—the Devil—and they belong to the same family. Let me tell you about one of these giants that I have been fighting for the last fifty years. He has thousands of dens in New York and in all other cities; yes, you may see his den often in a little village, or on the roadside out in the country. Whenever you go by a drinking shop or a saloon all lighted up and with a row of bottles on the shelves you see one of this wicked giant's dens. He is a cruel monster and the Doctors call him Alcohol. But the men who own the dens give him different, funny names, such as "Egg nog," or "Whisky Punch," or "Mint Julep," or "Gin Cocktail," or "Brandy Sling," or "Tom and Jerry."

I cannot tell you all the horrible things that this giant Alcohol is doing. He robs people of their money and makes them poor. He robs them of their health and gives them awful diseases like palsy and delirium tremens. A man in Brooklyn came home from one of this giant's dens drunk with whisky. His little boy ran out to meet him, and the wicked, drunken father seiz'd the poor little fellow and dashed him down the stairs and broke the child's back! When the wretched father got over his "spree" and saw what an awful thing he had done, he was almost crazy with grief; but alas! he could not undo what he had done, and the poor little boy is a cripple and has to be carried around in the arms like a baby! A lad that used to go to my Sunday school was picked up in streets on a cold winter night almost frozen to death! He had been foolish enough to go off with some older boys to one of the giant's dens called a "billiard saloon." He drank so much liquor there that he began to stagger on his way home, and fell down on the sidewalk benumbed with cold! If he had not been found in time he would have frozen stiff It is a sad thing to tell you, but that lad learned to drink at his own father's house!

For it is not only in the saloons and taverns that this ugly giant is to be found. He slips into hundreds of private houses and wears very deceitful disguises and hides behind smooth, attractive names. Sometimes parents let it into their houses and call it "hospitality." The giant talks very politely and says: "Oh, I am only a glass of good wine or ale; I can't do you any harm." Sometimes this deceitful enemy gets into a wedding company or a dinner party and makes believe that he is a gentleman. Boys! look out! don't be deceived. He is your enemy! David had to kill Goliath or Goliath would have killed him! You must either put the giant Alcohol down, or he will destroy you. The best weapon to use is a temperance pledge never to drink a drop. Put your name to that and stick to it. Then you will just as surely make a finish of this deadly giant, so far as you are concerned, as young David did when he aimed his stone at the forehead of the Philistene.—Rev Theo. L. Cuyler, in the Temperance Banner.

Wonderfully Made.

In the human body there are about 263 bones. The muscles are about 500 in number. The length of the alimentary canal is about 32 feet. The amount of blood in an adult averages 30 pounds, or fully one-fifth of the entire weight.

The heart is six inches in length and four inches in diameter, and beats 70 times a minute, 4,200 an hour, 100,800 a day, 36,792,000 a year, 3,555,440,000 in threescore and ten years, and at each beat two and a half ounces of blood are thrown out of it—175 ounces a minute, 656 pounds an hour, 7¾ tons a day. All the blood in the body passes through the heart in three minutes. This little organ, by its ceaseless industry, pumps each day what is equal to lifting 122 tons one foot high, or one ton 122 feet high.

The lungs will contain about one gallon of air at their usual degree of inflation. We breathe, on an average, 1,200 times an hour, and inhale 600 gallons of air, or 24,000 a day. The aggregate surface of the air-cells of the lungs exceeds 20,000 square inches—an area very nearly equal to the floor of a room twelve feet square.

The average weight of the brain of an adult male is three pounds and eight ounces; of a female, two pounds and four ounces. The nerves are all connected with it directly or with the spinal marrow. These nerves, together with their branches and minute ramifications, probably exceed 10,000,000 in number, forming a "body guard" outnumbering by far the greatest army ever marshalled.

The skin is composed of three layers, and varies from one fourth to one-eighth of an inch in thickness. The atmospheric pressure being about fourteen pounds to the square inch, a person of medium size is subjected to a pressure of 40,000 pounds. Each square inch of skin contains 3,500 sweating tubes, or perspiratory pores, each of which may be likened to a little drain pipe one fourth of an inch long, making an aggregate length of the entire surface of the body of 201,166 feet, or a tile ditch for draining the body almost 40 miles long.

How Mr. Biggs Raised Corn.

Having received many inquiries concerning my methods of cultivating corn by which I obtained a yield of 85 barrels (425 bushels) from four acres last year, I ask space in your columns for the following details:

My land was low, bottom land that had been used as a pasture for eight years, I put the land in good condition by breaking it several times and thoroughly harrowing it. I then covered the land with horse stable manure, and broke and harrowed it again. Then I ran off my rows eight feet apart, bedded off the land, and harrowed it again. Then I ran my rows one foot on either side of the centre, or water furrow, making the rows two feet apart and six feet apart, and six feet alternately. I then planted my corn 12 to 15 inches in the drill. When the corn was large enough I "barred it off" on the west side, chopped it out and sided it up. I next ran a cotton plow in the narrow row, sided it up on the west side, put 200 pounds more of guano by the corn, split the middles and laid it by when the corn was shoulder high.

I planted the willow corn, which makes from two to five ears to the stalk. My corn was damaged by the wind, or I should have made more.—Noah Biggs, in Scotland Neck Democrat.

PERFECT HEALTH

Insured by the Use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For eight years, I was, most of the time, a great sufferer from Constipation, Kidney Trouble, and Indigestion, so that my constitution seemed to be completely broken down. I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and took nearly seven bottles, with such excellent results that my stomach, bowels, and kidneys are in perfect condition and, in all their functions, as regular as clock-work. At the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, my weight was only 129 pounds; I now can brag of 150 pounds, and was never in so good health. If you could have seen me before and again after using you would want me for a traveling advertisement. I swear by Ayer's, and believe this preparation to be the best in the market to-day."—S. P. Smith, 312 Poplar st., Towanda, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla for general debility, and, as a blood-purifier, find it does expressly as is claimed for it. I consider it unsurpassed as a cleanser of the blood."—S. J. Adams, Ezzell, Texas.

Baptist Periodicals

FOR BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Undenominational helps cannot teach denominational truths. A Baptist school needs periodicals that will explain, illustrate, defend, strengthen, the Baptist position. We are sowing seed in what we put into the hands of our children. Your Baptist publishing house furnishes you with aids which are as low in price as it is possible for papers and lesson helps of the same kind and quality to be made; and at the same time you get expositions made by Baptist scholars, as able and valuable as can be found anywhere.

IF THE Normal and Industrial School for women is not doing a great work, it is not because it lacks the opportunity. It has the biggest field in the State, and from a State standpoint, the least cultivated. It has good buildings and equipment, has gotten the money for more, receives a handsome income from the State with which the ablest teachers in the land might be employed, and has so many applications for admission that it has never had to pay for advertising. At this school it costs less than $180 a year to educate a girl, $40 of this being paid by the State; and according to the President's statement in the Report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, board, laundry, fuel, tuition, etc., are included in this $180. It is passing understanding; in all soberness, it is.

At the rate this school is going, and the approving attitude of the late Assembly, is taken for assurance that as the number of applicants increase, the appropriation of the State will be increased,—which, if right at all, is entirely right,—the other schools in North Carolina will have to be devoted strictly to Art and Music (which the State may yet decide to teach, and thus entirely cover the field) This is a reasonable proposition that any one will grant: The private and denominational schools for young women cannot give a young woman thirty-two weeks schooling under high priced teachers, with board, laundry, etc., etc., included, for $180. If they do not, and the State does, and pays $40 of the amount besides, then it is plain that the young women's fathers are going to send their daughters to this State school. And it is just as plain that the private schools will go, for they cannot live on Art and Music, especially when there is a college for women at Greensboro that is glad to make it convenient to offer normal and industrial students the advantage of its departments of Art and Music.

"Yes, indeed, this sounds reasonable enough; but the patent fact is the schools for women in North Carolina are flourishing; you see, competition makes it lively," says some innocent. The sad, if not too apparent fact, is the private schools for women in North Carolina are suffering. They are lowering their standards, living at cost, striving for students, but their means of existence grow less and less. A school cannot, for obvious reasons, come out and announce this, no more than a bank can announce that it is about to fail. We know; we know that colleges for young men are also in straits. Their standards are down, charges for tuition cannot be collected, and professors' salaries are unpaid; they are hopeless of growth. If the State is right, all this is right; the private colleges for men ought to close their doors. This is plain enough to any one.

Very little has been said in these columns about appropriations. And nothing would be now, if we did not think it is some one's duty to speak for the private schools for women. At this time nothing can be done by the people, except a deal of thinking, and yet something must be done, or the educational resources of North Carolina will undergo a revolution that will wreck several institutions for young women in a few years, if not sooner. And something can be done that will not wreck any State institution, and will make a State appropriation to it justifiable. Does any one hesitate to say this would be a very happy solution of this problem?

A State school ought to require some return for the benefit that it confers. A State normal school ought to provide teachers for the State, without giving them preference over other women, except for proved merit. This is a reasonable proposition that any one will agree to. The State Normal and Industrial School ought to require its students, who take any not industrial studies, to sign a promise to teach in North Carolina at least two years. This is small return for the money expended by the State; for they ought to teach ten years. But if this little is agreed to, there will be no considerable ground for opposition to annual appropriations to this institution. The arguments that have been brought out in the last year do not bear upon technical schools.

The press of North Carolina ought to consider what is at stake. If the Normal and Industrial School is kept on its present policy, we have President McIver's word for it, the private and corporate institutions in North Carolina for women will be limited in their work to Art and Music; and these, we have suggested will be monopolized by the Industrial School at Greensboro. All this will be avoided, if the Normal and Industrial School will require its students to make some return to the State by teaching, which, it seems to us, any of our contemporaries will agree would be right and wise. It is time, brethren, to say whether or not the State shall entirely take the field of educating women; for at the present rate it will take it, and, since the private schools are not endowed, will have to take it quickly. You can ask the school men about this, if you cannot see how reasonable our statement is—how reasonable it is for people to use the school that costs least. A father has to pay only $90 for the board, tuition, laundry, fuel, etc., of his daughter in the Normal and Industrial School one session; in any other school in North Carolina for women, he would have to pay $180 or $200.

Mind you, if any one says we are trying to destroy, we do not ask that the appropriation be taken away. We merely ask the directors of the State Normal and Industrial School require that students in the normal departments of that school to obligate themselves to teach in North Carolina two years; and we believe every editor will agree with us that they ought to be glad to do so. We claim for this proposition that it would settle the appropriation question so far as this school is concerned, would save the useful private and corporate schools, yield the State richly for its investments in the intellects of her daughters, and make the Normal and Industrial School more of an institution of learning, of pedagogics and practical accomplishments, than a large and unwieldly boarding school of indiscriminate aims and indefinite results.

We submit these propositions particularly for the consideration of the editors in the State; and we beg that they read them studiously.

HARD times will be a great deal harder on the man who tries to make them better by politics, than on the man who, with due regard to his duty as a citizen to vote intelligently, attends as strictly to business as though business were flourishing.

The signs are that this will be a good fruit and vegetable year in North Carolina, and prices will be better than they would have been, if the blizzard had not destroyed the fruit and back set the early vegetables in more southerly States. At any rate, vegetables in plenty to live on in summer and fruit to eat and preserve, ought to be produced in this State; and, if any is sold, there is so much gain.

No one can predict the price of cotton or tobacco, but we can promise that all the corn and small grain and meat that is raised will come in for good use. Of course those who have been raising cotton or tobacco will not altogether abandon these products; but we beg every one not to depend on them for support. They will do to bring spending money, and meet incidental expenses, but as essentials they cannot be relied on.

If there is a lesson in the times, it must be, the practice of economy and reliance on sure values for a living. Cotton at five cents is useless; but corn or wheat or meat at one cent a bushel would keep the wolf from the door. What of cotton or tobacco is raised ought to be for clothing, the children's education, literature for the family, missions or church support, doctor's bills, and small luxuries.

The Independent, New York, is admitted to be the most nearly perfect paper of its kind in this country. We have anything but admiration for its religious views, and we utterly dislike its political policy; but as a literary weekly journal of general information, it is first.

We wish that the Independent could have the good fortune to be made to live in the South ten years, which would surely suffice to enable it to appreciate the Southern point of view, or at least, to perceive that with all our faults our intentions are good. We are sure it would soon learn to hesitate to give circulation to all the hard things that are said of the South; it would not advocate social equality, and in mercy to the negroes it would oppose negro rule anywhere.

So far as lynchings are concerned, it could never deplore them more than we, nor condemn them with greater ardor. But if it lived in the South, it would perceive that Southern people cannot prevent murder any more surely than people in any half-populated locality. The people of the South, that is the educated people, the Christian people, the working people, high or low, the public men, do all they can to prevent these horrible outrages. If the Independent lived down here, it would know how the crimes of a few men of meagre sensibilities are put upon the entire population, because these men are not always given their deserts. But punishment cannot be inflicted when there is insufficient proof; and the fact that for 9,800 homicides in the United States in 1894 only 322 persons suffered death (190 of these being lynched) stands out against the whole country, if it is a general disgrace for murderers to escape the law by shrewdness of themselves or their lawyers.

However, the Independent will not live in the South until more than another generation has passed; but next to trying to appreciate the Southern point of view, the best thing is to employ writers with Southern instincts. In a recent number the Independent presented such an array of articles on the South as one can seldom get at once, all by Southern writers, including Cabinet officers, Senators, Congressmen, business men and editors. We were on the point of commending this number without reservation, but we found a six line editorial note justifying the Douglass blunder of the late Assembly, in which there is a comparison that will arouse the indignation of any Southern man, and most reasonably.

The Y. P. Movement.

BY TWO YOUNG PASTORS.

REV. JNO. E. WHITE:

Those who oppose the movement to organize our Baptist young people should be sure that their opposition is based on something better than the policy of habitual conservatism. Consistency is not always a jewel. Because a newspaper or an individual has been in the habit of opposing all innovation is not sufficient reason for opposition to the Young People's movement. It were certainly indefensible for men to urge and secure the success of a wrong movement, but none the less so to hinder the advancement of a right one. Therefore, in this matter of our young people, there is need for those engaged either for or against to be sure of their ground. Some of us who are heartily in favor of the local, State and Southern organization of our Baptist young people have waited patiently for some serious and well considered argument against the movement, but except occasional ridicule from the RECORDER, have waited in vain.

We have much reason to be encouraged. At first, there was opposition to the local societies. We heard it said that they were unscriptural. But the brother who said it failed to find the Scripture, and so that contention has been abandoned.

Next, they were extra scriptural; but since this gun endangered Sunday schools, missionary societies, union meetings, associations, conventions, boards, and other Baptist agencies, it had to be dropped.

We were then informed that they were destructive to the local churches. But when churches, willing to experiment, organized societies, and began to grow in grace, power and activity, and, instead of the hurtful outcome predicted, the happiest results followed, the opposition dwindled, until now it may be safely said that it is to be found only among those who have no practical knowledge of the movement.

Now if the local society had been subversive of church autonomy, do you not suppose that brethren who have had these societies in their churches and the churches themselves would have detected it? Yet no church of which I have heard has abandoned its society, though for years many have had them. And no pastor who has seen the results from them will ever be content to serve a church long without organizing a society. Are these brethren less jealous of the authority of the local church than others? And are those who know nothing about young people's societies competent judges of their effect on the churches? Yet one of the brethren who was most loudly opposed to the movement at Charlotte was never pastor of a church that had a young people's organization in it. Wherever it has been wisely tried, the young people's society has vindicated itself. Instead of a hurt and a disorganizer, it is a blessing. As a church developing agency, there is nothing like it. We have done much as a denomination, but just about one third of our membership has done all that has been done. The majority of our church-members have been drones; not always because they wanted to be idle, but because they were never encouraged and never trained to do anything. The complete control and management of affairs was left to the older heads, and as the result that portion of our membership below the age of thirty was left idle till age had earned the right to work for Christ in his church. Only veterans went to battle, the young soldiers stayed at home. The young people's movement simply means that we have waked up to the duty of utilizing all the church for the Master. Ho! every one to the battle! is its watchword.

The next manifestation of opposition was made against State organization of the local societies. In this, too, we have some reason for encouragement. The meeting held in Charlotte before the Convention gave those who took part in it a taste for more. Those who were undecided became convinced that such a meeting was desirable every year. And those most opposed saw nothing in it to fight or dread, and therefore with entire harmony it was agreed that the meeting be repeated at the next Convention.

And now in a recent editorial the RECORDER is able to say that "a general meeting for conference and culture and work annually with our Convention" is all right and not dangerous. In fact, the RECORDER is in favor of State organization if only there be no officers. As one interested in the movement toward complete organization, I have of course felt that the RECORDER ought to have led us in this matter, guiding by its counsel and restraining with its friendly voice, but after understanding its real position as brought in the editorial mentioned, I don't feel badly any longer. I love the RECORDER and believe in it; and if it will not lead, thank God, it is following and will catch up by and by.

And now, will you let me advance some reasons which impel me to favor a State and Southern organization of our young people. You may be sure that I have not come to this position at a leap without difficulty. I, too, inherited Baptist prejudices along with Baptist principles. I fancy that I have been able to reach this conclusion only because I have resolved to distinguish between the two.

Radical conservatism is a Baptist prejudice. Close adherence to Scriptural commands is a Baptist principle.

Baptist prejudice declares against all not eighteen hundred years old. Baptist principle says: "Anything if God is in it, no matter how new." "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." It decides that in all matters not provided for in the Scriptures, the standard to be applied is tested expediency.

Dr. Gambrell says, than whom we have not in our ranks a wiser, safer man: "Innovation upon doctrine is to be resisted. But change of methods becomes absolutely necessary with change of environments. In view of the existing order, how foolish to adhere to pioneer methods in denominational or church or educational work. Old fogyism may be pious, but it is not sensible nor safe. Rust is not religion. What we need to-day is to carefully study out such methods as will fit the present condition and then resolutely work these methods. The new methods should aim at reaching every association, every church and every individual."

There is nothing offensive to Baptist principles in this, but every word of it is rank offense to Baptist prejudices.

Now believing that local organizations of our young people are desirable and necessary to the best development of our churches. I favor a State organization because I am convinced that these will be encouraged and improved by it. The more efficient and active the local society the better it is for the church. If this is true, then State organization, which improves the societies, will be a blessing to the churches.

But will State organization benefit the local societies? I answer yes, for the following reasons:

First. The very fact of union with others in the same work will increase the interest of individual members, and improve the esprit de corps of the society.

Second. Annual meetings will promote acquaintance and fraternity, and the discussions will, through the delegates or reports, result in the better information of the societies.

Third. It will beget a healthy denominational pride, and the realization on the part of the young people that they are factors in the spread of the gospel and Baptist principles.

Fourth. It will promote zeal in the work of the church in supporting our denominational work in missions, &c., just as in the case of the woman's missionary society. This means increased giving and larger contributions.

Fifth. It will encourage local societies in assisting in the organization of other societies, and bring Baptist churches into closer sympathy with each other.

Sixth. Through State and Southern organization the local societies will be supplied with needed literature, Bible studies arranged, and missionary information furnished.

These reasons may be applied also with increased force to the matter of Southern organization. If space permitted, they could be supported and strengthened by enlarged discussion of each.

And now there is one solemn conviction that impresses me about this whole movement—God is in it. It is not a sporadic and temporary agitation. It is a movement—a movement not confined to this or that denomination but as wide as Christianity. It means much to Baptists, for Baptists at work means triumph for Baptist principles.

If God is not in it, give it time and rope, and it will hang itself. If God is in it, you can't destroy it by opposing it.

Edenton, N. C.

REV. C. W. MATTHEWS:

Possibly before the close of the meeting of the next Southern Baptist Convention we shall have a full fledged Southern B. Y. P. U. I confess that I have tried to see a need for a separate organization of the young people; yet I fail to see a real necessity for such an organization. I believe the local church is the place where all our work and worship should be centered. God hath so ordered it.

It is stated that the young people ought to be separately organized because only a very small per cent. of them hold office or do any special work in the church. But, at the same time, while all cannot hold some office, there is plenty of work to do in the churches, and that, too, by the young people. In many churches the young people are the best and most successful workers. In the little church of which I am pastor there are not six idle young people. They are only too glad to work in the prayer-meeting and Sunday-school without any separate organization. Said a young man, "If the work done in the societies were done in the church without any organized society, the local church would be a greater power for good." If there is an absolute necessity for an organization of the young people, separate and apart, as to organization, from the churches, there is also need to organize the old people into a society, for not all of these do work or hold any office.

What is the matter with the church which Christ organized that the young people must be, in a sense, taken out and organized into a society? Are these organized to do what the church cannot do? If so, the organization which Christ completed is not complete. If that is true, says one, associations and conventions should no longer exist. But I think an association is made up of all the churches, and every member of the local church is present at the association in the person of their delegates. It is the churches, as such, attending to the business of the Lord. B. Y. P. U.'s are composed, not of all the members of the churches, for, if I understand it, the old people are excluded. It is just what its name implies—a young people's society; nothing more nor less. Without doubting its allegiance to the churches, or its intention to work in and through them, I fear what shape and character it will assume when it grows older. The young people who now compose the B. Y. P. U. will one day be old people; and they will still love and cling to the society of their youth. Just as an old man loves more tenderly the associations of his youth, so will these young people be drawn more closely to the B. Y. P. U., forgetting, in a measure, all other things. Their children, too, will follow them into the society, and their love for it will be even greater than that of their fathers. Would it be too much to say that the children will be more closely united to the society than to the church. What, then, is to become of the church? Is it to be a thing in which the names of those who may be converted in the B. Y. P. U. are enrolled, while all the work and worship are carried on in and by the B. Y. P. U.?

I do not doubt the society's power to train and develop our young people, nor am I fearful of great harm, so long as the present men (old men) control it. But what of its future? Generations shall rise up and grasp it with their "progressive" hands. John Wesley was a member of the church of England, and was pursuing his studies at Oxford, an Episcopal institution of learning, when he organized his first Methodist society. Its object was something similar to the B. Y. P. U. of America to-day. Dr. Kurtz in his Church History says: "They did not desire to separate from the Episcopal church. They rather wished to work in it and through it." They continued to do so until the country was distracted by the war of the revolution. But soon after the year 1784 it was organized as the Methodist Episcopal Church into an independent denomination. I do not say that the B. Y. P. U. will ever form an independent denomination. But it formathe basis for one. The first breaking away is always small; but it grows. How dangerous when this breaking away is of impressionable young people!

By all means let the movement be confined to the local churches, and let there be no Southern Union. I have written just as I felt in my heart; not that I am opposed to the young people, for no pastor has a band of young people more willing to do for Christ and his church than this humble man.

Chincoteague Island, Va.

Intemperance.

It is more than true that this subject has been worn threadbare long ago, but there is no reason why we should not persevere until we obtain the desired results.

We do not believe that temperance will ever be established by legislation alone. It is the duty of the church to reform the people, and the people will reform the State.

What have the Baptists done within the last twelve months to promote temperance? We mean outside of the pulpit. The members of the various churches are apparently blind to the evil that is going on in their own homes caused by intemperance. We do not hesitate to make this statement, for it is self-evident all around us.

This evil agent is in the hands of the worst enemy of the human race, is tempting our sons from our homes, and making, of what would be useful lives, miserable wrecks, while we are sitting idly, with folded hands, and letting the dreadful carnage go on. If the Christian people were fully awake to the evil of this monster, alcohol, we would see the eyes of mothers and daughters blinded with tears of agony, the wife praying for her wayward husband, and the father earnestly endeavoring to rescue his fallen son from his low estate. We would see a mighty war waged against Satan, and by the help of God, the kingdom of sin would be overthrown, and Jesus of Nazareth would rule supreme in the hearts of the people. Our Legislature would be free from corruption, and we could soon see the good results from such an effort.

May the good people of whatever church arouse themselves and put on the armor of God to fight against this curse of sin.

CHAS. A. BISHOP.

In everything give thanks to God.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27, 1895.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

WE ARE glad to announce that Rev. G. M. Webb of Shelby has become agent for the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the King's Mountain Association. It is altogether unnecessary that we commend Bro. Webb to the brethren of this Association, which is his home, where he has spent many years of successful work. The RECORDER already has a fine list of subscribers in this Association, and among them it numbers some of its best and truest friends; but among the five thousand Baptists in Cleveland county we feel that there is room to greatly increase the number. We trust the brethren will aid Bro. Webb every way possible in his work.

How is this for church control of the B. Y. P. U. A.? "The Board of Managers of the central organization in Virginia, embracing all the unions in Richmond and Manchester, declared against anything that looks to withdrawing from the International B. Y. P. U." This, in the home of the Religious Herald, is a severe blow to the Herald's pet idea, a Southern Union. It is sad evidence that the B. Y. P. U. A. in Virginia stands ready to declare its independence of the Virginia and the Southern Baptist Convention. "The Board of Managers expressed a desire for the closest possible alliance with the Southern Baptist Convention that can be effected without letting go the International B. Y. P. U., from which comes so much of life and enthusiasm." It has come to be "desire," not duty, "alliance," not life. The larger organization, the B. Y. P. U. A. first; the churches afterwards. The pity of it. We thank God that neither the B. Y. P. U. A. nor the S. B. Y. P. U. have any part in our Convention.

IT HAS been stated that the paragraph in a recent RECORDER about Evangelist Oakes misrepresents him. If this be so, Mr. Oakes might have taken time in the several days he has been in Raleigh (he is holding a meeting at the Baptist Tabernacle), to make correction.

Two letters have come to us from friends of Mr. Oakes, for publication. Both were put in type; but they are so sadly conflicting that it is clearly better to get a statement from Mr. Oakes. The letters were from North Carolina Baptist preachers; their sincerity is unquestionable; but one or the other is sadly wrong.

If Mr. Oakes does not believe in open communion, he ought to say so to our readers; if he does not believe women should lead mixed assemblies in prayer, he ought to say so to our readers; or he ought not let it be said that we misrepresent him. That he is undenominational is plain enough, from the number of Pedobaptist pastors he has assisted in revival work. The question of his approval of social equality does not vitally concern Baptists.

Ten words from Mr. Oakes ought to settle the two questions. It is clear that the more his friends try, the darker they make it.

WE WERE shocked to read the following in the Progressive Farmer last week:—

"We do not contend that the Christian Church did wrong when they 'transferred the Sabbath from the last day of the week to the first,' but we claim that it was a job that was uncalled for and for which no satisfactory reason can be given."

How called for the change and how satisfactory the reasons, the Baptists of North Carolina can judge from the articles on the subject that have appeared in the RECORDER within the last three weeks. The offensive language is deplorable. It is charitable to assume that the editor of the Progressive Farmer is vastly unaware of the articles, and the general subject also, since he intimates that it is denied that Saturday is the seventh day, and seems to think that the Hebrews and Seventh Day Adventists do not "have a chance to observe the last day of the week as their Sabbath according to their interpretation of the Scriptures." They do have the chance.

If the editor of the Farmer will read the articles by Bro. Hardaway, we believe he will take back the statement that "certainly we ought to observe the seventh day as we are commanded, and if our present Sunday is the first day of the week, we ought to get right."

Baptists hold that all people have the legal right to worship on the day they prefer; but this does not justify any one in saying that the change from the Sabbath to the Lord's Day, a change made before Christ ascended, and religiously observed by the inspired apostles—"was a job that was uncalled for."

CHURCH WORSHIP.

We were once dining at the home of a deacon of one of the largest Baptist churches in the South, when the subject of public worship was broached, whereupon the daughter, a very attractive young lady, remarked with some emphasis that Sunday services in Baptist churches are too bare. It is quite possible that this young woman was educated under Episcopal influences, and that she thought the worship poor because destitute of "the accessories of pictured walls, and dim religious lights, and the sensuous appliances of ritualism." And yet there is some ground for the complaint, after all. Our public worship is often bare, often dispiriting rather than uplifting."

"Heaven's first law," as regards worship, is not "order," but spirituality; for divine service "must be in the spirit; worship, which is not spiritual, is void; which is not in the right spirit, is offensive. The spirit—not the form—the spirit, which builds itself into architecture, splendid or lowly; which goes into the service, simple or grand; which uses ancient words, or the fresh utterances of the hour; which worships in chapel or cathedral, in a Baptist prayer-meeting, or a Roman ritual—it is the spirit alone which is accepted or rejected."

If worship is spiritual, it must also be simple. Elaborate rituals are a hindrance to religious service. Artistic liturgies repress rather than impress sacred truth—a fact supported by the history of all churches employing them. How, then, can the simple worship of Baptist churches be conducted so as to escape the charge of barrenness? We know but one answer—make it spiritual; to which end we offer a few suggestions.

1. Preparation of public worship. Begin your service in the closet. Read a passage of Scripture to tone you up, to rasp off the world's cares and business, to bring you into loving sympathy with Christ; then on bended knee, ask the Father for a heavenly frame, a heart prepared for his praise, a soul aglow with love—a temple of the Spirit. Be in your seat when the minister enters the pulpit to hear the first word he speaks for God, to join in the first hymn; for you are too sinful to neglect any part of divine service—you need it all. To be tardy in meeting the King in his temple indicates sloth, which is entirely inconsistent with the devotions of the hour. Pray for your pastor to be God's messenger of glad tidings to you; and, if the minister is what he ought to be, you will not be disappointed. Keep your eyes on the preacher, not on the vestibule; people who come in late do not deserve any special mark of attention from you.

2. Singing. Let all the people praise the Lord. Chime in, so far as you can, with others in making a loud noise unto the Lord; but don't let it be all noise. Sing with the spirit and with the understanding. If you can do no more, read the words as others sing them. Adopt the sentiment of the hymn as yours, breathe it as a prayer to God, and the church will become the gate of heaven. If you belong to the choir, don't seek to shine as a singer, but as a worshipper, remembering that should your motive be to display your voice or advertise your throat, your best singing will be but as filthy rags in the sight of God. Don't smile and giggle while singing; for only idiots do that—and then you reduce the majesty of divine worship to the plane of the ludicrous.

3. Prayer. When the minister calls the congregation to prayer, reverently join in this hallowed act of service yourself. You need divine blessing and forgiveness as much as anybody; and if you think you don't, it only shows that you need them a little more. It does not seem to fall short of the truth to say that not a tenth of the average congregation commonly enters earnestly and spiritually into the prayer. Many barely bow their heads listlessly, others lean on their elbows looking about church, yet others watch with zest the various attitudes assumed by the congregation, or amuse themselves at the antics of a dog ramming the aisles in search of its master. When the season is propitious, not a few females study millinery as exhibited on the heads of their fellow-worshippers, or else play gymnastics with their fans. And all this is done in the name of religion—but it is not religion. One of the most serious obstacles in the way of Christianity is this miserable farce of public prayer. Are there not many church-members that have never in their lives engaged heartily in a single public prayer?

4. Reading. It is astonishing and astounding to observe how little attention is paid to the reading of the sacred Scriptures in public. Perhaps not one person in five can usually give even a tolerable outline of the passage read, when the minister closes the Bible. Many do not practically hear it all, not getting one single idea from the lesson of the day. But, remember that if the chapter is but fairly retained, you will often the better understand the sermon. And bear in mind, too, that the Scripture is of infinitely more importance than the sermon. Most preachers do not seem to believe this, if we may judge from their careless and miserable reading.

5. The benediction. We omit reference here to the sermon, further than to say that we may treat of it hereafter, and to urge all godly people not to sleep as do others, during its delivery. The benediction, however, needs a word to rescue it from the inattention it has received. It is a prayer, and as such, important, and should be participated in by all Christians. The preacher frequently pronounces it so flippantly and irreverently as to call forth no response even from the most godly, whilst the majority of his hearers look upon it as school children do the teacher's bell that dismisses them. Attend to these things, and you will hasten the coming of our Lord.

THERE is something good in store for every Baptist who attends the Union Meetings this week. We cannot urge the pastors too strongly to set an example by being present, and also to do what they can to draw out the brethren on the subjects presented.

Just at the breaking up of the winter months, these meetings should be made to mark a general preparation for revival work all over the State. There was never such need for active workers.

EVERY Baptist in the State ought to feel the personal duty to come to the help of the Lord's self sacrificing workers, with a contribution (if it is only a one cent stamp) for Home and Foreign Missions, within the next thirty days.

Pastors, we beg you not to let pass any opportunity to enlarge North Carolina's sadly deficient contributions. Read Bro. Durham's and Bro. Van Deventer's articles; and pray God to help you bring his people nobly through this crisis.

DR. W. S. CREASY of Charlotte, in North Carolina Christian Advocate of March 20th, has an article in which he compares the progress and work of the Baptists in the State with the progress and work of the Methodists in the State. The mistakes of the Doctor are many, and will be readily detected by all well informed Baptists. His mistakes seem to grow out of a failure to see the difference in the methods used in making reports to the Convention and to the Methodist Conferences. He takes the report of our Board of Missions for 1893, and compares the facts therein given with the full report of all the Methodist churches in the State. Except the amount of contributions for certain objects the Board's report covers nothing but what is done at 103 mission churches, and 229 mission stations where no churches have been established. To illustrate—Dr. Creasy gives the number of persons added by baptism to Baptist churches in North Carolina as 1,086, and by letter 1,165—total, 2,251. He got these figures from the Board's report to the Convention at Elizabeth City in 1893; but these figures, as Dr. Creasy would have known, had he understood the report, gave the numbers added by baptism and by letter to the mission churches only. The number baptized and the number added by letter in 1,135 churches in the Convention, which are not in any way aided by our Board of Missions, are not included in the number given in the Board's report. Dr. Creasy will have to know what the reports are designed to cover before he can, from them, make a comparison of work which will properly represent these two denominations.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Attend the Union Meetings this week.

....Rev. D. J. Harris is in a meeting in Yanceyville.

....A reformatory anti-liquor bill passed the Indiana Legislature.

....A $165,000 Y. M. C. A. building will be erected in New York City City.

....The address of Rev. E. C. Bobbitt, lately of Smyrna, is Mitchener, N. C.

....Rev. N. S. Jones writes: "My work is in good shape; everything well organized."

....186 orphans at the Orphanage. It is our duty to feed and clothe and train them.

....The Regions Beyond Roll: Pastors and laymen, help swell the list with your names.

....We hope the RECORDER will not be forgotten at the Union Meetings. Help us, brethren.

....Dr. Thos. Hume and Prof. W. L. Poteat were pleasant visitors in our office Monday.

....We have received interesting statements of the First National Bank of Gastonia and the Atlantic National Bank, Wilmington, N. C., and we are glad to note the safe showing that they make.

....Dr. T. H. Pritchard of Charlotte made a pleasant visit to the RECORDER while in Raleigh last week.

....More than 200 people have professed conversion under Rev. J. L. White's work at Macon, Ga., since Feb. 1st.

....Rev. J. W. Powell of Rocky Mount has received a call to Georgia. We hope he can be kept in North Carolina.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton has been holding meetings with great success in Norfolk Park Avenue and Freemason St. churches.

....We were glad to have a call from Bro. E. S. Kenedy, on his return to Warsaw, N. C., after several years in Georgia.

....Missionary Diaz of Cuba has been in Atlanta consulting the Board about his work, which continues to go forward wonderfully.

....Pray and work for Home and Foreign Missions with all earnestness. Would to God that every Baptist in North Carolina may be stirred mightily.

....We are glad to be able to publish an interesting letter from Bro. Betts, the new pastor of French Broad St. church, Asheville. We hope he will write again.

....Rev. Jasper Howell, Jr., one of Wake Forest's promising young preachers, supplied at Smithfield last Sunday, Pastor Pulliam being absent in the western part of the State.

....We hope 200 N. C. Baptists will take advantage of the low rates and attend the Southern Baptist Convention at Washington. It is not often that the body meets so near us.

....There is, says Rev. G. M. Webb, a bright future for the Baptists at Cherryville. A house of worship 40x60 feet is to be built soon. The lumber is sawed and stacked.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield, who has been holding meetings at Williamston, is now at Weldon with Bro. Harmon, in a meeting. Evangelist Jenkins is helping Rev. Hight Moore at Monroe.

....We are glad to know that the field of Rev. B. K. Mason is flourishing. His congregations at Union Hill, Clemmonsville and Advance are good and growing. He has a good school, also.

....President Hill of the University of Rochester has determined that his institution shall no longer be Baptist. He wants more territory for funds. He is meeting vigorous opposition.

....Rev. A. W. Lamar of Texas has been aiding Pastor Lansing Burrows in a meeting at Augusta. A magic lantern arrangement was introduced in the meetings, which made them "popular."

....Union Debating Society will hold special religious exercises at Bethel Hill next Sunday. Rev. J. T. Riddick will preach, and there will be speaking by the brethren in the afternoon.

....Have you thought about it lately? Evangelists used to seek to make the waste places blossom. Now there are those who wait for invitations to help able pastors on a fifty dollar (more or less) guarantee.

....At the Orphanage pool last Saturday afternoon Pastor Newton baptized 20—19 orphans and one teacher. At the conference of the church after the baptizing three others were received by letter.—Charity and Children, March 22.

....Dr. A. T. Robertson will take up Dr. Broadus' New Testament work at the Seminary. It is fortunate indeed that Bro. Robertson was trained and tested in this work by Dr. Broadus. Dr. Dargan will have charge of Homiletics.

....Bro. E. C. Wooten sends the sad news that Hon. J. J. Long of Eoka, a member of the State Senate, died of pneumonia the 16th inst., his wife dying the same day. The latter was a daughter of the late Rev. G. W. Hill, who died less than a month ago.

....We have been asked to announce that the Southern Biblical Assembly, an organization on the Moody-Northfield plan, will meet at Asheville in July and August. We see the names of Dr. Noah K. Davis and Prof. H. H. Harris on the list of speakers.

....Rev. A. Cree, Jr., another of Wake Forest's coming young men, occupied the pulpit of the Fayetteville St. Church, Raleigh, Sunday. We do not remember when there were more young men at Wake Forest able to preach well, or preaching so frequently.

....It has been a pleasure to us to see the good opinions expressed in the local papers of Judge E. W. Timberlake's work in his position of trust and honor. As a candidate he refused to allow money to be expended in his interests for whisky or any questionable means.

....Bro. Mills of our Orphanage will visit the Union Meeting at Bethlehem, West Chowan Association, with a chapter of orphans; he will visit any community that may think it profitable to have him, giving free entertainments by orphans. Those who attend the Union Meeting can see Bro. Mills about this.

....Dr. Taylor will probably be this week at the Warren Union, Dr. Durham at the Sandy Creek, and also at the South River, Revs. Simms, Hunter and Stringfield, with brethren Scarborough, Broughton and others at the Raleigh, while Bro. Caddell will be at the West Chowan.

....Elders P. S. C. Davis and Josiah Elliott are striking examples of God's power through men. Both of them have overcome great obstacles by persistent struggles and great faith; and now they are loved and honored wherever they are known. A brother was writing us only last week what a sight it is to see the people shaking hands with Bro. Davis at his appointments. May they remain humble and simple servants.

....If you want a sound tract, clear and strong, on women's public speaking—and something of the kind is needed in some communities—send ten cents to Baptist Book Concern, Louisville, Ky., for "The Bible on Women's Public Speaking," by T. T. Eaton, D. D.

....The Salvation Army has become a church. It was a society with an humble aim to fill an unoccupied field not so many years ago. Mrs. Ballington Booth, one of the leaders of the Army, has been ordained to preach, and she married a couple the other day. And so they go.

....Accompanying the first of a fine series of Old Testament articles soon to appear in the RECORDER, Rev. J. O. Alderman writes: "There are many of us that think Dr. Taylor's reasoning for the just and efficient method of higher education is still unanswered. You are giving us a good paper now."

....Travelling Passenger Agent Chas. L. Hopkins of Charlotte writes to say that the Southern Railway will make a rate of one first-class fare for the round trip from all points in the Southern Passenger Association to Washington, for our Convention. That is, the railway ticket to Washington and return will cost what a ticket to Washington costs.

....We thank the following brethren for new subscribers sent last week: Revs. G. L. Merrell, Star, J. C. Parker, Waco, N. P. Stallings, Moyock, T. B. Hill, Wake Forest, B. Kelly Mason, A. C. Parham, Vincent Greer, Yadkin Valley, H. T. Williams, Roxboro. We thank Bro. R. D. Carroll also for a club of renewals.

....It is a great pleasure to be able to say that the reports of the serious illness of Hon. Geo. W. Blount, of Wilson, one of our foremost laymen, were exaggerated. He did not suffer an apoplectic stroke as was at first thought, and is now well on the way to recovery. Bro. Blount's friends throughout the State will be glad to know this.

....Wake Forest College was well represented at the Y. M. C. A. State Convention in Raleigh last week. About forty students attended. Dr. Thomas Hume of the State University read one of the most valuable papers of the week before the Convention Saturday morning entitled "strictly of the word necessary to spiritual Growth."

....Without any foundation in fact for it, Dr. G. T. Winston declares the University to be "the head of the public school system in North Carolina;" and a report in the News and Observer of last Sunday, of a banquet given at Chapel Hill a few days ago, declares Dr. Winston to be "the head of education in North Carolina." What next?

....Our Baptist Courier failed to reach our office last week. No one can understand these failures so well as newspaper men. The Courier is always newsy and good, excepting, of course, co education and all that is suggested by "monism," which latter, by the way, seems to have died a natural death, despite President Strong's bold prophecy that his introduction of it would mark an epoch.

....The "Two Recorders" will win again, brethren of the Atlantic Baptist. We are on the Lord's side. The Evangel, the Western Recorder, the Kentucky Baptist, and the BIBLICAL RECORDER all, for one reason or another, disapprove the proposed S. B. Y. P. U. The Atlantic Baptist will learn more before it takes a stand. Every Baptist paper should think thrice before taking a stand in this grave matter.

....We note that Rev. C. S. Blackwell of Elizabeth City is writing weekly articles for the Indiana Baptist, under the title "Chips from a Minister's Work Shop." We shall follow him with pleasure. Bro. Blackwell was baptized in Indiana, where he is widely known and loved. Of course he is going to turn aside once in a while and write to the RECORDER. In fact, we have a fine sermon from him that is waiting an opening.

....Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Goldsboro accepts the call to the pastorate of New Brunswick, N. J., succeeding Rev. M. V. McDuffie May 1st. Brother Jenkens is one of the best informed, most spiritual and successful preachers in our State. His departure is a loss. We pray God's blessings upon him in New Brunswick, that his work there may be as it has been at Goldsboro and elsewhere, characterized by sound growth and increased activity.

....Rev. W. F. Watson of Norfolk is aiding Rev. F. H. Martin in a meeting with the latter's congregation in Scottsville, near Portsmouth, Va.—Biblical Recorder. The facts are not just as the BIBLICAL RECORDER states them. It is Rev. F. H. Martin who is helping Rev. W. F. Watson, at the Spurgeon Memorial Baptist church, in Norfolk. And the combined labors of these two consecrated men are producing blessed fruit in the Master's vineyard.—Atlantic Baptist.

....Those who have been asking "What next?" need be in doubt no longer. Monday we received a communication from the latest organization, the "Mission Debt Paying Society," and it is probable that every Baptist preacher in the State received a similar one with a request to place the matter before the woman's mission society, mission band or Sunday-school. It is a proposition from a firm that is very anxious to sell soap with "the Ladies Missionary Societies, Mission Bands and Sunday-schools of the Southern Baptist Church" as agents! Great desire to pay our Home and Foreign Mission debts is also expressed. They propose to sell the soap to the societies at $8.40 a gross, and let them retail it at ten cents a cake. There is evident a desire to seem familiar with Southern Baptist affairs, but we have quoted enough to show pitiful ignorance. Pious phrases are scattered about the circular, and belief that "God is in it," that he will "bless the effort to the amusement of the conventions" is expressed. Beware of such schemes!

....Dr. W. A. Nelson of Macon, Ga., preached for Bro. Ford at Newbern Sunday.

....Rev. G. W. Rollins of South Carolina is in Raleigh. He will settle to preaching regularly when the way is opened to him.

....We were very glad to have a visit from Rev. C. J. F. Anderson of Carthage, the youngest and one of the most active and beloved pastors in our Convention. He is serving four churches. He succeeded while in Raleigh in getting Dr. Durham and Bro. Broughton to promise to attend the Union Meeting this week at Jonesboro. Dr. Durham will preach there Friday night, the 29th inst., and then go on to Roseboro, where he will try to recover some losses Sunday. Bro. Anderson was the guest of Bro. Simms while in Raleigh.

....The statement that the school children are poorer for the work of the late Assembly, is not literally correct, although it is practically. The Assembly increased the school tax; but the assessment will be so much lower than the present assessment, that the income for the schools will be less. The vital point is this: while the Assembly, most of it pledged to four months schools, liberally provided for institutions of higher education, giving all that was asked, and more than was asked to one, it did not provide for the public schools. So the statement would more correctly be, the school children of North Carolina are poorer by the negligence of the late Assembly. There was no one to lobby for the children.

....This, from Rev. J. B. Pruitt, Ashland, Wisconsin, will open the eyes of the brother who makes the bold statement that no one opposes the Y. P. general organizations except those who have not tried them: "I intend to have the RECORDER," (he sent five dollars) "I wish every home represented in my church had it. I have not one word to say about the price, except that it is the cheapest paper I know. My brother, you are so correct in your views on 'Alphabetical Societies' that I feel like applauding your every utterance. Go on; you are right. But I am reminded that I am 'in the North;' so will leave you to read my thoughts. I am tired of hearing about "Revs." Edith and Julia and Emma and Annie, and Major General Tommy, and Captain Willie and Chaplain Susie."

....We are glad to be able to lay before our readers letters by aggressive pastors this week. In addition, the reader will find Dr. Durham's article especially interesting. Rev. Jno. S Hardaway supplements his refutation of the Seventh Day doctrine with clinching proofs that the Lord's Day was observed by the immediate successors to the apostles. This is worth showing, although it was not necessary. The denomination owes a lasting debt to the studious Oxford pastor for his fine work. The "Y. P. Movement" papers just happened to come to us about the same time; and neither of the writers knows that the other has written. We are sorry Bro. White has failed to grasp the arguments the RECORDER has advanced against the organizations; we have been suspecting it, however, and are glad he is kind enough to confess it. We will discuss his six "reasons" next week.

....The North Carolina Christian Advocate charges the RECORDER with dodging the question, and asks us to "come out of our hole." As we published the paragraphs that the Advocate printed on this matter, our readers can judge who has done the dodging and who is in a hole. The Advocate says, "It remains for the RECORDER to prove that either Dr. Schaff or Mr. Wesley taught that immersion was the only ancient mode of baptism." It depends on how far back "ancient" implies. We have quoted Dr. Schaff's own words, showing that he believed that immersion was the original—the New Testament mode—of baptism: we quoted John Wesley's comment on Romans 4: 4: "Buried with him—alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion." If Wesley had said "an ancient manner," the Advocate's point would be well taken; but by "the ancient manner," Wesley leaves no room to contend that there were more than one "ancient manner." To the Advocate's question, "Did Dr. Schaff or John Wesley teach that the word baptize always means immersion or dip?" we answer that both of them did so far as the use of the word in the New Testament in regard to the ordinance of baptism is concerned; and in this connection the reader is referred to the clipping, "Only One Tried and he Failed," on page four.

Missionary Neighbour at Asheville.

Our meeting at the French Broad church of this city closed on Sunday with some sixty five professions of conversion. The Lord has done great things for us. Not only have many been made to rejoice in the hope of eternal life, but the whole church has been stirred and revived. The brethren say this is the best meeting and Bro. Neighbour the best preacher they have ever had with them. I join most heartily with them in praising the Lord for such an earnest, gifted and consecrated minister of the gospel. He is not only bright and able as an expositor of the Word, but sound and faithful in his exegesis. He pleads with lost men as a messenger sent from God. He has rare gifts as an evangelist, and I most cordially recommend him to any church who may have need of his services, either as a winner of souls or a power through the Spirit to stir the people on Foreign Missions. We are now together in a meeting at Biltmore, where God is graciously blessing us.

From here he goes to aid Bro. Southern of the West End Baptist church, and then his labor with us in Asheville will have ceased for the present. Pray for us and for him.

Yours in Christ, J. T. BETTS.

Thirty-four Days.

DELEGATES TO SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION—RAILROAD RATES—BOARD MEETINGS—CONTRIBUTIONS, ETC.

January, February and March of this year have, it seems to me, been three months of unprecedented bad weather. The roads have been almost impassible. Hundreds of our churches, mission societies, and Sunday-schools have been interrupted. The contributions have been small.

Only thirty-four days now remain before the reports to the next session of the Southern Baptist Convention will be closed. With the churches that meet once a month, only one opportunity remains to make up their contributions for Home and Foreign Missions.

There was acknowledged in the RECORDER by the Treasurer from Dec. 1st, 1893, to April 4th, 1894, for

State Missions	$5,132 44
Foreign Missions	1,190 50
Home Missions	464.38
Education	575.31
Orphanage	317.11
Ministers' Relief	138.84
Sunday schools	80.61
Students' Aid Fund	4.35
Total	$7,903.54

There has been acknowledged in the RECORDER, including this paper, by the Treasurer from Dec. 1st, 1894, to March 27th, 1895, for

State Missions	$ 650.79
Foreign Missions	1,008.23
Home Missions	741 29
Education	508 05
Orphanage	317.82
Ministers' Relief	123 22

The above figures present the facts. These can be and ought to be greatly changed during the next month. Let us give as churches, as mission societies, as Sunday schools and as individuals in this crisis of our Home and Foreign Mission work.

THE UNION MEETINGS

will be held this week. If the pastors at these meetings could have a consultation and agree to urge special collections for Home and Foreign Missions during April, and forward them promptly to the Treasurer, much could be done to swell the amounts for these objects. Every church in the Convention will, perhaps, meet in April; and, while the contribution of no one church will perhaps be large, yet the total from them all will greatly aid these departments.

DELEGATES TO SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

will be appointed at the next meeting of our Board of Missions and Sunday-schools This will be held Tuesday, April 2nd, 8 o'clock p. m. Those who wish to be appointed should notify the Board. The railroads will give one limited first class fare for the round trip, and tickets will be good for fifteen days from date of sale. From Raleigh the fare will be $9.65; Durham, $8 95; Greensboro, $8 75; Salisbury, $10 35, and from Charlotte, $11 75. I will give fare from other points later.

ENTERTAINMENT

will not be given in Washington City. The delegates will make their own arrangements at hotels or boarding houses, and pay their own expenses. This cost will be from one to three dollars a day.

THE LAST MEETING OF THE BOARD appointed a committee of three to formulate a plan of the work to be done and report at the next meeting of the Board on the following:

"Resolved, That the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools be instructed to appoint a Sunday-school missionary or missionaries to labor in the bounds of the North Carolina Baptist Convention."

The above resolution was adopted by the last Convention, and is printed in the minutes on page 57.

It is hoped that every member of the Board will be present at the next meeting, April 2nd, 8 o'clock p. m.

CHOWAN ASSOCIATION.

The next session of the Chowan Association will be held at Gatesville, May 21—23. Will not the pastors and churches in this Association look at pages 18, 14 and 17 of their last minutes? On these are the pledges for missions. Have all of these been paid? If not, will not some one take a minute to the next conference meeting and call the attention of the church to its pledges. I have great confidence in the Chowan churches, and every dollar will, I think, be paid, if the brethren have their attention called to it in time. The following are the pledges:

The following individual pledges were made for Home Missions (see page 17 of minutes):

E. Ludford and J. W. Bryan $35 00; W. P. Jordan, R. R. Overby, T. G. Wood, W. B. Waff, E. F. Aydlett, A. W. Burfoot, and H. A. Litchfield, each $5 00.

Will not the brethren see to it that all unpaid pledges are secured before the meeting of the Association? Now is the time to ask the churches for these pledges. They will pay them. The mission work needs these amounts. C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec

Royall Chair.

More than ten thousand dollars have been subscribed. All who have made pledges have not yet given their notes. They will do so. Several of the subscriptions made at the Alumni Banquet and at the Convention have not yet been put into business shape. It would facilitate our work if those who kindly made subscriptions on these two occasions would fill out the notes sent to them and return to me. If any of these have failed to receive blank notes, they would confer a favon on us by letting us know of it by postal card.

It is not impossible that unless we shall have made more progress than has yet been done, by the 10th of May, the Board of the Education Society may withdraw its offer of $5,000. to the College. The State is large, and it is impossible for Bro. Blanchard and myself to visit many points during the next six weeks. And the very trying weather has interfered much with our work ever since the Convention. I have sought to avail myself of the mails as much as possible, and not without good results.

A good brother in Yadkin county—I cannot recall that I have ever met him—wrote to me a few days ago for information about the movement. I gladly furnished it to him. In a few days he sent me his three notes for $45 00 and said in his letter: "After prayerful consideration, I return the notes to you. I should be glad if it were possible for me to make the amounts double or treble, but as I am only a young farmer trying to get a start in the world, I think that this is all that I ought to do now. While it has been the privilege of many of my friends to attend Wake Forest College, it has never been my privilege to do so: but, seeing the need of a good education, I am glad to help all I can."

The spontaneity and excellent spirit and liberality of this letter are an exilarating tonic to one who cannot help feeling discouraged sometimes in doing uphill work in hard times.

If every friend of the College who reads this letter, who really desires to aid in this movement and to bring it to completion at an early day would only indicate by letter what he or she is willing to do during the next three years, I think that we could announce full and final success within a few weeks. Of course all the friends of Wake Forest are going to help, so far as they are able. Why not decide now? Why not imitate the noble example of the Yadkin county brother?

The following words were at the close of a letter which came to me a day or two ago: I know of only one man in North Carolina who would have put the matter as this writer has done. Can you guess who it was? "It fills me with gladness that you are pushing your work in spite of the times. It is only through tribulation that men and institutions rise to greatness and immortality. Impossibilities give the promise and potency of success. An absurd syllogism to any but Baptists, and yet true. It is impossible to raise an endowment in these times, therefore the endowment will be raised."

Death of Dr. Broadus.

I write to day the saddest news that could possibly come to the Baptists of the South. Dr. Jno. A. Broadus, President of our Seminary, died this morning, and to-day our Seminary and well nigh the whole city is wrapt in gloom.

Dr. Broadus had not been well since last session, while for two or three months past, those who knew him best have been fearing the worst. He has not met his classes this year regularly, the Faculty trying to relieve him as much as possible. He took a trip to the Florida State Convention, and protracted his trip for the sake of his health, but would not stay longer than he did, and hurried back to the work that was so near his heart. I first saw him after his return at our missionary meeting, March 1st, and my heart was saddened at the apparent change for the worse. However, none of us expected the end so soon.

About a week ago he failed to meet his classes, and since then has kept his bed. He grew rapidly worse and breathed his last this morning between three and four o'clock. He was afflicted with heart disease and pleurisy. The family had been summoned home, and all were at his bedside. They watched life slowly ebb away. He had been unconscious for a day or two, and sank, to death as easily as a child to sleep.

The loss is irreparable. He was easily one among a half dozen of the greatest men of this generation. As a scholar, teacher, author, preacher, citizen, he was great, but as a combination of all these, there has been no such man in America in his day. His influence is more widely felt in the world of morals and thought to-day than that of any man on this continent. All who knew him feel in his death a sense of personal bereavement.

It touches my heart deeply. It seems to me to-day that I can remember every word I ever heard him say. I used to love to sit and look at him—just look, and nothing else—for to be in his presence was a benediction. I count it one of my most treasured possessions to have known him, and to have experienced the hospitalities of his home. His modesty, unostentatious demeanor, earnestness, piety and gentleness stamped him as a man of the truest type.

Allow me to add for the benefit of any who may wish to look into the facts of his life, that the Seminary Magazine will devote the April issue as a Broadus memorial number. It will be well worth the price, fifteen cents, to any who may see fit to send to the Business Manager, Rev. C. T. Taylor, New York Hall, Louisville, Ky., for it.

For the Regions Beyond.

Dear Recorder:—I am very much gratified to see that a number of the pastors are in sympathy with the "Region Beyond" work.

I believe this movement is going to test the Baptist ministry of North Carolina as to their love for the mission work in our State. I am a little surprised that a number of our leading men who profess to have this great work upon their hearts are as yet speechless. What is the matter? Are they secretly enlisted, not wanting their right hand to know what their left hand is doing? Is it a fact that our pastors don't like to engage in the pledging business? They seem to like it wonderfully well when they call upon their brethren for the objects of church work. If there is a pastor in our State who is not willing to give a week or ten days to this special mission work, I move that a missionary be appointed for him. I cannot believe we have such an one in the State.

It may be that preachers are sometimes justly accused of having urged others to contribute, when they have failed to lead.

I hope the "Regions Beyond Roll" will be preserved, and I want the church members of our State to keep their eyes upon it that they may measure the interest and anxiety of the Baptist preachers of North Carolina in and for the Christless sections of our fair State. It is to be hoped that at our next Convention in Greensboro that every one who has engaged in this glorious work will have a statistical report.

I believe if we make an honest effort to thus glorify God and help our brother, that it will turn out so be a supplement to our State Mission Board equal to several thousand dollars. Let there be a full column of names in the RECORDER for the work before our Associations meet, and at these meetings much of the work can be mapped out. Now, brethren, let us see how you stand upon the question. "North Carolina for Jesus" If you love the cause and are willing to work for the Master, speak out and send your name. Rev. 3: 1, 2.

"Regions Beyond."

Dear Recorder:—"What an opportunity for personal work," I thought, as my eye ran over the list of ordained Baptist preachers in the State; and as the great army of Baptist people to the number of 157,000 came before me, what a mighty host to work! I increased the number of workers to the extent of the other denominations, and asked where are the "Regions Beyond?" In proportion to the destitution at home and abroad, are we doing enough for the "Regions Beyond?" While we do not lay too much stress on the work in our Home field, do we emphasize the needs and the claims of the heathen as we should? The command to "go" is also our permission to go, with power behind it to open the way and make the going successful.

On the first Sunday in April the collection for the Home Board will be taken. Shall we not after that, during the month of April, in time to report our contribution before the Treasurer's books close, come to the help of the Foreign Mission Board?

There are different opinions about the debt which now burdens the Board. It will not pay the debt to be continually airing them and finding fault. United effort would settle the trouble and the burden would be forgotten in the joy of success. I shall be sorry if the Board has to report a debt when we go to Washington, but I will not be as sorry as I would had I failed to help in its liquidation. Paul urges that there be equality among the brethren on the point of giving. He would not have some burdened with all the giving, but that the other brother do his part, too. His is safe advice.

I am afraid some churches in North Carolina have not taken a collection for Foreign Missions since the last Convention. Brethren, help. Pastors, call the churches' attention to the situation. I believe the churches will respond. Is it the pastors' fault that the churches fail? Some say the key to the situation is the pastor. How about it, brethren? Sincerely,

R. VAN DEVENTER.

"Success is the reward of merit" not of assumption. Popular appreciation is what tells in the long run. For fifty years, people have been using Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and to-day it is the blood purifier most in favor with the public. Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures.

The "Regions Beyond" Roll.

The following pastors and laymen agree to hold a meeting within the next few months in some destitute place where our doctrines are not preached,—at least, where our denomination is not regularly represented:

Rev. N. S. Jones, —— place; Rev. C. W. Blackwell, Hyde county; Rev. B. H. Matthews, ——; Rev. R. L. Byrd, Abbottsburg, N. C.; Rev. B. W. Spilman, Kinston, N. C.; Rev. J. Q. Adams; Rev. J. E. Greene; Rev. C. J. F. Anderson.

It has been wisely suggested that a pastor, and a layman go together in this great and sacred work, but where this is impossible, let two pastors go together, in order to relieve one another, do more personal work and lead singing.

Destitute places desiring a meeting may make it known by writing to the RECORDER.

From Winston.

DR. SKINNER'S BOOK—BRO. BROUGHTON'S ADDRESS—THE MISSION CHAPEL—YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK, ETC.

I have had frequent occasion of late to read and study some of the sermons and addresses of Rev. Thos. H. Skinner, D. D. I have no volume of sermons in my library that I prize more highly than this. The sermons are full of Bible truth forcefully and clearly presented. They are such productions as every true minister desires "to give out" when he realizes the solemn responsibility of his God given work. Bro. Skinner does not worry us by telling quite frequently what the Greek rendering is, he does not almost stupify us by quoting largely from the fathers, he does not arouse our antagonism by references to the higher critics. Evidently his only desire was to help men to see the truth and practice it. His sermon on the conversion of children is tender and striking, and some of the incidents related are touching and beautiful. I do not hesitate to say that I am one of those who have serious doubt about urging very young children to make a profession of faith and unite with the church. Much of the talk we hear about children being "lambs" and "buds" of the vine, &c., is misleading. The danger is that children will come to believe that if they are already lambs they have nothing to do but grow up, if already "buds," nothing to do but develop. When we cease to insist strongly upon that change of heart and conduct involved in regeneration, we may look for our churches to be filled with freethinkers, rationalists and infidels.

But this slight digression is not intended as a criticism of the sermon mentioned above. The sermon on the ordination of deacons is worthy of careful study. It is the best I have seen on the subject. Pastors would do well to read it carefully and have their deacons do so.

The sketches are models. The young preachers cannot be harmed by studying these skeletons as "starters" to full grown sermons. I have found the addresses on Drs. Yates and Howell exceedingly suggestive and helpful in our missionary and young peoples' meetings. The "Reminiscences" are simply delightful. I know no man except Dr. Skinner who could have written so humorously and interestingly about men and things coming under his observation. To read and study this book will familiarize any one with the leading facts and men connected with our denominational history for the last half a century. Let all the preachers obtain a copy. It is offered to them at half price. I commend it to all who wish a good book in their families or their Sunday-school libraries.

Bro. N. B. Broughton spent a day in Winston recently and made a speech of great power in the interest of Sunday school work.

We are at work on our new mission chapel in North Winston. It will be complete in a short time. It is a beautiful building for the purpose and will accommodate about 300, perhaps more. It has an "infant class" department and other conveniences.

Why does the RECORDER seem to be so much "agin" the young people's movement? If it is of men it will come to naught. If it is a part of the process of God for the enlargement of his work through the training of his people, a seeming opposition is, to say the least of it, unfortunate.

Fraternally, H. A. BROWN.

[Bro. Brown, an immense amount of harm may be done before it comes to naught. We know you do not really approve the policy of waiting for evils to wear themselves out. We are heartily in favor of young people's work in the control of the churches; but we are doing what we can to keep them from getting beyond the churches into an uncertain national or sectional union, because we think it is uncalled for, useless and dangerous.—ED. RECORDER]

Full and Satisfactory Defence.

"Doom Eternal" by Reimensnyder is a full and most satisfactory defence of the Bible and church doctrine of everlasting punishment. Spurgeon said of it: "For clear, solid reasoning, we hardly know its equal on this tremendous theme."

The Sabbath—No. 3.

BY REV. JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

TESTIMONY OF EARLY CHRISTIAN LITERATURE.

In the present article I aim to show that the practice of the churches immediately succeeding the days of the Apostles was to observe the first day of the week as the day of worship instead of the seventh day. I shall show this by citations from well known writings and writers of the early days of Christianity. These writings and writers have no religious authority, but are of great historical value, for they tell us of the doctrines and practices of the churches in their times. Hence, they may be appealed to as corroborative evidence on questions of a historical character.

These citations are taken from "Ray's Doctrinal Magazine—Seventh Day Adventism," Vol. I, No. 2, St. Louis, Mo., and from the tract by Rev. A. Rauschenbush, "Saturday or Sunday: which should we observe?" published by American Tract Society, New York.

Ignatius, the Bishop of Antioch, who was martyred about the year A. D. 115, a friend of Polycarp, who was a friend of John the Apostle, writes thus in his letter to the Magnesians: "Those who, having been brought up in the ancient order of things, have come to the possession of a new hope, no longer observe the Sabbath, but live in the observance of the Lord' day, on which also our life has sprung again by him and by his death." Again, he says in the same letter: "Let every friend of Christ keep the Lord's day as a festival, the resurrection day, the queen and chief of days."

The next testimony to which I call your attention is found in the "Didache, or the Teaching of the Twelve Apostles." It is said by some to have been written as early as A. D. 100 by others, about A. D. 150. It says: "On the Lord's day, ye disciples of the Lord come together and break bread, and give thanks, having before confessed your transgressions, that your sacrifice may be pure." Dr. Philip Schaff says, as quoted by Ed. D. B. Ray: "The Didache gives us the first post apostolic testimony for Sunday as a day for public worship."

The Epistle, known as the "Epistle of Barnabas, undoubtedly a very ancient Christian writing, in chap. 15: 9, contains the following: "For which cause we observe the eighth day with gladness in which Jesus rose from the dead; and having manifested himself unto his disciples he ascended into heaven." The date of the letter is given as from A. D. 96—137.

Justin Martyr, one of the most trustworthy of the early Christian writers, who was beheaded at Rome about A. D. 163 gives a full account of Sunday observance in his defence of Christianity addressed to Antoninus Pius, the Emperor. He says: "And on the day called Sunday all who live in the cities or in the country gather together to one place, and the memoirs of the Apostles and the writings of the prophets are read as long as time permits; then after the reader has ceased, the president verbally instructs and exhorts to the imitation of these good things. After this we all rise together and pray." Then follows a description of the Lord's supper, afterward the account continues: "Sunday is the day on which we all hold our common assembly, because it is the first day on which the Lord, having transformed the darkness and matter, made the world, and because Jesus Christ our Saviour on the same day rose from the dead." Prof. Rauschenbush pertinently remarks after the above quotation: "We ask now, can it be more clearly and distinctly stated than is done here that Sunday was from the earliest times the day consecrated by Christians to divine service? And this statement is made at a time when many were still living who had known the Apostles personally and the testimony is given us by one of the most venerable of the martyrs of Christ."

Just here the testimony of the younger Pliny, himself a heathen, a Roman official and an eminent writer, comes in to corroborate that of the Christian writings referred to. I quote from Prof. Rauschenbush: "In A. D, 109 he was sent by the emperor as governor of Bithynia in Asia Minor. He found many Christians there, and in accordance with the existing laws considered it his duty to persecute them. In a letter to Trajan, still extant, he reports that he had taken great pains to inform himself concerning the crimes charged against the Christians, but that he had discovered nothing except that they were accustomed to assemble on a stated day before sunrise, when they would sing a hymn to the praise of their God, Christ, and pledge themselves to commit no theft, robbery, or adultery, not to break their given word, and to defraud no one of goods entrusted to their care. Upon this they would disperse, and in the evening they would assemble again to a simple and innocent meal. In this touching description of the worship of the early Christians, especially touching because coming from one of their persecutors, this circumstance is very noteworthy, that they held their meetings before sunrise. If they had celebrated Saturday, or the Jewish Sabbath, they would probably have met first in the evening."

Clement of Alexandria who lived from A. D. 153—220, in one of his writings ("Stromata" 7: 12), says, in speaking of a spiritually-minded man: "He fulfils the command of the gospel and observes the Lord's day in order that he may put away evil disposition and receive a spiritual one, glorifying the resurrection of the Lord, which occurred on that day."

Tertullian, who was a contemporary of Clement of Alexandria and one of the most learned of the Latin fathers, in speaking on this subject, says: "We have nothing to do with Sabbaths or other Jewish festivals, much less with those of the heathen. We have our own solemnities, the Lord's day, for instance, and Pentecost. As the heathen confine themselves to their festivals and do not observe ours, let us confine ourselves to ours, and not meddle with those belonging to them." Eusebius, in his history, tells us that Dionysius, the Bishop of Corinth A. D. 170, in a letter to the church at Rome, said: "To-day we kept the Lord's Holy Day in which we read your letter."

I might quote from several other well-known "early fathers" to show that the day observed by the post-Apostolic churches was the Lord's day, and not the Jewish Sabbath, but I deem the above sufficient testimony on that point.

Sabbatarians would urge that the observance of Sunday was introduced by the Emperor Constantine; but long before Constantine, the day was observed as the day of worship in Christian churches. What Constantine did do was to forbid the holding of courts and the performance of ordinary labor in cities on "the venerable day of the sun"; and permitted the emancipation of slaves on that day. He recognized the day and removed sources of disturbance, thus favoring the quiet necessary for worship.

We have thus seen that in the post-Apostolic churches the day observed for worship was the first day of the week, called by way of eminence the Lord's day, and that the reason given for its observance was that it was the day of our Lord's resurrection.

All this testimony, coming as it does from uninspired men, possesses no other weight with us than that of corroborative historical evidence as to the New Testament teaching concerning the Lord's day. With two quotations from Prof. Rauschenbush's tract, from which I have already in this article so freely drawn, I will close this discussion of the Sabbath question, referring all who would find a thorough treatment of this subject in every detail to the writings of Prof. Rauschenbush and Elder D. B. Ray.

"This universal celebration of Sunday in the Apostolic age is entirely inexplicable if it was not in accordance with Apostolic appointment. And the Apostles would not have appointed it if the Lord Jesus had not instructed them to do so."

"The early celebration of Sunday is still further confirmed by the practice of the post-Apostolic churches. The churches of the second century after Christ all observed the first day of the week as the day of the Lord and the day of meeting for divine worship. Early church history does not mention the case of a single party or even a single man that declared it to be the duty of Christians to celebrate Saturday to the exclusion of Sunday. While so great diversity of opinion prevailed in the early churches concerning other doctrines and practices, yet as regards the observance of Sunday there was complete agreement. The conclusion seems therefore sufficiently warrantable that Christ must have enjoined upon the Apostles the celebration of the first day of the week as the memorial day of his resurrection, and that the Apostles must unanimously have introduced this observance in the early churches; otherwise in this important matter all Christian antiquity could not have been so entirely of one mind"; especially, let me add, when the founders of these early churches were themselves Jews, and shewed in their writings a strong Jewish bias.

Shying for the Fence.

One of our ablest divines and also a level-headed man said to us the other day, "Some of you newspaper men are likely to run this B. Y. P. U. sentiment in the ground and thus do harm to the church itself, for there are other things besides societies in our church work to look after." We take our part of that remark and will try to be prudent about this movement, and yet we believe our young people are going to do well. —Atlantic Baptist.

EXPELLED

—every poison and impurity from your blood with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Rheumatism has its origin in a poisoned condition of the blood and is always relieved by this remedy, which acts on liver, kidneys and blood. Dyspepsia and stomach troubles are most often the result of a diseased liver. Rouse the torpid liver to action with the "Discovery."

J. S. LINT, ESQ.

I feel a great deal better than I did before taking your "Golden Medical Discovery" for my rheumatism, and it does all that it is recommended to do. I have a daughter who was troubled with a weak stomach so that she vomited everything that she ate and the "Discovery" cured her also, which I am thankful for. Yours truly, JOHN S. LINT. Alvarado, Steuben Co., Ind.

Wanted.

Do you want to start the New Year in a good position that will pay you well provided you are a good salesman and collector?

We want live, energetic men to canvass, sell machines and collect. If there is an agent located in your community we can locate you elsewhere in a good section. We furnish a nice light-running wagon, agent to furnish horse and harness and make a $500 bond. We offer a good salary, or commission contract, one under which a live, energetic hustling man can make and save money. Men of character and good make-up do well to secure work with the Company, for if successful and the business entrusted is handled honorably, they will be promoted to more responsible positions of trust and responsibility, with increased compensation. TO THE YOUNG FACE

Pozzoni's Complexion Powder gives freshest charm, to the old renewed youth. Try it.

Only One Tried and He Failed.

We have been asked about that proposition concerning the meaning of the Greek work baptizo. Several years ago a wealthy Baptist offered through the Western Recorder a reward of $1,000 to any one who would produce a passage in the Greek of either the classic or the New Testament period where baptizo means sprinkle or pour. The only passage produced was from Origen who lived hundreds of years after the New Testament period, and the man who offered the passage did not dare to translate the baptizo in it by sprinkle or pour. There is no passage in Greek where the word has any such meaning.

Dr. Mell once challenged Dr. Summers, a distinguished Methodist divine, to produce a single passage in all ancient Greek literature where the word baptizo meant other than immerse or submerge, and the passage was not produced. If this scholarship is not "obsolete" with our esteemed contemporary, the N. C. Christian Advocate, perhaps it will point out the passage called for. We await to see.

SOUND FOR ONCE—"There is no greater folly, to call it by no severer name, than for a Methodist preacher to argue against immersion, hold it up to ridicule, and then practice it."—Arkansas Methodist.

Mothers

have never found a preparation so well adapted to the needs of thin, delicate children, as Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites.

Children almost universally like the taste of it, which makes its administration easy, and it supplies their blood with the food properties that overcome wasting tendencies.

Scott's Emulsion enriches the blood, promotes the making of healthy flesh, and aids in a healthy formation of the bones.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute.

Woman's Missionary Department.

President Woman's Central Committee of North Carolina, Miss FANNIE E. HECK, Raleigh, N. C.; Secretary, Mrs. J. A. BURGESS, Raleigh, N. C.

SUBJECT FOR MARCH: AFRICA.

Two new narrative leaflets, telling of the work of the Home Board, have been published and will be sent free on application to Miss Fannie E. Heck, Raleigh, N. C.

A Startled Leader.

"I was almost startled," said a missionary society president the other day, "when I began looking up the promises for Africa to arrange a short Bible reading for our March meeting. I had no idea there were so many."

Said a member of a society after hearing such a reading, "Really, don't you think Africa has almost more than her share of promises?"

Here are a few of them: Ps. 68: 31; Ps. 87: 4; Isa. 19: 21, 23; Isa. 19: 25; Isa. 45: 14, and 23, 33; Zep. 3: 9, 10; Isa. 27: 13.

Surely, mission prospects in this land are "bright as the promises of God."

PROMISE AND FULFILMENT.

And now the dawn of the fulfilment of prophesy has begun, and present sight joins hands with unseen hope to strengthen our work and prayers for Africa. Within the last fifty years the Dark Continent has been brightened by the search-light of a hundred explorers; the continent has been practically taken by the governments of Europe; the "backbone of the slave trade" is forever broken; ever growing good government and peace is assured; the Scriptures have been translated into 66 of the 153 African dialects; church members number over 80,000, and adherents 400,000.

THE RUM QUESTION.

Surely, "our adversary the devil" could not let such work as this go on without a gigantic effort to hinder its progress. So we see the rum trade pouring out its fiery gallons of destruction upon Africa, and, shame to say, Boston leading in the shipments of the liquid death.

For every missionary to Africa there goes 70,000 gallons of rum to counteract his work.

New Societies.

1. W. M. S., Forestville, Central Association. President, Mrs. E. O. Dunn; Secretary, Mrs. J. L. Allen, Forestville. Organized Jan. 17th, 1895. Members, 14.

5. W. M. S., South Wadesboro Chapel, Pee Dee Association. President, Miss Minnie Webb; Secretary, Miss Lillie Cox, Wadesboro. Organized Feb. 24th. Members, 8.

A Loss.

The woman's mission work has sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. Liles of Morven. She was called suddenly from earth to heaven, but was ready for the change. Her daughter, Miss Alice Liles, Secretary of the W. M. S. at Morven, with all her bereaved family and friends, have our sincere sympathy.

Tribute of Respect.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Needham M. Norris; be it therefore Resolved 1. That in her death our Society sustained a great loss in her prayers, sympathy and support; yet we calmly submit and recognize in it the will of an Allwise Providence.

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy, and that a copy of this be sent to the family; also to the RECORDER, and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Society.

By order of the Ladies' Missionary Society of Holly Spring Baptist church, Holly Spring, N. C. MRS. H. W. NORRIS.

African Hair Dressing.

Concerning the Bulc people of West Africa, we are told: "Both men and women take great pains with their hair, doing it up in the strangest and dirtiest way conceivable. A common style is to build it, with the aid of strips of bamboo, into three hard ridges several inches high, running from the front to the back of the head. Each ridge is mounted with a close row of common white shirt buttons. Sometimes a card containing as many as six dozen is sewed on above each ear. The ridges of hair do not always run fore and aft. They are often in circles built up like a story cake, and iced with buttons. Sometimes a kind of splashboard is built out behind, running from ear to ear, to hold more buttons. The hair once arranged remains undisturbed for several months. It forms a convenient place for wiping their hands or knives. After dressing it, grease is smeared over, which in the sun melts into the hair, some of it usually through and running down the back. The women, moreover, wear a strip of monkey-skin or goat-skin an inch wide, trimmed with buttons, of course, across the middle of the forehead. And besides all this, they have bangs all around the head consisting of loose hair strung with beads of all colors. With this glittering head-gear and with brass and beads hung over the whole body, they make an appearance altogether unique in this world."—Missionary Review.

Weather of the West Coast and Some of the Birds.

We do not have winter, properly so-called—the dry season is our cool season. It begins about the middle of May, and the rainy season begins about the middle of September. We do not generally call the dry season winter, yet sometimes we speak of it as such, for the pleasure it gives us to use the word. We never have frost. The grass and foliage look rather brown and dusty by August time, and we welcome gladly the spring rains in September.

There are more birds here than I can describe. We have the plover, the turtle-dove, the weaver-bird, and a little creature that sings like the robin, but does not look like it. Several kinds of birds fish in the streams here. There are parrots and two varieties of black crows with white collars, come up here from the Congo. There are also many pretty gray birds with red tails. —Phœbe C. Ogden, Africa, in Over Sea and Land.

African Funerals.

Writing from Unangu, Mr. Joseph Williams says: "Funerals are very lively affairs here among the natives. The procession to the grave is generally headed by a man bearing a white or a red flag, who runs along before the body. Then comes a woman with a basket of flowers, to be laid on the grave after the interment. A large number of people usually follow the body to the grave, which is always dug after the corpse has reached the spot chosen for its resting-place. A drum is beaten on the way, and people sing and dance, and sometimes the body itself is pushed along at a rollicking pace. When the grave is dug, and the requisite depth has been reached, a place is dug in the side of the grave in which to place the body; sticks are placed across, and then the earth is thrown in. The divining rod is nearly always consulted after every death, and somebody accused of having caused it, who is made to pay damages to the relatives. Even after the death of a cow or a goat they sometimes consult the diviner."

The Baptist Missionary Magazine says: "Some young Christians in our West African Mission are examples in the matter of benevolence. The two from the infant Church who are going out as evangelists support themselves in part by their own earnings, and it is expected that by next year one or more young men will be supported in this form of service by the Church, which is not a year old. Some members give nearly one fourth of their earnings, besides doing something for their parents and friends."

In Uganda, a field entered only a few years since, so rapid and widespread is the enlargement of the work that already 100 native laborers are in the field, all supported by native contributions. And the plan is to secure as many more, and then let each company alternate between three months of evangelizing work and three months of study.

Death of a Methodist Hen.

Died, December 30, 1894, at the home of her owner, Miss Willie A. Parrish, near Cunningham church, Fluvanna county, Va., an old Methodist hen, aged eight years and nine months. When but a chick, she was set apart to work for the Lord. Her yearly proceeds (from the sale of eggs and chicks) upon an average were four dollars; this was used to pay pastor, Sunday-school and missionary collections. Old Mammy (for that was her name) was small; her feathers were pure white; she was a good and industrious hen; she would take her little chicks away from the house early in the morning, and would not return until night. "Well done, good and faithful hen!"—Cor. Richmond Christian Advocate.

A New One.

The Rev. A. H. Byles of England, the leader of the P. S. A. "movement," has arrived in this country, and he is to start the "movement" and "organize" it in this country. The papers will soon have a great deal to say on the subject. The Outlook (New York) advocates the "movement" very strongly. Question: How many "movements" can poor human nature have on hand at once? We have so many now moving at us that we would really like to know how many can find room at the same time. What is the P. S. A. "movement"? It is the Pleasant Sunday Afternoon movement, and it contemplates establishing local societies, a general convention and an organ.—Western Recorder. Surely some of our advanced brethren will have a Southern P. S. A.

Hath any wronged thee! be bravely revenged; slight it, and the work's begun; forgive, 'tis finished; he is below himself that is not above an injury.—Quarles.

The New Woman.

The "new woman" is not an alarming symptom. We saw her the other day—a raw-boned, vinegar-visaged, spectacled anatomy astride of a wheel in hot pursuit of a new theory—and we were comforted: there are not enough freaks of nature in the blessed sex to form a mob of serious proportions. Moreover, she is a creature without a sphere. If there is a place in this wide world which she can glorify, we have not found it. Nor has she found it. She roams restlessly around the race tracks, mixes with men in public places and feverishly bicycles the country seeking rest and finding none. She is a stock of novelties manufactured to meet a supposed demand, and about to be shipped back to the factory because found unsalable at any price. The "new woman" is only a fad in bloomers. A fad bursts as a bubble or shrivels to a shrimp. This fad will probably shrivel.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

You Are Right.

The "craze" of this age is for novelty. Nothing takes so well as something new. Many a plan is tried, to end only in failure, simply because it is new. New men and new methods is the cry, while generally the old is better than the new. While we admire a spirit of inquiry and of progress, we feel that it may properly be said of methods as well as of words:

"Be not the first by whom the new is tried,
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

—Christian Index.

There is much land that is no longer fertile enough to pay for cultivation that will pay better in properly planted forest trees than in anything else. There is a first cost in getting the stock and setting it out; but after a few years the trees will need thinning, and if of the right kind of trees, sprouts will come up without any cost or trouble to the owner. The trees should be in rows so that cultivation can go on until their shade and fallen leaves mulch the surface and prevent the growth of grass and weeds. In a small way this may serve to occupy the land owner's leisure time and improve the appearance of his homestead.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE COST OF AN EDUCATION

"Education is an ornament in prosperity, a refuge in adversity"

The Parent's Discussion

Husband—"My, dear, our boy Robert graduates from the public shools very soon, you know. Have you thought what he had best do then?"

Wife—"Well, John, I'd like ever so much to send him to college, if you think we could afford it."

Husband—"I'm afraid that is out of the question, my dear. Do you know that it would cost us at the very least $800 a year for him at any good college?"

Wife—"Goodness! As much as that? Of course we can't send him. But I do want to give him a good start in the world, and I don't think a public school education is enough to equip him for the battle of life."

Husband—"No it is not, today, when education is so general. Now, I've been thinking of an advertisement I saw in The Charlotte Observer the other day, and that is why I brought up the subject to-night that most young persons stumble into business, are thrown into it by accident or temporary necessity, or are drawn into it by misguided ambition or a perverted fancy, without any serious thought as to their fitness for it. When the years for learning the theory and practice of their trade or profession are passed they often awake with regret and dismay to the fact that they have not only made a mistake in their selection, but have wasted the precious years of early manhood upon a wrong pursuit.

"Now, the chief thing for our boy's success in life is not edusation as much as proper education—that is, education along the line of his natural bent. It's a year or two before he graduates. I'm going to give him an opportunity of doing a little study at home during this time. I was looking at the Encyclopaedia Britannica at The Observer Reading Room today, and it's really a great thing. With these books in the house, Robert will have information upon every possible subject at his hand, and it is the most reliable information in the world. Whatever he can find proper development for it in this Encyclopaedia, whether it's the law, mechanics, engineering, literature, or any of the arts and sciences. I think when he is ready to graduate we will all have made up our minds what he is best fitted for by his use of these books. Besides, there he will find the life stories of all the great men of the past, and he will know of their efforts, their struggles and their successes, and he may have a better and more serious view of life. These books have in them all the instruction he can get in a college education. Honestly, The Observer has given a great opportunity. Now, my dear, what do you think of my scheme?"

Wife—"It's just splendid, John; but what will the books cost?"

Husband—"Why that is the most surprising part of it. We can get them for ten cents a day, just think of it!"

Half Price to Ministers!

Sermons, Addresses and Reminiscences,

BY

Rev. THOS. E. SKINNER, D. D.

In order that every minister in North Carolina may have an opportunity to place this valuable and interesting book in his library, and for the purpose of introducing it, we offer it to ministers, by mail, postpaid, for sixty five cents (65).

Fifty cents for the book and fifteen cents for postage.

The book contains 450 pages of clear print, on good paper, and is handsomely bound in cloth. The regular price of the book is $1.15, by mail, and is considered very cheap at that.

Our offer to ministers is to send the book by mail for 65 cents. We shall keep this offer open for a limited time. If you want the book, send your order at once. Address,

Read What is Said of the Book.

Dr. Charles E. Taylor says: "A most valuable contribution to the religious literature of North Carolina. If the book shall have the wide circulation which it deserves, I believe it will be used of God for the awakening and conversion of very many."

Dr. J. B Gambrell, President of Mercer University, Georgia, has the following to say in "The Index": "The whole book is juicy, soulful and helpful toward a wider range of things and a better spiritual life. It is a good Sunday book. The Sermons deal with matters of life and death, and the Addresses touch on many practical topics, while the Reminiscences, especially of the author's conversion and spiritual life, are rich with a heavenly flavor."

"Every pastor, and especially every young Baptist preacher in North Carolina, ought to have a copy of Dr. Skinner's book. If I had the means it would be a great pleasure to me to send a copy of it to every young preacher in the State."—C. Durham.

NEWS SUMMARY.

North Carolina.

Produce dealers of Lexington have been shipping to a firm in Washington—Davis, Hill & Co.—which they find is a fraud.——President Winston has been given two big receptions by the University students, who regard him as the institution's saviour, and call the late General Assembly "Waterloo." A fine Y. M. C. A. building will be built at the University.——The jail and other buildings at Kinston were destroyed the 19th inst.; this is the third fire, the total loss by the three being $300,000.——Gold is being unusually successfully mined near Pineville.——Several weeks ago, an aged couple were robbed of $3,000 in their home in Union county. Lawyer Covington was engaged to work up the matter. He employed a detective agency. The latter went to work and found about $2,000, having arrested one of the robbers. The old couple got only $900 back; the lawyer got nothing, the agency taking the balance. The lawyer will sue the agency.——A $50,000 courthouse will be built at Charlotte.——A handsome monument to the Confederates was unveiled at Smithfield the 20th.——The Legislature left a committee at Raleigh to investigate charges made by Mrs. P. D B. Arrington against our courts and her husband. Two members of the committee were drunk several days, the other has done unmanly things. The committee has closed its sittings, and it ought not to meet again. It is not composed of men capable of saying what is right or wrong.——W. C. Dowd has bought the Charlotte News.——Minister Ransom will depart Friday for Mexico. Hon. W. R Henry wrote an interesting public letter to him in the Henderson Gold Leaf.——A Presbyterian orphanage is being built at Charlotte.——A 20 000 spindle mill will be built near Henrietta.——Dr. Guerrant, Presbyterian, has been holding very successful meetings in Winston and Greensboro.——A Christian Endeavor Convention will be held at Winston, April 26.——One of the biggest single North Carolina gold finds of recent years occurred in Stanly county last week.——A splendid National Government building is being built at Newbern.——Hon. Josiah Turner has been awarded $4,020 26 by a committee appointed by the late Legislature to investigate his claims.

In General.

The Mexican-Guatamala troubles have been bridged over, and there will be no war.——The insurrection in Cuba was the occasion of trouble between Spain and this country, but it will be amicably settled. British interference in Venezuela also threatens to give international trouble.——The Hawaiian government has been informed that its representative at Washington is disagreeable.——The State of Massachusetts sent a committee south to examine our mills; among them was a negro, who behaved himself becomingly until he reached Richmond, returning. There he got into a reception and lunch given at the Governor's mansion before the Governor knew it. The newspapers have contained many reports of the affair.——Several men were killed at New Orleans in labor troubles the last ten days.——Two hundred Negroes left Savannah, Ga., for Liberia last week.——The Pope's edict against secret orders has been suspended, so far as Knights of Pythias are concerned.——A cotton growers' association has been organized at Atlanta.——The bill to establish the old whipping post law in New York was defeated. We need one badly in North Carolina.——The English ministry will resign in a few weeks Rosebery will retire.

Judas Not at the Lord's Supper.

In the RECORDER of the 13th inst. I read with much interest Dr. T. H. Pritchard's sermon on Christian Union. Dr. Pritchard has a happy faculty for making things pleasant, and he performed the delicate task admirably. Let us hope that his mixed congregation went away enlightened.

Our revered brother, though, will pardon me for calling his attention to what evidently to me is a "slip" as to one matter of fact.

In alluding to the first Lord's Supper—the occasion of instituting it—he asks, "Why was Judas there?" clearly implying that he was there.

Judas was not at the first Lord's Supper. I will not now trouble to go into minute details by citing the express words of the evangelists touching this matter. The error is plainly seen if we look at the facts in the record by the four evangelists.

1. There were two suppers, the passover and the Lord's Supper.

2. They assembled to eat the passover, and ate this first. It was during this service that the Lord arose, girded himself, and washed the disciples' feet, Judas' included. This done he returned to finish eating the passover.

3 While eating the passover, he gave Judas the "sop." The Lord's Supper has no "sop" in it.

4. Judas, "having received the sop, went immediately out." John 13: 30.

5. Christ then institutes the Lord's Supper, taking "bread" and the "cup" in order. If Judas returned to eat the Lord's Supper, the fact was overlooked by the inspired writers. He had gone out and doubtless at the time when Jesus was instituting this most solemn memorial, Judas was driving a trade with the Lord's enemies to betray him. He was not at the last Supper.

Many doubtless think the Philipian jailer was baptized in his house. Just a little careful reading of the text will satisfy any candid seeker after truth that he was not in his house when baptized; for the first recorded act of his after baptism was to take Paul and Silas into his house. One cannot go into a house unless he be first outside. But says one, "What difference does it make if Judas did or did not eat the Lord's Supper?" I answer first, the truth in any matter, however trivial, is the best, is good enough.

And again, what we call small errors often prove in the end very destructive. I remember hearing a Methodist brother invite unconverted persons (penitents) to the Supper. He said Judas partook of it, and he was not converted.

A small wedge opens the way for a larger one. I repeat I enjoyed the sermon and hope that good will come of it.

From the Pollocksville Field.

Dear Recorder:—It was with an aching heart that I left the dear old county of Columbus to take up the work here. My field consists of Pollocksville, Maysville, Piny Grove, Trenton and Fort Barnwell churches, all of which are in Jones county, except Fort Barnwell, which is in Craven county.

The people have done exceedingly well here in this eastern section, especially in this field. They have good, nice, well finished houses of worship, also a nice, comfortable parsonage in which we live.

I expect to hold a meeting of days here, beginning first Sunday in April, assisted by Rev. S. J. Porter of Morehead City.

Still Another Orphan's Friend Mistake.

Editor Recorder:—I see that the Orphan's Friend, in its issue of Feb 15th, made the proper correction in regard to the different orphan homes of the State not taking in any children but those of their own faith.

I hope they will not make any more mistakes on that line.

But it seems that the editor of the Orphan's Friend is given to making mistakes. He recently said that the Oxford Asylum is denominational; now when called upon, he says it is not.

He asked the following question in regard to the town which has six children at the Orphanage at Thomasville: "Wonder if this town contributes sufficient to feed and clothe half of this number in the course of a year?" Evidently he refers to Scotland Neck, and I can answer his question. It supports not only one half the number, but the whole number of children sent from here.

And here I would say that if the State will withdraw aid to Oxford, it will be a blessing to the different churches and Sunday-schools of the State. Then when a community or church would send off a child, it would not depend upon State aid to support it.

Why is it that the Oxford Asylum gets $10 000 a year for doing the same work, at about twice the cost, with other institutions of the kind?
